SPORTING MISCELLANEOUS.

NEW METHOD OF REARING GAME.—As Richard Miles, gamekeeper to Mr. Smith, and a party of London gentlemen, who have hired the shooting over Mr. Arnold's land, at Harsted, and Mr. Chamber's, of Goldencliff, was going his rounds, he came upon a partridge's nest containing nine eggs; and supposing, from what occurred, that the old bird would forsake the nest, he placed the eggs in his hat, with the intention, as soon as he got home, to put them under a hen. He fancied as he was going along that he felt them stirring, and taking his hat off, found that eight young birds had burst the shells, which he took home with him, and they are now alive and thriving.

A SPORTING EWE.—While some shepherds in the high-lands of Banffshire were lately gathering their sheep from the more retired parts of their pastures, for the purpose of clipping them, they were surprised by observing a ewe descending a hill with great speed, and apparently in pursuit of some beast. They were not kept long in suspense, when the sheep with some difficulty captured the object of her pursuit, a well-grown grouse; but, not being so well accustomed to securing her victim as the canine species, it escaped from her. However, not satisfied at losing her anticipated repast, she set off again in pursuit, and, after coursing for some time, again seized the poor creature, devoured it greedily, feathers and all, and was seemingly much satisfied with her illicit prize. It is very probable, says our correspondent, that she had been in the habit of killing such game previous to this, but how she could disgrace the innocent character for which her kind get credit is left for naturalists to determine.

GROUSE.—We are assured by a veteran sportsman that the Bradfield moors are stocked with game to an extent that exceeds anything within the remembrance of the oldest frequenter of that preserve, and that the Howden moors and the preserves of the Duke of Rutland are equally well stocked. The crop of the present year certainly presents the greatest possible contrast to the disastrous season of 1853. The birds are said to be strong and well-grown, although it wants five weeks to the end of the shooting season.—Sheffield Times.

GOOD NEWS FOR THE SPORTSMAN.—Cub hunting in the "Old Berkshire" county will soon commence, and unless the young hounds tangle rather freely of the blood of the cubs, it is thought that foxes will be more numerous than is consistent with first rate sport. Not only are the coverts situated in the Old Berkshire Hunt plentifully stocked, but those also of South Oxfordshire, Lord Redesdale's, and Mr. Drake's, abound with foxes.

The lovers of "my dog and my gun" are very sanguine of getting plenty of sport in September. Hares are, we understand, plentiful, and birds unusually numerous and strong on the wing. In the neighbourhood of Oxford, the coveys are not only not scarce, but are very large, some containing from 16 to 21 birds each.

WARMINSTER.—There are above sixty men employed in and about the mansion of the most noble the Marquis of Bath, which is being fitted up in a style of magnificence. The game is being preserved with great care in his Lordship's grounds, and from these indications it is hoped and expected that he will soon grace the noble structure with his presence, and make it his principal home.

SINGULAR DISCOVERY.—While the clerks in the parcel's office at the Central Railway Station were engaged a few days ago in turning over some luggage, they found a small dog in a gentleman's boot; immediately after, on pulling out a piece of canvas wrapped to make a bed for it, the discovered a hedgehog's nest,—the dam and seven young ones, the latter evidently not more than a day old. It is difficult to say how the hedgehog found her way into the parcels office.—Carlisle Patriot.

PLUMPTON POAL SHOW.

The second annual show was held in Plumpton Park on Monday week. The competition was open for yearlings and sucking foals, by any of the following horses, the property of Thomas Groves, Esq., of Plumpton Hall, viz., Roland, Black Dwarf, The Flying Buck, and King of Trumps. The following prizes were awarded, the first in each class being a silver medal:—

Class 2—For the best yearling filly by Roland, 1, Mr. Wm. Walker, Goldsboro'; 2, Mr. Benjamin Dawson, Aberford; 3, Mr. Hare, Barraby.

Class 3—For the best colt foal by Roland, 1, Mr. Hare, Barraby Grange; 2, 3, Mr. Whin, Havery Park.

Class 4—For the best filly foal by Roland, 1, Mr. Thomas Hill, Wetherby; 2, Mr. Benjamin Dawson, Aberford; 3, Thomas Bentley, Esq., Pannal Hall.

TURFIANA.

KIRKALDY RACES.—These races, which usually take place next month, have been given up. We hope, however, that those gentlemen who took the management, will get for a substitute gymnastic games, a sort of amusement and recreation much wanted in this locality.

CHATHAM RACES.—Active preparations are still making for forthcoming meeting in September. The names of Captain Leicester Vernon, M.P., and W. Lea, Esq., M.P., are announced as the stewards. The subscription still remains open at Mr. Windeyer's library, Chatham, where subscribers' names are received.

RACING SWEETS IN THE PROVINCES.—Notwithstanding the very stringent measures introduced by Lord Palmerston into the House of Commons for the suppression of betting-houses and sweeps; and which measure was adopted by the Legislature, there has been a great deal of business done in sweeps in the sporting public-houses in the provinces, especially in Newcastle and other towns in the north of England. In consequence of information received at the Home-Office, Lord Palmerston has written to the magistrates in Newcastle, pointing out the importance of the police immediately suppressing these sweeps.

For the Wilton Cup, Redcliffe, Cleveland should have been omitted in the list of acceptances.

Lord Lonsdale and General Peel have accepted the stewardship of next year's Goodwood races.

Nancy was struck out of all her engagements in Mr. S. Walker's name on the 31st July, at 2.30 p.m.; out at North Staffordshire and Reading on the 1st August at 9 a.m.

Mentmore Lass out of all her engagements on the 1st August, at 7.30 p.m.

It has been reported that advantage will be taken of the presence of the military to revive the Haldon races this year.

SUDDEN DEATH OF THOMAS ABBOTT, THE STEEPCHASE JOCKEY.—The sudden demise of Mr. Thomas Abbott, at the residence of his father in Wicklow-street, has cast a deep gloom over the sporting world. Mr. Abbott was well-known, both in this country and in England. His death took place about eight o'clock yesterday. He had been in apparent good health and spirits on the day previous. Organic disease of the heart of some standing has been the cause of the sad event, which would seem to have been precipitated by the sudden rupture of a large blood-vessel, or by some other fatal interruption to the functions of the heart. The highest medical and surgical aid was promptly called in, but unhappily without avail. There is not one amongst the numerous circle of friends and acquaintances who have had the opportunity of knowing and appreciating his many acts of noble disinterestedness and generous friendship, who must not feel deep and poignant regret at the sad news of the sudden and unexpected death of Mr. Thomas Abbott. He was much esteemed in sporting circles, and was generally considered to be a most intrepid and judicious rider. His last mount in public was for the Kilroe Cup, 1854, which race he won with Mr. Dunne's Jumpaway (first called Quickstep). He also won in his day the Liverpool Grand National Steeple-chase with Abd-el-Kader, the Cheltenham Grand Annual with Farnham besides the Kilroe Cup three times, and many other important events.

THE GALWAY RACES, which come off over the Kilnalla course on Tuesday and Wednesday next, are expected to eclipse by far any meeting that has taken place in the far west for a long time. We are happy to add that the colonel and officers of the 92nd Highlanders, and also the Midland Great Western Railway Company have subscribed most liberally to the funds.

LONDON MODEL YACHT CLUB.

A general meeting was held at Anderson's Hotel, 164, Fleet-street, on Tuesday, August 1st, 1854, when the following gentlemen were balloted for:—Mr. George H. Boulter, Mr. Bernard Luxton, Mr. J. Williams, Mr. J. Lindell, Mr. John Lilley, Mr. George Staley, and Mr. Richard Dunn. All were admitted.

The following motion by the Hon. Secretary was carried:—
"That no protest intended to effect the eligibility of a yacht entered for a club match shall be entertained after the competing yachts have taken their stations; and unless the objector to any particular yacht gives three clear days notice of his objection (in writing), or positive evidence that it was not in his power to do so, such yacht shall be allowed to sail in the match, and her disputed qualification may be afterwards considered by the sailing committee, but no protest shall be admitted. Should any cause for protest arise during a match, rule 15 of the first class sailing regulations must be strictly adhered to, or the protest will not be acknowledged by the president of the match, or entertained by the sailing committee."

"That the word 'two' in fundamental rule be altered to 'five,' in order that the three classes of yachts may be of uniform number for club matches." This motion was lost.

The following entries were made for the match on the Serpentine on the 21st of August, at 2 p.m.

RANELAGH YACHT CLUB.

The first match of the above club for a valuable silver cup took place on Saturday, and was most numerously and fashionably attended, when, after the worthy commodore (who was kindly rowed by four gentlemen of the Halcyon Club in their galley) had, with the assistance of his brother officers, attended to the comforts of the ladies on board the shallops provided by Mr. Greaves for their convenience, the following yachts went to their moorings:—

Yachts.	Tons.	Owners.
Alice	5	E. Guest.
Uala	5	T. B. Diplock.
Topsy	5	J. Adams.
Doubtful	5	A. King.
Wave	4	W. Chaiting.

Many were the speculations as to which would be the fortunate boat, as they were to be sailed and steered by members only. At the signal given by the commodore to prepare, the excitement of the various crews became very apparent, showing that it was the intention of them all to do their best; and as the little fleet lay moored just above Battersea Bridge the effect was very imposing, aided as it was by the gay appearance of the large parties on board shallops and other boats, ready to accompany the race, which extended from Battersea Bridge to a boat off Lord Ranelagh's, below Putney Bridge (twice round). Thousands of spectators lined the shores and took up positions on the two above-named bridges, and at 4.30 the signal was given to start.

The Topsy and Alice were the first boats to swing, but unfortunately the Doubtful not canting so quickly, caused the bowsprit of the Alice to foul her, which gave the Topsy a clear lead, followed by the Alice, Doubtful, Wave, and Uala, which latter had displayed a disposition of anxiety to quit her moorings before her time and had to be towed back. The Topsy was the first to set her topsail, followed by the Alice, who passed her on the weather hand just above Cremorne. Some very pretty sailing now ensued, the manoeuvring displayed by all being very good. Off Wandsworth meadows the Doubtful overhauled the Topsy, but retained that position only for a short distance. The Uala from some unexplained cause lowered her mainsail, but when ultimately she had her "canvas up," she settled to her work. The Alice first rounded at Lord Ranelagh's, then the Topsy, Doubtful, and Uala; and as the tide was still running up very strong, it was a dead heat over it, and as the wind was very light, brought into operation the skill of all to hold their way. They rounded the lower flag buoy the first time as follows:—

	hours	min.	sec.
Alice	5	54	40
Doubtful	5	54	40
Topsy	5	54	40
Wave	5	54	40
Uala	5	54	40

The Alice after this increased her lead throughout, and returned to the starting place at 7 hours 22 min., followed by the Topsy, &c. The Alice then brought up, and surrounded by shallops and other boats, and in presence of a large assemblage on shore, the Commodore presented the cup to Dr. Guest, who responded in becoming terms. "The health of the ladies who had honoured the match with their presence," and other toasts, were done ample justice to in sparkling champagne.

PRINCE OF WALES YACHT CLUB.

THE SQUADRON OF EVOLUTION.—On Friday, the 28th ult., this novel entertainment in river aquatics was afforded the members and friends of the Club off Erith. The programme of the day commenced with two prizes for speed, the yachts being divided into two classes, 8 tons to 5, and 5 tons and under, the course being from a flag-booy off Erith pier round a flag-booy off Purfleet three times. The entries consisted of the Little Mosquito	7 tons	T. Bartlett, Esq.

Albatross	7 tons	A. Berrisford, Esq.
Idas	6 tons	Vice-Com. Kollbs.
Jalla	7 tons	W. Bate, Esq.
Prince of Wales	7 tons	W. Warner, Esq.

2nd Class.

Blue-eyed Maht	4 tons	Com. Tuckwell.
----------------	--------	----------------

The latter vessel, having beaten her competitors so often, found no competitors; not even the Gnat, though flushed with a recent victory over her, in another club, came back again to contest honours with her, consequently she was permitted to sail over the course, and received the prize of her class.

The match was a very exciting one between the other class. The Prince of Wales got well off a-head, but in the midst of her advantage touched the ground, and was thrown out of the match. It was a very pretty contest between the Little Mosquito and the Idas, and ended in the former winning by about two minutes and a-half, which, allowing one minute for tonnage, makes the actual time one minute and a-half.

The match being ended, a gun from the flag-yacht, the Vixen (kindly lent by Commodore Robinson, M.Y.C., for the occasion), the yachts came to anchor near her, and proceeded to exercise by signal from the Vixen, Akers' code being used. The prize of the first class was won by the Idas, the second is yet in abeyance, there being no competition for it. It is believed the Sailing Committee will decide on giving it to the second yacht in the first class.

After the manoeuvres had been completed, the yachtsmen landed and joined a party of 100 ladies and members in the Erith Gardens, which had been specially engaged for the occasion, and partook of a collation, provided by Mr. Maclure, the proprietor; and after dinner, and the prizes had been given to the fortunate winners, and the usual speeches and toasts got over, a ball, à la fresco, to the excellent band of the Royal Sappers and Miners, finished the day's proceedings. At ten o'clock the last polka was succeeded by a brilliant display of fireworks, in which the name of the club appeared in characters of "Greek Fire," and the railway bell then caused a general scamper to the last train, which bore as happy and delighted a freight of yachtsmen and their fair companions to their respective homes as ever trod the decks of the "Mars" or "Gannet."

The next club-match takes place on the 18th inst. The Comet, a larger steamer than usual, has been chartered for the better accommodation of the members and their ladies.

ROYAL LONDON YACHT CLUB.

A meeting of the Sailing Committee was held on Tuesday last, to make the necessary arrangements for the proposed match, for yachts not exceeding 7 tons, C.M. The following resolutions were agreed upon, viz.—That the prize should be 15*l.*, and 5*l.* to the second boat, and that the match should take place on Saturday, the 16th of September; and the course be from Erith down round the flag-booy moored off Rusherville, and back to North Woolwich, starting at 11 o'clock. The yachts are to moor with their own anchors, and weigh them previous to starting, and will also be required to anchor in line, and yachts dragging their anchors, and drifting from their proper stations, will be disqualified. Yachts may enter for the match any time previous to the 6th of September, by addressing a letter to the society, inclosing the usual particulars, and the tonnage dues of 1*s.* per ton, which will be returned to all stating. The measurers will attend at Greenwich on the 9th of September, to measure the yachts entered. The match will be open to all yachts, whether of a royal club or not. No open boats or skiffs will be allowed to sail, or otherwise, by R.L.Y.C. rules.

YARMOUTH ROADS REGATTA.

Following successfully in the wake of Harwich and Lowestoft, the directors of this regatta, which was under the patronage of the Right Hon. Lord Soules, High Steward for the Borough; B. B. Cabbell, Esq., M.P., High Sheriff of Norfolk; the Right Hon. the Earl of Albemarle; the Right Hon. Lord Suffield; Sir E. H. K. Lacon, Bart., M.P.; Sir E. S. Gooch, Bart., M.P.; Sir Fitzroy Kelly, M.P.; C. E. Rumbold, Esq., M.P.; David Waddington, Esq., M.P.; and several of the nobility and gentry now in the town and neighbourhood, put forth a bill of fare on Tuesday last which, for variety and excellence of sport, will go far to make them, in company with the two places above mentioned, formidable rivals to those on the southern coast. The Eastern Counties ran special trains on the occasion, and the town was at an early hour filled with visitors. The day being delightfully fine, and the vessels in the roads being guily decked out with flags, added much to the interest of the day's proceedings. Both the new Wellington and old piers, as in fact every available spot, from which a view of the several matches could be obtained, were crowded with spectators, who appeared to take a very lively interest in the results. The day's amusements commenced with a MATCH for 50*l.* for Yachts of any rig or tonnage belonging to any Royal Yacht Club. Time race, and three to start or no race.

Name.	Tons.	Owner.	Port.
Phantom	27	S. Lane, Esq.	London.
Sheldrake	17	Captain Cox.	London.
Thought	29	G. Coups, Esq.	London.

The signal for preparation having been given, all hands aboard the yachts were watching eagerly for the sound of the starting gun. At about ten minutes past twelve the cannon thundered forth its command, and with the speed of lightning the naked spurs were covered with clouds of snow-white canvas, and the yachts catching the wind, which was however very light, glided gently away. A most interesting match ensued, but it soon became apparent that the Sheldrake stood no chance with her opponents, and she shortly after gave in, leaving "all the honours" to be gained by the Thought or the Phantom, who passed the Committee-boat for the first time in the following order:—

	H. M. S.
Thought	12 55 0
Phantom	12 54 0

The remainder of the match was very gallantly contested, but notwithstanding the great exertions of the crew of the Phantom, she was 2 minutes 48 seconds behind when passing the new Wellington pier, off which the Committee-boat, gallily decorated with flags of all nations, was stationed. The final time was taken as follows:—

	H. M. S.
Thought	2 41 0
Phantom	2 45 5

The Thought was consequently declared the winner by 4 minutes 5 seconds. A protest and counter protest was handed in to the Sailing Committee, but were afterwards withdrawn.

MATCH by Beach Yachts for £30.

Names	Length.	Entered by
Queen Victoria	64	Thomas Gallant
Lelippe	51	W. Bobbett
Royal Standard	50	T. Green
Royal Victoria	61	— Brown

This was a well contested match, and gave the greatest satisfaction. The whole of the vessels exhibited some admirable sailing qualities, but it was clear from the first that the Queen Victoria, which was excellently handled, would prove the victor.

MATCH by Shrimp Cutters for a purse of sovereigns.

Names	Length.	Owners.	Port.

Gipsy Queen	21	Robert Warner	Idito
Thomas and Maria	21	S. Thomas	Idito
Thomas and Susan	22	Thomas Smith	Idito
Welcome Home	24	—	Idito

This match was very prettily contested throughout, but owing to the fact that the whole of the cutters belonged to the port, and that their merits and demerits were generally known, did not excite much interest. The race was ultimately won by the Welcome Home, the Harriet being second.

A very beautiful start was effected at 1 h. 52 m. 56 sec. The Vivid and Mosquito soon signalled themselves out as the fastest, and the race home was very exciting. The following is the time at which the four cutters placed passed the Committee's boats:—

	H. M. S.

MATCH for 30*l.* for Life-boats.

	H. M. S.
Caister life-boat	1
Lowestoft life-boat	2
Helmey life-boat	0
Yarmouth life-boat	0

This match, from the nature of the boats engaged, excited the greatest interest. After the boats had been launched, which was done very quickly and in a style which merited the warmest encomiums of all present, and the sailing match had been completed, the plugs were withdrawn and the boats filled with water, the same as if they had been swamped in a heavy sea. In this manner they had to row and sail, and eagerly was the result watched. The Caister boat, although very substantially built, was the lightest in the water, took the lead at starting, and came in first by several lengths; the Lowestoft boat being second, and the others very close up. We think this a very meritorious feature in this regatta—one worthy of special notice, and one which ought to be carried out to its fullest extent as having a tendency to encourage and promote the efficiency of life-boat crews.

Several sculling matches afterwards took place. At their conclusion the members of the Regatta Committee lined together at the Victoria Hotel, the Mayor of Yarmouth in the chair; and in the evening a grand display of fireworks, and a vocal concert under the able management of Mr. W. Pearce, of London, took place at the Vauxhall Gardens, which were very fully attended.

COTTISHALL GRAND MARINE REGATTA.

The annual match for the beautiful silver cup, of the value of 50*l.*, came off here on Monday, and was beautifully contested. The town was full of visitors, and the excellent bill of fare put forth by the promoters seemed to give the greatest satisfaction. The day's amusement commenced with—

A MATCH for the Silver Cup of the value of 50*l.*

Esmeralda, Mr. Trafford	1
Fairy Queen, Mr. Milton	2
Sylph, Mr. Smith	3
Caledonia, Mr. Gardener	4

A most excellent start was effected, the Esmeralda getting off first; notwithstanding the lightness of the wind, the race excited the greatest interest, and was ultimately won by the Esmeralda, who after starting maintained her leading position throughout.

PAIR-OARED RACE for the Silver Horns.

Messrs. Gardner	1
Mr. Evans and Tibbitts	2
Mr. Stretton and Mr. Bolefield	3

Another boat entered, but refusing to return after a false start, was consequently out of the race. The match was well contested throughout, and was won by a very short distance.

Some minor races ensued, after which, the stewards, including Sir W. Hooker and several other well known gentlemen in the neighbourhood, dined together, Mr. W. Tibbitts taking the chair.

THE ROYAL NORTHERN YACHT-CLUB REGATTA will be held at Larges on the 24 and 25th August, when some valuable cups will be run for.

THE BALTIC.—The faithful little yacht Esmeralda still follows the fortunes of the fleet, towed by the St. Jean d'Acre. There are also two merchant vessels laden with groceries, private speculations from England, which are sure to pay those who have embarked in the enterprise.

The Duke and St. Jean d'Acre are called the crack ships, the latter the ship par excellence. To her stern elings the little Esmeralda with the greatest tenacity; she is now christened "the Little Acre." The Arrogant and Hecla are the lions; Neptune is the smart ship, and Impudens the handsome one.

THREGBOTHAN AND MALPAS REGATTA.—This annual regatta took place on Monday last, when the weather being fine, a large concourse of people attended, and the number of boats on the river presented a very animated and pleasing scene. The wind was about south-east, an excellent breeze, well calculated to test the qualities of the sailing boats, and to give opportunities for skilful management. The amusements commenced with a race between pinnaces, when the "Betty," Scoble, won the first prize; "Seagull," Barley, the second, and the "Blue-eyed Maid," Gunn, the third. The next race was between the second class sailing boats, of which five started, and the competition excited much interest. The boats were: the "Mischief," Scoble; "Two Sisters," Bray; "Criket," Robin; "Amelia," Clyma; and "Maid of Gullan," Sharpe. This match formed a very pretty sight. The "Mischief" and "Amelia" outsailed the others, and a good contest took place between those two boats; the "Amelia" was first at the end of the first round, and ultimately the race ended as follows:—"Mischief," first; "Amelia," second; and "Two Sisters," third, but a long distance behind the other two. The first class sailing boats were the next to the start, and this being the principal sailing match for the day, considerable interest was felt in the result. Four boats started, the "Susan," Hancock; "Active," Wade; "William," Bryant; and the "Breeze," Richards. The "Active" took the lead, and maintained it for nearly over the first round. The "William" then passed her, and was first in around the third mark at Victoria Point; but she did not keep that position long; the "Active" in a few minutes again recovered the first place, and maintained it until by running too close under the wool in Tresillian river she got becalmed, when the "William" again shot ahead, and passing round the mark-boat, first, an easy winner; "Active" coming in second, and "Susan" a bad third. The "Breeze" touched the first mark, and thereby losing all title to a prize she gave in. After this there was an amusing race between lighters, of which six started, and the men in them worked in a very active and earnest manner. The "Ranger," Southard, took the lead, but by making a tack across the river, lost that position, and at last they came in as follows:—"Gryhound," Richards, first; "Ranger" Southard, second; and "Cherry," Snell, third. The following matches were between rowing boats. Seven pair oar and pair paddle punts competed; they made an excellent start and passed the first mark altogether; but after that the contest was between three, "Vengeance," Stephens, coming in first; "Eliza," second; and "Touzer," Pryor, in the third place. The gig race that followed this attracted a great deal of attention. There had been seven gigs entered, but four of them appear to have given up all hopes of winning, knowing the competitors they had to deal with. Only three therefore started, two of which were new gigs, and the other, the "Waterwitch" was the gig that won the prizes at Truro and Falmouth for some time past. The "Waterwitch" then belonged to Messrs Scoble, who, however, had sold her, and built a new gig called the "Water Lily." The match was between the "Water Lily," Scoble; the "Waterwitch," Gunn; and the "Blue-eyed Maid," Stephens. It was a very sharp contest, and was considered to be the fastest race that has ever been seen in the Truro river. The new gig, "Water Lily," Scoble, came in first; "Waterwitch," second; and "Blue-eyed Maid," third. Five two-paddled skiffs next competed, and the race between them was very well contested. It was won by the "All Serene," W. Scoble; "Little Jim," Bennie, being second; and "Black Joke," Nile, third. The regatta was then terminated with a race between ships' boats, the crews of which exerted themselves vigorously, "Haleyon" coming in first; and the "Anchra," of Truro, second. The matches throughout were extremely well contested, and altogether the regatta gave general satisfaction. — Cornwall Gazette.

BERLIN, July 29.—A vessel of the Royal London Yacht Club, name and owner not given, arrived on Sunday at Swinemunde, and created a great sensation from the beauty of her form, the rapidity of her sailing, and the skill with which she was handled by her crew. The yacht was to proceed next day on a cruise to visit the fleet.

REGATTA OF THE NEW YORK YACHT CLUB.

The annual regatta duly came off on Thursday, June 1st, under circumstances more than usually propitious. The weather was brilliant in the extreme—an unclouded sky, with a cool breeze prevailing throughout the day; whilst the company on board the chartered steamer was not only more numerous than on any previous occasion—it was composed of the crème de la crème of beauty and fashion moving in New York social life.

The day, we repeat, was eminently a fine one; and the whole affair as enjoyable as it could possibly be, to those who love smooth water sailing and a breeze that does not startle them from their prophecies. But exactly in proportion to the easy gliding of the vessels through the water, and the pleasant rippling away of the hours with those who looked on from the steamer, is the difficulty of finding anything special to say concerning the match itself. It was too smooth, too straightforward. There was no squall, no carrying away of spars, no reefing; next to nothing even of turning to windward, for the wind was a leading one, both going down to the S. W. Spit and returning, so that only a few weeks tacks were made, in standing over from the flag boat near the Staten Island shore to that on the Lang Island side of the Upper Bay. Neither was there any very close sailing. Timid elderly gentlemen might have thined each vessel, with his nerves unshaken, as she passed each flag-boat or buoy. It was delightful exceedingly—a match got up, and well managed; but there is very little room for pen and ink expenditure on it.

We call to mind one peculiarity alone—a change, and to our thinking a decided improvement. There was no limitation in the number of sails. Every skipper hoisted what he pleased; and consequently there was a pretty little show of flying jibs, stay-sails, and square-sails set on an outrigger boom. Had the day been squally, there would have been some diversion from the carrying-on, which, with this light canvas, is apt to be excessive. As it was, they varied the scene.

Here is a list of the yachts that competed, in order of their arrival at the winning flag-boat and with the time marked.

FIRST CLASS.				H. M. S.
Una	4 50 1	Tallight	5 23 55
Itaz	5 13 34	Cornelia	5 44 39
SECOND CLASS.				H. M. S.
Itay	4 57 02	Spray	5 38 12
Irene	5 08 20	Sybil	5 45 47

THIRD RACE.
L'Esperance... .. 5 25 30 | Ceres... .. 5 50 30.
Alpha... .. 6 28 05

It will thus be seen that the three winners, one of each class, were the Una, 60 tons, belonging to Mr. L. M. Rathorford, Ray, 33 tons, belong to Mr. P. M. Ray, and L'Esperance, 20 tons, belonging to Mr. W. Langdon. All these are sloops.

In addition to the above, the Gertrude, Mystery, and Prima Donna, were in the match; but we believe they were not timed. The start commenced at 11 precisely with the Ceres, the smallest craft; and the time for loanage being given at the start—ended with the Haze at 11.32.50.

N. Y. Albion.
A REGATTA took place at Skeaneteles on the 4th inst., the Cayuga Chief of Springfield, taking the first prize; the Flying Cloud, of Seneca Falls, the second; and the Blue Bell, of Skeaneteles, the third. Several thousand people witnessed this exciting sailing match.

GREENWICH REGATTA.

Several thousand of persons assembled on Monday, at Greenwich, to visit the annual regatta there, under the patronage of Earl Fitzhardinge and the nobility and gentry of the borough. The weather was remarkably fine, and the excellence of the sport amply repaid those who paid a visit to the place.

The contest was in five heats with six scullers, and the distance, the whole river front of the town, twice round.

FIRST HEAT.

Edgar Smith	...	...	...	...	...	Red 1
Edward Jury	...	...	...	...	...	Yellow 0
Samuel Carter	...	...	...	...	...	Dark blue 0

It was a most capital heat, all the men keeping close together for a great distance, and leaving but small spaces between them at the finish.

SECOND HEAT.

John Groves	...	...	...	...	...	Light blue 1
James Emerson	...	...	...	...	...	Pink 0
John Brown	...	...	...	...	...	Green 0

After a few strokes the winner began to draw away with the lead, and kept it easily.

THIRD HEAT.

Samuel Carter	...	...	...	...	...	1
Edward Jury	...	...	...	...	...	2

This was a most capital heat, and elicited considerable applause. It was anybody's race at half the distance, and only won by two or three lengths.

FOURTH HEAT.

John Groves	...	...	...	...	...	1

It will be seen that these were the four best men, and the heat created the most lively interest. In the start, Carter and Smith led for the first moment, then the former dropped off, and Groves came up and overhauled Smith, and reserving themselves as much as they could, and that was but little, owing to Carter's proximity, they came in as above, all close together.

GRAND HEAT.

Edgar Smith	...	...	...	...	...	Red 2

Groves jumped off with a lead of a yard, and then Smith drew immediately skull and skull, and in the next 20 strokes a slight front, and at a fine pace they continued to the lower distance, where Groves passed him and came up against the tide about two lengths clear, which was increased materially by his admirably slipping through the arch of the steam-boat bridge, while his adversary took the strength of the tide outside. After this Groves won easily.

ST. JOHN'S AND ST. MARGARET'S, WESTMINSTER REGATTA.

This regatta also came off on Monday, when, after rowing some preliminary heats, it was thus decided in the final one:—

Thomas Goodram and James Coombes	...	...	...	...	...	Red 1
William McKitt and William Grens	...	...	...	...	...	Green 0
David Davys and Richard Holmes	...	...	...	...	...	Yellow 0

Won by six lengths.

DOGGETT'S COAT AND BADGE.

This very old established aquatic contest, upon which the popular musical farce of The Waterman is founded, took place on Tuesday; and was, as usual, most attractive, there being a vast number of boats accompanying the wager, and crowds of persons congregated upon the craft at the water's edge and on the banks and bridges throughout the distance, from the Swan at London Bridge, to the Swan at Chelsea. Originally there was but one prize for the six competitors—apprentices just out of their time—a coat and badge given by Doggett, the comedian, in commemoration of the happy accession of the family of her present Majesty to the throne of Great Britain; but subsequently the exertions of the second and third men were taken into consideration by Sir W. Jolliffe, and the interest on £212, South Sea Stock, bequeathed for their benefit, produces £4 10s. for the second man, and £2 14s. 2d. for the third. Within the last few years the Fishmongers' Company have very kindly made the additional prizes of one guinea for the first man, a guinea and a half for the fourth, and a guinea each for the fifth and sixth; so that, unlike any other wager, all concerned now receive a stimulus to exertion.

David John Hemmings	...	...	...	...	...	Bankside..... 1
James Grogell, jun.	...	...	...	...	...	Horseydown..... 2
Richard Hough	...	...	...	...	...	Somers-quay..... 3
Samuel Thomas Ashby	...	...	...	...	...	Duke Shore..... 4
William James Freese	...	...	...	...	...	Bankside..... 5
Edmond Mellish	...	...	...	...	...	Horseydown..... 6

Shortly before one o'clock the wagemen took their places, under the direction of Mr. Dard, bargemaster of the Fishmongers' Company, who has for many years very ably managed this wager. It was just upon low water as they formed in a line, and there was consequently but little advantage in station. All got away together; immediately after which Hemmings took a fine lead, followed by Ashby, Gengell, and Hough, the two latter being on the opposite side of the river to Hemmings. At Southwark Bridge Hemmings led by four or five lengths—Gengell, Hough, and Ashby, being all very close together, and making a very capital race, in the heat of which Ashby rowed the nose of his boat into a cutter. Hough now pressed Gengell severely, and at Waterloo Bridge passed him, and maintained it to Westminster Bridge, closely waited upon by Gengell, where accident restored to the latter the place he had lost—Hough rowing himself aground at the north side of Westminster Bridge. The labour against the heavy head wind was severe, but the young men rowed very determinedly. Hemmings had made a wide gap between himself and the second boat before half the distance was accomplished; and, rowing within himself, arrived first at his destination, 200 yards ahead of the second. Hough never gave Gengell the slightest respite from labour, and came in three lengths astern of him, while Ashby made some very gallant efforts to obtain part of the interest in the South Sea Stock. The "jolly young watermen" rowed in old-fashioned wherries, the winner's being one of Mr. Wyld's.

THE LEANDER CLUB.

A very splendid boat race, rendered interesting by the circumstance of its being rowed in the old-fashioned pair-oared boats, took place on Tuesday amongst some of the gentlemen of the Leander Club. The distance was from Vauxhall to Putney.

" Davis	...	...	...	...	0
" Davil	...	...	...	...	0
" Woodbridge	...	...	...	...	0
" Willoughby	...	...	...	...	0
" Prior	...	...	...	...	0

The whole of the gentlemen exerted themselves well to maintain the deserved celebrity of the club. Mr. Colquhoun took the lead, closely followed by Mr. Prior, but the latter gentleman's arm did not allow him to continue his race long with any chance of success. Mr. Davis rowed so pluckily as to menace Mr. Colquhoun's lead at Wandsworth, but subsequently fell off, and Mr. Colquhoun won very easily.

THE WALTON AND COTTON CLUB.

It has been truly said that there is no goal without some attendant evil. A high state of civilisation, for example, one form of which is excellence in the arts and manufactures, bringing with it the evils of over-crowded communities, surmounted by an unnatural physical and moral atmosphere. No city pays so great a penalty for such a pre-eminence as the metropolis of British civilisation, London. The district so called is not simply a town, but a large cluster of cities and towns, each possessing a distinct local character, and developing some peculiar form of the national civilisation. The City proper is the great centre of trade and commerce. Westminster, in addition to the halls of legislation and courts of justice, contains the palaces of royalty, the nobles of rank and wealth, and the shops of the vendors of the luxuries they require,—luxuries manufactured chiefly in other localities. The south contains a population chiefly of the trading class. The east is the seat of the great shipping interest, and the various trades dependent thereupon. A large portion of the northern district contains a population representing the industry and skill of metropolitan manufactures. Confined to the workshop from week's end to week's end, the restraint necessary to such a high state of national civilisation is felt by this latter class severely. Although born, for the most part, in the great region of smoke and brick walls, the population of this section of London, seldom become sufficiently acclimated to their native locality sufficiently to extinguish any desire to escape from it as often as they can. The accident of birth may have subdued, but it has not destroyed nature. There are no children so enthusiastically fond of green fields and meadows as London children. But the bent of inclination in the sexes differs as regards objects of rural attraction. While the girl revels in cowslips and daisies, the boy finds his greatest delight in the muddy pond, which is to him an ocean of pleasurable wonders. He procures a broken-necked green glass-bottle, and there upon legitimate half-holidays, or stolen whole ones, standing by the side of the pond with stick and line dangling in the stagnant water, is the future Waltonian in the first stage of his piscatorial existence. By-and-by he casts his infantile shell, and emerging from the time coat, assumes the round jacket and waistcoat, the next change in external appearance in his progress towards manhood. His ambition increases with the shortening of his coat-skirts. He seems any longer in no more bottle-imp. He repairs to Sadler's Wells, and invests his hoarded pocket-money in a jointed rod, a stock of gentles, and a regular tin fishing-can. Thus equipped, he rises with the sun, takes his station on the banks of the New River or the Lea, and returns with his stock of gudgeons with as much self-satisfaction as, though he had taken the finest trout or captured the largest jack. Become an apprentice, he aspires to be a man, and simulates manly manners; essays trolling, and takes his last degree in his education as an angler in punt and fly fishing. The apprentice becomes successively the journeyman and the master; but angling has become with him a habit, and his love of the sport accompanies him in all his changes of life. But there would be no glory in angling, and there would be nothing to stimulate the metropolitan Waltonian's ambition, were the end of all his labours the mere frizzling of a fresh-water fish in a frying-pan. Looked at in a mere utilitarian point of view, the purchase of a few herrings or sprats would be a more profitable mode of investing time and money. He seeks the companionship of men of like taste with himself. They exhibit their several "takes," and finally form themselves into fishing-clubs, meeting at the clubhouse on appointed days, making up parties for angling expeditions, and in many cases renting waters where good sport is to be found. Such is a brief sketch of the piscarian career of a young Waltonian; such the immortal out of which "The Walton and Cotton Club" is composed. Its members are active manufacturers and retired tradesmen, with a sprinkling of professional and mercantile men. Parochial and curio-hunters may have been named by the Waltonian, but the emblazonment of his name in gilt letters in the church porch, or even, in rare instances, in front of the organ loft, is an honour by no means comparable in value to him with the staffed fish suspended against the wall of the society's room in a glass case with an inscription in gilt letters, describing the weight, locality caught from, and the name of the successful angler. To say the least of the sport, however, nobody can justly impute to angling the engenderment of vicious propensities. The passion has its root in an innate love of nature, and is so far commendable. Moreover, the presence of an large number of the wives of members of the Walton and Cotton Club at their recent annual dinner, raises a far more important question than the pursuit of the members do not seriously interfere with their domestic duties.

The Walton and Cotton Club was established nearly 20 years ago. The society is held at its rooms at the Duke of York Tavern, Gloucester-street, near the New River Head. The annual dinner took place on Wednesday last, at the Sun Hotel, Kingston, a famous resort for anglers. A large party of ladies and gentlemen sat down to a sumptuous banquet, provided with the accustomed taste and liberality of the proprietor of the establishment, Mr. Hunt. Immediately after the removal of the cloth, the company adjourned to a spacious room in the grounds, beautifully situated on the banks of the Thames.

John Binks, Esq., having been called to the chair, in a brief manner disposed of what are called "the usual loyal toasts." In proposing the toast of the day, "Success to the Walton and Cotton Club," he described it as the noblest and best managed society of anglers in London, and showed that it had conferred great benefit on the fraternity. The toast was drunk with loud applause.

Mr. Lewis, one of the oldest members present, replied on behalf of the society, in a speech of great humour.

Mr. George Lulzer said that he rose to propose the health of one of their most important officers, a gentleman whom they all highly respected, not only in his official, but also in his private character; he referred to their worthy treasurer, Mr. William Henry Johnson, the oldest member of the club, and a gentleman whose services to it had been recognised by the presentation of a silver snuff-box.

The toast having been drunk with loud applause, Mr. Johnson returned thanks, and took a review of the history of the club from its original foundation, at which he had the honour to assist.

Mr. Stokes then proposed the health of their valued secretary, Mr. Collingridge, to whose exertions they were indebted for the high state of efficiency of the club,—services which had also been recognised by the members by a similar testimonial to that presented to Mr. Johnson.

Mr. Collingridge returned thanks.

The health of the Chairman and the Vice-Chairman (Mr. Hunt) were severally proposed and responded to by those gentlemen.

The health of the visitors was replied to by Mr. Morris, the celebrated racket-player. The health of the librarian and some minor toasts having been drunk, the company rose to devote the rest of the day to Teipsichore, under the enlivening influence of an excellent band, which had played at intervals during the day.

SALMON FISHERIES.—The northern rivers have been reduced by the late dry weather to mere hurries. Thousands of fish are lying in the estuaries, waiting a fresh in the river to make their appearance in the streams and pools, and in the meantime are falling a prey to the stake-nets and bag-nets prepared for them at every turn. The upper pools of the Ness have been very productive to the net-fishers all this week, and the Loch-Ness Company have taken several large hauls of fresh-run grilse and sea-trout during the last few days. There can be no doubt, therefore, that small though the Ness be, grilse are running in it. They are very shy, however, and baffle the skill of the sportsman. Several fine grilse have been taken with the rod by the most persevering of our anglers. Mr. Powell landed three on Tuesday and three on Monday last. Mr. Lowe took two on Monday, and on every day since, he has a large number of good trout. Mr. Joseph Lowe, jun., landed his first grilse, we believe, on Tuesday. The "Northern Switcher" has finished with some success, and others who have been assiduous in angling have had their reward. The lower pools have yielded very little or no sport during the week. The stake-net sea-fishings have been very prolific of late. In this neighbourhood great numbers of salmon and grilse have been captured at all the salmon stations, and among them some fine large fish. Three magnificent salmon were brought to the "Penock" on Friday last from Kilmar, one weighing 27lbs., and the other two about 20lbs. each. A yacht caught lately in one of the Skye lochs, with one haul of the net, upwards of 800 salmon, grilse, and trout. The Greenock Advertiser mentions some fine hauls in the south. Upwards of 80 fish reached the Greenock market, on one day last week from Port Crawford, Kyles of Bute and Isle of Bute. They are unusually plentiful on the Ayrshire coast—400lbs. of fish having been killed at Doonmouth on consecutive days during last week. A fish of 33lbs. was lately taken at Ballantrae. The Clyde on both sides seems full of these fine fish, which may be seen nightly in numbers, and of large size, leaping out of the water. The Tay fishings are reported as excellent; Saturday's rains and Sunday's rest sent the salmon up in great numbers.—Inverness Courier.

TORQUAY.—A magnificent sturgeon, weighing nearly two hundred weight, and measuring eight feet in length, was captured off Barry Head, on Monday last, by some British fisherman. It was purchased by a tradesman in Market-street, who has disposed of it in small portions at a moderate price.

SINGULAR CAPTURE OF A LARGE PIKE.—A few days ago as a labourer was cutting reeds in a meadow, on the banks of the river near Wheatley, Oxon, he was somewhat alarmed to find the progress of his reaping-hook impeded by the rapid dart of a pike of large dimensions, weighing, as it afterwards proved, upwards of 13lbs. The pike immediately upon coming into contact with the reaping-hook (which performed a fearful laceration of about 7 inches by the side of the gills), sprang into the air to the height of several feet, and so dismayed the poor countryman that, to free his own expression, he thought the "Jack was bewitched." A fellow-labourer happening to be near, came and assisted, and after considerable difficulty succeeded in despatching the poor fish, which appeared to endure the most excruciating pain from the wounds he had received.

GROUSE, and, indeed, game of all kinds, form, to the eye of an experienced sportsman, the chief features of a moor-land landscape. Little does he care for beautiful prospects, rugged hills, or the wild scenery about him. The background of his picture is filled up by a covey of birds; whilst a couple of dogs, with himself and gun, may very conveniently form the foreground. The German red-grouse is distinguished from its burly cousin, the moor-cock, by the blackish-blue feathers on its wings, back, and throat. Its tail is of an exceedingly curious form, resembling that of the lyre bird. The taste of its flesh, by feeding on the juniper-berries, with which some parts of Germany abound, makes it dainty eating for epicures. When started they fly slowly, but increase in speed as they proceed; and woe to the unlucky sportsman who gives them time to get well on the wing. He may just see them in the distance, leaving him as quickly as friends leave a man who has his elbows out, and nothing left but a stout heart to support him in his misfortunes.

RED-GROUSE SHOOTING IN AUGUST.

This amendment was carried, upon a division, by 23 votes to 13. The bill is consequently rejected.

Other bills were advanced a stage, and their lordships adjourned at half-past 8 o'clock.

Commons.—The House met at noon when the second reading of the Public Health Act Amendment Bill was moved by Lord Palmerston, who explained the nature and purposes of the powers which the bill would entrust to the Board of Health, and entreated the House to grant a renewed lease of existence to that board under the modified conditions, and for the limited term proposed by the bill. As a department, he added, the board would be henceforth placed under the control and responsibility of the Home Secretary; and as individuals all the present members had left their functions at his disposal, awaiting any expression of opinion, on the part of the House and the government, that their retirement from office was expedient.

Lord Seymour opposed the bill, and moved as an amendment that it be read a second time that day three months. His opposition to the measure was occasioned, he said, by no antagonism to the government, but from a decided conviction that the Board of Health had not discharged their functions in such a manner as to justify their continuance, and that the changes indicated by the present bill did not promise any security for the better performance of their duties in future.

The amendment was seconded by Sir B. Hall.

Mr. M. Milnes supported the bill, and defended the Board of Health, the high character and talent of whose members he complained had not secured them from defamatory attacks.

Mr. Henley was convinced that the board stood condemned both in the eyes of the country and of the government. The bill, he contended, would effect no further change than that of transferring the control of the board from the Chief Commissioner of Works to the Secretary of State for the Home Department, the practical result of which would be merely nominal. He recommended that a Short Continuance Bill should be brought in, and the present measure rejected.

Lord J. Russell reminded the House that the measure now proposed was but to endure for a year. In that time the whole subject might be investigated by a committee.

Mr. Heywood announced that Mr. Chadwick had been recommended by his medical advisers to discontinue the very arduous duties incumbent upon his office in the Board of Health.

Mr. Hume confessed that his vote upon the present bill would turn upon the question whether Mr. Chadwick remained or retired.

The statement that this gentleman had been professionally advised to retire was corroborated by Lord Palmerston.

After some observations from Sir T. D. Acland, the house divided—For the second reading, 65; for the amendment, 74; majority against the bill, 9.

Lord Palmerston stated that a government prosecution would be instituted against Lieutenant Austin, the governor, and Mr. Blount, the surgeon of Birmingham Borough Prison, on account of their ill-treatment of the prisoners therein confined.

On the motion for going into committee of supply,

Mr. Lucas called the attention of the House to the subject of manufacturing industry in Ireland, which was, he declared, threatened with rapid extinction, owing to the unchecked current of emigration out of the country. He suggested the expediency of instituting an inquiry into the means whereby this process of depopulation might be arrested, and especially whether the industrial condition of Ireland would be ameliorated by the establishment of training and apprenticeship schools or other similar institutions.

Lord J. Russell with regard to the suggested establishment of industrial schools, submitted that no case had been made out for devoting, on behalf of Ireland, from the course pursued in this country for the promotion of industrial education.

After some remarks from Mr. J. Macgregor, Mr. Maguire, Mr. A. Pellatt, and Mr. Kennedy, the subject dropped, and the House went into committee of supply.

The consideration of various votes belonging to the Civil Service estimates occupied the committee till half-past twelve. The House then resumed, but immediately went again into committee on the Customs Duties, for the purpose of passing a series of resolutions preliminary to the introduction of a bill for effecting certain alterations in a long schedule of duties charged upon divers imported commodities. One of these resolutions referred to the hop duties, and, being opposed, was postponed. The rest of the series was agreed to, and the House resumed.

The Stamp Duties Bill was read a third time and passed.

TUESDAY.—The House adjourned at five minutes to three o'clock.

LOKES.—The Earl of Clarendon stated that a vessel of war from the station at Gibraltar was specially charged with the duty of watching the proceedings of the Kaffir pirates.

Lord Brougham withdrew the Criminal Justice (Metropolis) Bill for the present session, and his Education in Corporate Towns Bill.

The Merit at Graduates (University of London) Bill passed through committee with amendments.

The Burials beyond the Metropolis Bill, and the Parochial Schoolmasters (Scotland) Bill, were read a third time and passed.

The Spirits (Ireland) Bill was read the third time; and on the question that it do pass, Lord Montagu called attention to the fact that this measure converted, to all practical purposes, the constabulary force of Ireland into officers for the collection of revenue, contrary to the whole current of authority upon the subject, and in opposition to the principle upon which the force was constituted. The bill turned the constables into excisemen, who knew nothing of such duties; and thus produced a divided duty, which would lead to great embarrassment. He should propose the omission of the clauses, three in number, which authorised the employment of the police in Excise duties. The noble lord then moved his first amendment, which was negatived, and their lordships afterwards divided upon clause 13, which enables the local Lieutenant to employ the constabulary in the suppression of illicit distillation.

The number were—
For the clause..... 17
Against it..... 11
Majority for..... 6

The bill was then passed.

The Earl of Shaftesbury moved for papers relative to the proceedings of the Board of Health.

The papers were ordered, and their lordships adjourned.

Commons.—At the morning sitting,

The Attorney-General moved the commitment of the Bills of Exchange (No. 2) Bill.

On division, the commitment of the bill was carried by 56 to 30, and its discussion occupied the remainder of the morning sitting.

At the evening sitting,

Lord Palmerston explained that the release of Mr. Jeremiah Smith, late mayor of Rye, from prison, to which he had been sent on conviction of perjury, had been granted on account of the precarious state of that person's health.

Sir John Pakington gave notice of his intention to call the attention of the House to the circumstances under which Mr. Lawler had been appointed Governor of South Australia, and he asked the Government for an early day for the purpose.

Lord J. Russell named Monday.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer, in reply to Mr. Danby Seymour, said that it was the intention of Government to propose to Parliament to build a new gallery for the national collection of pictures, but the consideration of the subject was not sufficiently advanced to enable him to say whether the designs would be open to public competition. He entered into some explanations respecting the newly-purchased Mithras Gallery, and added that there was no intention to give the Royal Academy notice to leave the apartments hitherto lent them.

Lord Dudley Stewart called the attention of the House to the termination of all obligation on the part of this country, in consequence of the conduct of Russia, to continue to make any payments on account of the Russo-Dutch Loan, and he moved a series of resolutions, the effect of which was that Russia, by her neglect to maintain at the Sullna mouth of the Danube the works necessary to prevent obstacles to its navigation, had violated the treaty of Vienna and injured the commerce of this country; that upwards of £4,000,000 had already been paid towards the principal and for the interest of the Russo-Dutch Loan, and that £3,386,000 more would be required; and that, inasmuch as the convulsion of 1831 between England and Russia secured the payment to the latter of part of her old Dutch debt, in consideration of her accession to the general arrangements of the Congress of Vienna, the withdrawal by Russia of that accession made it proper to suspend the payments.

Mr. Digby Seymour seconded the motion.

Sir W. Molesworth, in resisting the proposition said, for two centuries it had been the custom of civilised nations to pay debts due to an enemy, the single exception being in the case of the Sicilian loan, a case in which the conduct of the King of Prussia had been pronounced to be contrary to the law of nations. If the Emperor of Russia had money in our funds this time he would receive the dividends thereon, and there was really no difference between such a case and that in question. He admitted the general violation of the treaty of Vienna, which, had we not been at war, would have been a casus belli, but neither that nor war would justify the repudiation; and he contended that the Emperor of Russia had not committed the specific violation requisite to invalidate our agreement. Sir William showed that we had purchased from the Netherlands, the Cape of Good Hope, Demerara, Essequibo, and Berbice, on condition of applying a part of the purchase-money to the discharge of the obligation in question; and that in 1811 we had expressly purchased the assent of Russia to the new arrangement between Belgium and Holland, and that we were bound to continue our payments, except in the case of Russia ceasing to co-operate in our policy in regard to those countries, a contingency which had not arisen. We were, therefore, engaged by treaties and acts of Parliament to fulfil our obligations; and he made an eloquent appeal to the House to resist a proposition which would have come better from the obscure delegate of some bankrupt transatlantic state than the representative of a great metropolitan constituency.

The House divided, and the numbers were—
For the motion..... 5
Against it..... 57

Majority against it..... 52

Mr. W. Williams moved, for a return, stating in detail the force of the cavalry under orders for the East; but the motion being resisted by the Secretary-at-War, and denounced as mischievous by Colonel Durnan, was negatived without division.

Sir William Molesworth moved for leave to bring in a bill to make better provision for the administration of the laws relating to the public health. He proposed to constitute a new board, precisely as the Poor-law Board was constituted. Its president should have a seat in the House, and should have a secretary and an under-secretary. The superintending inspectors should be salaried officers of the board, and therefore incapable of taking private work. He proposed to give Mr. Chadwick compensation to the amount of £1,000 a-year, and paid a tribute to the valuable services which had been rendered by that gentleman.

After a few observations, leave was given to bring in the bill.

The Crime and Outrage (Ireland) Bill went through committee.

The Militia Bill (No. 2) was advanced a stage, and amendments were introduced.

The other orders were then disposed of.

WEDNESDAY.—Commons.—Mr. Gordon, the new member for Beverley, took the oath and his seat.

The House went into committee on the Russian Government Securities Bill.

Lord Palmerston, for the Solicitor-General, moved an amendment for remodelling the first clause. The provision of the new clause was to the effect that, during the continuance of war between England and Russia, any British subject, in any country, should take Russian stocks, scrip, or bonds issued since the 29th of March last, he should be guilty of a misdemeanour, exceptions being made in the cases of executors and creditors. His Lordship expressed his belief that, when Parliament, by assenting to the bill, had laid down a general principle, there would be little need for provisions to induce commercial men to obey it.

Mr. Thomas Baring said that the bill attempted to effect that it was impossible for legislation to do in the face of public opinion. Such a measure, if introduced at all, ought to be founded on a general principle.

He intimated that the zeal of Lord Palmerston and Lord J. Russell suggested that they were actuated by private animosity against the Emperor of Russia.

Lord John Russell, after controverting the arguments of Mr. Baring, asked indignantly whether it was to be borne that when the Emperor of Russia came to disturb the whole peace of Europe, and threatened to embroil it in all the miseries of war, he and Lord J. Russell could not speak as they thought in regard to a bill in this nature, without being told that they were animated by private animosity towards him?

Mr. Bright complained that Lord J. Russell and Lord Palmerston had vituperated the Emperor of Russia, and he described the bill as a hollow sham.

Lord Palmerston sarcastically remarked upon the irony of those who were opposed to the policy of this country. It had, he said, been the regular manoeuvre of the absolute party in Europe, whenever they felt that the views and interest, in impute to him and to other members of the English Government that they were pursuing that policy in avowment of personal motives of enmity against a particular individual. That was just as regular a diplomatic practice as "thrust overboard" in any piece of small-arms warfare. He was surprised that the honourable member for Huntingdon should have made himself the organ of that sort of ridiculous edumity, because he thought that if any man ought to have abstained from adopting that jargon on the present occasion, it was the honourable member, who was known as the avowed private agent of the Emperor of Russia.

Mr. Baring denied that he was the private agent of the Emperor of Russia, though he had been the agent, in time of peace, for several years a Russian loan. Language, he added, might have fallen from him which went further than he intended.

Mr. Disraeli sympathized with Lord Palmerston. It was very natural and natural to feel indignant under such a charge. He knew no one living statesman who had been more sincerely against the Russian than the noble lord. He remembered that for five or six years there was a constant stream of calumny in that vein directed against the noble lord, and his conduct when in the most responsible position of this country was assailed by persons of authority on the ground that he was influenced solely in the course he had taken by personal feelings and motives. But who was the principal mover in this matter? It was the present Prime Minister of the country, under whom the noble lord was now serving, and the persons who acted with the First Minister of the Crown in making those calumnious statements were the followers of the Prime Minister, and now the colleagues of the noble lord. He merely called attention to this fact, by which the House might do justice to the amiable conduct of the noble lord.

After some further observations by honourable members a division was taken on the motion by Mr. Milner for reporting progress, which was negatived by 88 to 59, and the clause, after a brief discussion, was agreed to.

Lord Palmerston, at the instance of Lord Dudley Stuart, agreed that the Government should take charge of the bill, which was reported.

The Public Revenue and Consolidated Fund Charge Bill was read a second time.

In committee of supply on the supplementary Ordinance estimates.

Some discussion took place as to the appointment of Sir Row Bass in an office which placed him in command of Sir John Burgoyne. The debate elicited the most honourable tributes to the merits of that distinguished officer from Mr. Monse, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Colonel Durney, and an explanation that the appointment in question was dictated by a consideration of the peculiar fitness of Sir J. Burgoyne for the office of Inspector General of Fortifications.

POULTRY BY TRAIN.—Ellen Donohue, an Irish poultry gatherer, applied to Alderman Wilson for redress under the following circumstances. She said that he had sent by the Great Western Railway, from Bristol, thirteen chickens of poultry, six dozen in each chest, consigned to Mr. Hawkins, at Lendenhall-market, and that she paid for them by mail instead of goods train. The chests did not arrive until the market was over, the consequence of which was that before the next market the poultry was totally unfit for sale. She had applied to the officials of the railway company for compensation for her loss, and who had informed her that she must consult her lawyer. Being a poor woman, she was unable to find money for this purpose; indeed, she had not money to pay her way back to Ireland. Alderman Wilson said if the facts were as the applicant had stated them, there were plenty of lawyers who would be very glad to undertake the case, "no cure no pay." It was but reasonable that the railway company, who were not present, and had no notice of the application, should be heard. Mr. Brook, who attended with the applicant, said if an officer were sent from the Mansion-house to the railway company they would pay the amount of the loss. Alderman Wilson—If the demand made be fair and reasonable one, I am satisfied that it will be fairly met; but I cannot send an officer to the company on such a business. Mr. Brook observed that he had no doubt that the trade would find money to assist the applicant in obtaining redress.

HERRING FISHING.—ABERDEEN.—The half-dozen boats here have made a commencement, with very slight success, the average as yet not being worth setting down. STONEHAVEN.—The general commencement here has not been encouraging, the whole of the sixty boats employed having altogether taken probably not more than twenty crabs. This, however, at this early part of the season, is no criterion as to future prospects. WICK.—Our fishing fleet is daily increasing, and in course of next week the whole force will have mustered —indeed, except the west country and Moray Firth boats, they may be said to have already nearly all arrived. The success of the fishing at the Lewis up to a recent date has delayed the arrival of the boats from that place, and the stiff breeze which for some days has been blowing in on the opposite shores of the Moray Firth prevents the arrival of boats from that quarter. The delay, however, has occasioned no loss to those interested, as no good has been done during the past week by the boats which are here. The entire take during the week would not yield an average for the few boats at sea. Last night only two boats were put out here, and we do not expect that a general trial will be made before the beginning of next week. DUNNU.—Since last report little has been done at the station, but appearances are very favourable. Nearly 200 boats were off last night; the highest has delivered 1,900 fish, and most of them had a few, but it was by means no successful beginning. Selling price from 7s. to 8s. a hundred. —Montrose Standard.

KINROSS GYMNASIUM GAMES.—These games came off in the Beach Park, on the Kinross estate, on Tuesday last, with fully more clat than on any former occasion. The day was fine and the attendance more than usually large, whilst the music, particularly that of the Tillycountry Instrumental Band, was in itself a great treat, and imparted much to the enjoyment of the day's proceedings. The competition throughout was well sustained both as to the number of competitors and the display of skill in all the games. From the excellent arrangements of the managing committee, everything was conducted with great propriety, and from no spurious liquors being allowed to be sold on the ground, we did not observe any one of the large assemblage the least worse of liquor. At the conclusion the following competitors were awarded their respective prizes in presence of Messrs. Tol, of Luthran; Dempster, of Tillyochie; and Stocks, Kinross, who were the judges on the occasion:—

IRELAND.

THE CARDEN ABDUCTION CASE.

The great event of the Irish season has "come off," and Mr. John Carden, of Barnane, has, upon the whole, no valid reason to complain of the issue. The jury, it will be seen, in finding him "Guilty of an attempt to commit abduction," have adopted the medium course provided under Lord Campbell's Act, the 14th and 15th of Victoria, chap. 100, so that the penalty of the crime is mitigated to two years' imprisonment and an undefined pecuniary fine.

CLONMEL, FRIDAY EVENING.

The trial of Mr. John Carden, of Barnane, for the abduction of Miss Eleanor Louisa Arbuthnot, having been specially fixed for this morning, the extraordinary interest felt throughout the country in the case, owing to the rank of the parties immediately concerned and the nature of the offence charged, was strikingly manifested about the Court-house for a considerable time before the commencement of the proceedings and throughout the day. The ladies mustered in strong force.

The Attorney-General, Mr. George, Q.C., and Mr. J. Pennoyer appeared as counsel on the part of the Crown to conduct the prosecution; Mr. Martley, Q.C., Mr. Ralston, Q.C., Mr. D. Lynch, Q.C., and Mr. Shaw appeared as counsel for the prisoner.

A few minutes before 10 o'clock Mr. Justice Ball took his seat on the bench.

Mr. Mark Pedder, Clerk of the Crown, read the indictment, charging Mr. Carden with the abduction of Miss Arbuthnot, with intent to marry her. A second count charged him with intent to defile her. He listened with attention to the indictment, and pleaded "Not Guilty." He seemed somewhat worn from the effects of his imprisonment.

Mr. Martley, Q.C., on behalf of Mr. Carden, applied to his lordship under the circumstances that the trial of this indictment should be postponed until the next assizes, or until such time as the Court should think fit.

Judge Ball, in disposing of the application, said it had not been sworn that the prisoner could not safely go to trial now, or that he would be better prepared hereafter. The trial, therefore, should proceed.

The long panel was then called, and the swearing of the jury proceeded.

John Carden was then given in charge, indicted that he did, on the 2nd of July, at Rathronan, unlawfully and feloniously take away Eleanor Louisa Arbuthnot, by force, and against her consent, with intent then and there to marry her, &c.

The Attorney-General then addressed the Court as follows:—May it please your lordship—gentlemen of the jury—it appears that some few years since Captain Gough, son of my Lord Gough, came to reside at his father's house at Rathronan. Captain Gough married Miss Arbuthnot, a lady of most distinguished English family, whose youngest sister seems to have been an early object of attraction to Mr. Carden. Accordingly, gentlemen, although perhaps he did not appear to have paid her any particular attention, he naturally became intimate with Captain Gough when he came to reside here. Moving in the same rank in the county, there was every reason for it; and I believe Mr. Carden behaved towards Captain Gough as a gentleman, as a neighbour, and ultimately as a friend. However, after some time, and without having paid any such marked attention to his sister-in-law as might have warranted him in such a step, it would appear that Mr. Carden proposed for her, and that his proposal was rejected with indignation, which entirely broke off all communication between them. He still followed her everywhere she went. He endeavoured to force his society upon her, and, notwithstanding that in the most significant manner it was intimated to him how indisposed she was towards him, he persevered in a manner that I cannot but think, on cool reflection, he must admit himself to have been highly reprehensible. On Sunday, the 2nd of July, Mrs. Gough, her two sisters, and Miss Lyndon proceeded to the church of Rathronan. The day being a fine one, the ladies remained and received the sacrament. During the service rain fell, and, in consequence, the coachman who had driven them there returned with the car on which they came to church, and brought back a large inside car for the purpose of protecting them from the rain. About the time when the ordinary divine service closed, or a little before it, a carriage was observed to drive up towards the gate of Rathronan church. Three or four men were observed going to and fro about this carriage, as if they were connected with it. Such a circumstance naturally excited observation among the very few persons who were then about the place. It is not quite certain what was the entire number of men engaged in the transaction, but there can be no doubt that the number was not less than six. After some time the car was observed coming along the road from the church, driven by the coachman, with four ladies inside. At one side, the furthest from the door on the right hand side, sat Miss Eleanor Arbuthnot, and next to the door, between her and it, Miss Lyndon. At the opposite side highest up sat the eldest Miss Arbuthnot, and next to the door Mrs. Gough. The front of the car consisted of curtains that could be drawn back at pleasure. As the car returned motion was observed to run in the direction of Rathronan gate, and one or two of them proceeded to the gate and endeavoured to make it fast. When the car arrived nearly opposite to the gate, a man with a case knife proceeded to cut the reins. Mr. Carden instantly proceeded to lay hands on Miss Eleanor Arbuthnot. She was furthest off from him, and therefore was in a sense protected by the intervention of Miss Lyndon. Miss Lyndon presented, positively, an obstruction, but she, not content with seeing her friend thus assailed, astonished, surprised, and terrified as she was, resisted with a courage that does her the highest possible honour. Her gallantry on that occasion saved her friend from a fate which no one can contemplate without horror. A regular conflict ensued between Miss Lyndon and Mr. Carden. I need not tell you that in that conflict, no matter how gallantly it might be fought on one side, superior strength would in the end prevail, and the result was so. Miss Lyndon was dragged from the car, and thus one great obstacle to the removal of Miss Arbuthnot was got rid of. Contemporaneously with removal of Miss Lyndon, Mrs. Gough escaped. Gentlemen, it is far from my intention to aggravate this case. If the case be made out, I have no doubt, gentlemen of the jury, that you will do your duty, painful though it may be. On the other hand, if the facts shall not be brought up to meet the law, as laid down by his lordship, you will act under his direction in ascertaining of what crime the prisoner is really guilty this day.

Miss Eleanor Louisa Arbuthnot, examined by Mr. George, Q.C.—I am an unmarried lady. My parents are both dead. I reside with my brother-in-law, Captain Gough, at Rathronan. I have an elder sister, Laura. I know Mr. John Carden. I was at Rathronan on the 2nd of this month. I went to church on that day with my two sisters, Mrs. Gough and Miss Arbuthnot, and a friend, Miss Lyndon. James Dwyer, the coachman, drove the car. At the churchyard I saw Mr. Carden behind a tombstone. It was a fine day. We remained. I did not see Mr. Carden in church. After the service we went home in an inside car, which was driven by James Dwyer. I, my two sisters, and Miss Lyndon got into the car. The driver's seat is in a recess at one side of the car. I sat next the recess. There is a window at the opposite side. My sister Laura sat next it. Miss Lyndon sat next me. Mrs. Gough next my sister Laura. We drove home in that way by the road which is shady there; it is a straight road opposite Rathronan-gate, leading to Clonmel. We had got about half way from the church when my sister, Laura Arbuthnot, said, "Mr. Carden is coming." I then saw Mr. Carden. He passed from the direction of Rathronan on horseback a few yards, when he turned his horse and followed us quite close to the car. He did not say anything. When close in the hedge-gate the car stopped suddenly. It was not stopped by any orders from those in the car. I did not see Mr. Carden at the moment the car stopped. The next time I saw him was at the door of the car, which he opened, and put in his hand across Miss Lyndon, and caught hold of my arm. He pulled me very violently. My sister, Miss Arbuthnot, held me and prevented Mr. Carden from pulling me out. Miss Lyndon, who remained in the car, struck him on the face with her closed hand. I saw him bleeding. Mr. Carden then let me go, and pulled Miss Lyndon out of the car. I saw her dragged out by Mr. Carden on the road. Mrs. Gough was then in the car, but she left it soon afterwards. I saw her get out of it. I and my sister, Miss Arbuthnot, were in the car. I was in the place behind the coachman, my sister opposite. Mr. Carden caught my sister and pulled her out. She resisted him with all her strength. After her removal I was alone in the car. Mr. Carden came to the car again. He caught hold of both my wrists. He endeavoured to pull me out of the car. I resisted him by holding on by a strap which was attached to the window. I caught it to prevent myself from being taken out; the strap broke at the moment Mr. Carden had a hold of my wrists. The strap was broken by the force with which Mr. Carden pulled me. When the strap gave way I was pulled down from where I was sitting to the door of the car, out of the seat on which I had been sitting. I was raised off the seat and pulled over in the door of the car. Mr. Carden, who was on the step, was still holding the upper part of my body, which was out of the car. I was leaning out over the edge of the car. My legs and the remainder of my body were in the car. My feet at that time had been drawn nearer the door than they were when I was sitting at the recess. They were drawn close to the door. They had been close to the other end. The length of the car, as I think, three or four feet. I recovered my position just as I was losing my balance from having put my foot against the opposite side of the car. I did it to save myself from being pulled out. I was at the time on my side. I did not get back to where I had been sitting, but succeeded in getting a seat at the bottom of the car, the place where Miss Lyndon had been sitting. I made every resistance I could. I kicked Mr. Carden in the chest with one of my feet. I was then in the car. Mr. Carden was below me on the step, or on the ground. That occurred at the moment I recovered my position. My wrists were bruised from the effects of the dragging. I don't know where my sister, Miss Arbuthnot, was at that time. As soon as I recovered my position I saw her strike him on the back of the head with her closed hand. She was behind Mr. Carden on the road at the time. While I was in the car, after the other ladies had left it, Mr. Carden said, "Eleanor, it is you I want." He repeated my name frequently. I heard him say to my sister, Mrs. Gough, that he should be hanged. He said that only once. I saw three or four men about the car. One of them was at the back of the car and tried to pull my sister, Miss Arbuthnot, out. He did not succeed. That man tried to pull her out before Mr. Carden tried to do so. The other three men were at the back of the car. I heard Mr. Carden speak to a tall man who was some way from the car, after he had tried to pull me out. He said to that man, "Pull her out," pointing to me, "and don't mind the others." Mr. Carden was then about two or three yards from the car. That man came over and caught hold of my clothes, and tried to pull me out of the car. My clothes, outer and under, were very much torn. I resisted the attempts of that man. Mr. Carden was on the road at the time, about two or three yards from the car. Just before I was struggling with the tall man I saw the coachman, James Dwyer, close to the back of the car. He was trying to defend me.

He had placed himself there for that purpose. I did not see anything further done. The car proceeded through the gate of Rathronan. I did not see what became of Mr. Carden or the tall man. I never encouraged the addresses of Mr. Carden.

Miss Laura Arbuthnot examined by Mr. Pennefather.—I know Mr. John Carden (identifies him). I saw Mr. Carden pull my sister from her seat. He had her all but her feet out of the car for a few seconds; when she regained her position she appeared to regain her balance. At the time I was behind Mr. Carden's back I saw another man trying to pull my sister out of the car. Mr. Carden remained at the back of the car two or three minutes after my sister had regained her position. I did not during that time see him doing anything. I heard Mr. Carden say to a man, "Take her," pointing to my sister, "and don't mind the rest." I heard him say more than once, "Come on, boys;" and that he should be hung for this.

Eliza Lyndon, examined by the Attorney-General.—I remember the Wednesday before the 2nd of July; I accompanied Miss Arbuthnot to church on that day. When returning I met Mr. Carden. He rushed to the car. I did not see him open the door, but I felt his two arms across me, holding Miss Eleanor Arbuthnot. She was above me in the car. I put my arm up to prevent him. He was at the time pulling Miss Arbuthnot. After having pushed him for some time I gave him a blow in the face with my hand. He bled in the nose. Mr. Carden lifted me out.

James Dwyer examined.—I am a constable to Captain Gough. I drove Mrs. Gough and the Misses Arbuthnot to church on the 2nd of July in my open car; it having rained, I brought a covered car for them. I saw Mr. Carden at the church. I went to the car after Mrs. Gough and Miss Arbuthnot were pulled out, and was knocked down. I got some blows of a skulldozer. There was six men besides Smithwick and Magrath. Rainsberry was there. He was the first man that took hold of the horse's head. Others of the party, besides the man who struck me, had skulldozers. Mr. Carden had a whip.

John Smithwick examined by Mr. George, Q.C.—Is shepherd to Mr. Gough. Was at mass at Clonmel on Sunday, the 2nd of July. Got back to Rathronan about 2 o'clock. Saw Mr. Gough's car come up. Saw Mr. Carden at the door of the car dragging the ladies. Saw a man at his left hand side. Saw skulldozers with five men. Went straight to the car. Received blows from the skulldozer. Saw a man with a knife in one hand and a skulldozer in the other. I returned to the car. Saw Mr. Carden at it. The Misses Arbuthnot were then in the car. Heard Mr. Carden say, "It is you I want." I heard no name. I hit Mr. Carden with his whip. I saw a pistol in Mr. Carden's side pocket, and a belt round his waist. I took up stones and used them. I did not strike Mr. Carden. Saw Magrath struck by two men with skulldozers. Saw Mr. Carden on the step of the car. I made towards him. He retreated, and cried out, "Murder, boys, why don't you fire?" to his own boys; I was cut severely on the head; I did not see Mr. Carden get into his carriage.

Mr. George McCullagh, sub-inspector of constabulary, and some other witnesses having been examined, the case for the Crown closed, after which—

Mr. Martley, Q.C., then proceeded to address the jury. No man could deny there had been a most grievous breach of the peace—a gross infraction of the law. The learned gentleman then submitted that the jury could not find the prisoner guilty of the abduction, but only of the attempt; and even the young lady herself must many times since the occurrence have returned thanks to God that the attempt had been unsuccessful. The actual crime of abduction had not been effected, and although it might be argued that the moral guilt was the same, the law of England always distinguished between the attempt and the actual commission of a felony, and it could have only occurred to the minds of lawyers to suppose that Mr. Carden had succeeded in taking and carrying away Miss Arbuthnot.

Dr. Forsyth, examined by Mr. Shaw.—I reside at Templemore. I am physician to Mr. Carden. I saw the two bottles of chloroform produced before. I gave them to Mr. Carden. I was in the garden of my house when Mr. Carden came to see me one day. We were talking of various matters, when on passing through my surgery, he asked me the best thing for a lady subject to hysterics; I said chloroform. He said he knew a lady subject to them. I asked him were they accompanied by spasms, and he said they were. I then said "Give her from 10 to 20 drops of chloroform, in a little water."

Cross-examined by the Attorney-General.—How many drops does one of the bottles contain?—180.

Ten drops at a time was what you recommended?—From 10 to 20. Then each of the bottles contains from 10 to 18 doses?—Yes.

You gave the second bottle?—Yes; when he saw one bottle first, he said that was a small quantity.

Do you generally administer chloroform with a sponge when you administer it externally?—Yes.

Did you ever see that sponge produced before?—No.

He told you he wanted those things for a lady?—Yes.

I suppose you know he was not a married man?—I did.

On your oath did he ever consult you before as far as hysterical lady?—I don't know whether for an hysterical lady.

For a lady who required remedies for her nerves?—Yes, for epilepsy.

When?—Two or more years before.

And you the curiosity to ask them who the lady was?—I did not.

Is it your habit, as a medical man, to prescribe at second hand for ladies when gentlemen consult you in respect of ladies?—I had not the most remote idea.

I am not asking that. If a man comes in and asks what is good for an hysterical lady, do you give chloroform?—No.

Did you ever give it before?—I did not.

Did you ever give it except when it was to be administered under your own care?—I did for patients I had.

Were they not under your own care?—Yes; but I did not administer it myself.

You could give it to a lady herself to take some drops, or to a gentleman to administer to his wife?—Yes.

But you never gave it to a gentleman before to administer to an unknown lady?—Not that I am aware of. I hope not.

I would not be surprised if it was given for a splint for a horse. For a splint for a horse?—Yes.

Upon your oath, did you ever hear him name Miss Arbuthnot?—I did not.

The Attorney-General then proceeded to contend that there had been a sufficient removal of Miss E. Arbuthnot from the car to satisfy the act. If she had been taken to Farna Castle it would have been an abduction; the same would have been the case if she were only taken to Fethlir, and so back to the door of the car. He could not see where the line of distinction was to be drawn.

Mr. Justice Bull.—The case, from its peculiar character, is without any precedent. I am called on to give two different directions where the distinction is reduced to the nicety even of a shade, and where the difficulties are necessarily great. Now, before I proceed to direct the jury, I would suggest to the Attorney-General to tell the jury there was a removal sufficient to satisfy the act, that the jury convict the prisoner of felony, and that the Court of Criminal Appeal be of opinion the indictment for the felony is not sustained; the result will be that Mr. Carden will be set at liberty, and then he cannot be tried even for the attempt to commit the felony. To avoid that it might be better to tell the jury there was not a removal sufficient to constitute the felony, but that there was an attempt to commit a felony.

The Attorney-General said he would assent to the course suggested.

Mr. Martley said, he would also assent to that, and let there be a conviction for the attempt to commit a felony.

Mr. Justice Bull.—Gentlemen of the jury, upon the evidence given, I have no hesitation in telling you the prisoner at the bar is guilty of an attempt to commit a felony, and the only question for you is, do you believe the evidence or not?

Several jurors.—We do.

Judge Ball.—Then, let the issue paper be sent up.

The jury immediately found the prisoner Not Guilty of the felony for which he was given in charge, but Guilty of an attempt to commit it.

[Lord Campbell's Act, 14 and 15 of Victoria, chapter 100, enabled the jury to take this medium course. The punishment for an attempt to commit a felony is two years' imprisonment, and time.]

The prisoner was then remanded.

CLONMEL, SATURDAY.—Mr. John Carden and three of his associates, named Henry Atkinson, James Atkinson, and Patrick Kinnearly, were this morning placed in the dock for the purpose of being tried upon an indictment charging them with feloniously assaulting John Smithwick, one of those who had resisted the attempted abduction of Miss Eleanor Arbuthnot.

The Right Hon. Mr. Justice Bull took his seat on the bench.

The Attorney-General, Mr. George, Q.C., and Mr. John Pennefather, appeared for the prosecution; Messrs. Martley, Q.C., Rolleston, Q.C., Lynch, Q.C., and Shaw, defended the prisoners.

The panel having been called over, and the prisoners being called on to plead.

Mr. Rolleston, Q.C., on behalf of Mr. Carden, handed in a plea.

The Attorney-General requested time to consider the plea, stating that he had never seen such a one before.

In reply to Judge Ball.

The Attorney-General said that the plea was both autrefois acquit of the felony, and autrefois convict of the attempt to commit felony.

The Attorney-General then retired from the court.

After a considerable delay,

The Attorney-General returned into court, and in reference to the plea put in by Mr. Carden's counsel said: We simply reply that he was not acquitted.

Judge Ball requested to be informed of the nature of the plea.

Mr. Martley stated that the plea put in by him was that the indictment ought not to be further presented, because the felony of which Mr. Carden had been acquitted on the previous day, but of the attempt to commit which he had been found guilty, was one and the same with the cutting and wounding of Smithwick. The recapitulation was that the prisoner had not been lawfully acquitted of the charge of felony or felonies, specified and charged in the present indictment. He might observe that for the purpose of joining issue it was not necessary for the Crown to have put in the counter plea.

Judge Ball: Issue is now joined, and let a jury be empanelled to try the issue between the Crown and John Carden.

The jury having been sworn,

Mr. Martley, said that Mr. Carden had been on the preceding day indicted for a felony; he was put upon his trial for the offence of feloniously carrying away a young lady with the intent to marry her. Of that felony he was acquitted upon the ground that although he had been guilty of the attempt, he did not succeed in effecting his purpose, and having been found guilty of the attempt, he would be visited with consequences highly penal—consequences which properly attached to the offence of which he had been found guilty. Notwithstanding what had taken place those acting for the Crown, in the exercise of their discretion, now thought fit to force on another trial for felony.

The Crown did not even proceed against Mr. Carden under the 10th Geo. 4, for the transportable misdemeanour; but the object was, if they could, to make the gentleman at the bar a felon. They would not even proceed under a recent statute, which awarded 4 years' penal servitude; but the indictment was for felony, and twenty-four counts in it ran the changes on it in every possible form against Mr. Carden, and the four or five other persons who were of his party, in order that, if proved guilty, he might be subjected to transportation for life. It was a great principle of the British law that no man should be put in his trial a second time for what was substantially the same offence; and, in substance, the offence with which Mr. Carden was now charged was identical with the charge upon which he had already been tried, and on the trial he had been acquitted of the felony. What was the common illegal object in which Mr. Carden and the other men were engaged?

The primary object charged was the abduction of Miss Eleanor Arbuthnot, and there was nothing to implicate him in the act of the other persons, except the circumstance that he was engaged in the commission of the felonious offence of abduction. Of that felony he had been tried and acquitted.

The indictment tried on the previous day, and the entry in the Crown book of the verdict found in relation to it, were then made evidence for the prisoner in this issue.

John Smithwick, examined by Mr. Rolleston, Q.C.: I remember the 2nd of July last. I saw Miss Gough's car, that day come up to the gate at Rathronan. I saw Mr. Carden there. I took his whip out of his hand. I saw one man at the end of the car on his left-hand side. I saw other men besides the one I have mentioned on several parts of the road. One of them struck me a blow on the head. I could not tell how many persons struck me, or how many blows I got. The blows were given with skulldozers. I was examined here yesterday, and swore that I am here on a Crown summons. I was examined yesterday as to everything that occurred. I remember Mr. Carden saying out "Murder!" and running away. It was after that I was struck.

Mr. Rolleston, attorney for Mr. Carden, examined: I was in court yesterday. I heard the evidence of Miss Arbuthnot, and of her sister, of Dwyer the coachman—of all the witnesses, in fact, except part of the direct testimony of Magrath. Evidence was given of the acts of Henry and James Atkinson on that occasion. It was deposed that they had skulldozers, and used them. There was an inquiry as to the conduct of the persons said to have been with Mr. Carden there.

This closed the evidence in the collateral issue.

The Attorney-General said he was not without a precedent in this case. He had very little doubt that his lordship remembered that of a celebrated person called Sam Gray. In the dusk of the evening, near his own house, he was walking home when he met three men. He was armed, and he fired at one of them, and shot him dead. He fired at the second and the third, and providentially missed them both. He was tried for the murder of the first, and every fact and circumstance connected with the case was given in evidence. He was acquitted of that charge. He was then tried for firing at the other two men, and he was convicted and sentenced. The same point was raised in that case that had been raised in the present one. The law certainly declared that for the same crime a man could not be twice put in peril. Mr. Carden had been tried on the previous day for abduction—he could not be tried for that again. He was now charged with having inflicted a grievous wound upon a man of the name of Smithwick; and whether or not the facts had shown that he was guilty of another and a different offence had no influence upon the present question.

After some discussion,

Judge Ball said he had no doubts on the subject, and would state his view to the jury.

The jury then retired to their room, taking with them the following issue:—"Whether the acquittal of the charge of abduction was an acquittal of the felony or felonies in the present indictment, viz., the cutting and wounding of John Smithwick, with intent to disfigure, &c."

After an absence of about an hour, the jury handed down the following verdict:—"We find that the acquittal of the charge of abduction is not an acquittal of the felony or felonies in this indictment."

They were then discharged, and the court adjourned.

CLONMEL, Monday Evening.—The Right Hon. Mr. Justice Bull took his seat in the Court-house shortly before 11 o'clock. The attendance in the galleries and elsewhere manifested the interest still felt in the proceedings. A considerable number of ladies were present.

The Attorney-General, Mr. George, Q.C., and Mr. Pennefather, with Mr. Keimins, prosecuted.

Mr. Carden was put on trial alone.

[The indictment has been already given in substance.]

The Attorney-General stated the case, and called a great number of witnesses to sustain the charge, but as the evidence is almost wholly similar to that adduced at the previous trial, it is quite unnecessary to reproduce it here. The jury pronounced Mr. Carden Not Guilty.

The Clerk of the Crown then informed Mr. Carden that he was about to be sentenced for the attempt at abduction, of which he had been convicted on Saturday, and he requested to make a few observations, after hearing which, Judge Ball passed sentence, concluding as follows:—"You may believe it is not without a pang that, in the discharge of my duty, I feel it essential to pronounce upon you the sentence of the Court, which is—that you be IMPRISONED FOR TWO YEARS, AND KEPT IN HARD LABOUR DURING THAT PERIOD."

The prisoner was then removed.

Some fresh and curious revelations in connection with the above case are made by the Clonmel correspondent of the Freeman's Journal, who writes as follows:—

"Mr. Carden had for some time been enacting measures for effecting his object, and finally decided upon conveying Miss Arbuthnot to Galway, where he had a steamer chartered for the purpose of taking her out to sea. Relays of horses were placed along the entire route from Rathronan to Galway. He intended, immediately on arriving at some pre-arranged point off Glidway Bay, to place his victim on board the steamer, which, in order to avoid exciting suspicion, was lying off the coast at some considerable distance from the harbour, and it was then his intention to have sailed direct for London. I understand that Mr. Carden has stated since his imprisonment to his confidential friends and advisers, that the preparations for his atrocious crime cost him no less a sum than £5,000."

Meanwhile the authorities have lost no time in putting the sentence passed on the culprit into practical effect. On Tuesday he was equipped in the garb of a convict, and at once set to work at "hard labour."

Our Opera-Glass.

The metropolis begins to give manifest token that our London summer season is rapidly drawing to a close. Belgravia no longer resounds with the noise of carriages bearing their aristocratic burthens to rout, ball, or assembly. Shutters are close-barred, chandeliers "buggled," and powder and plush are scarcely to be met with. The sun-side and the moors are now the places of resort of our fashionables, and such as can leave the smoke, bricks, mortar, and everlasting din in ever-busy London. Our theatrical managers are themselves taking the hint, and, one by one, closing their theatres, packing up their fardels, and hastening to get a sniff of the briny, or an origami from France.

The little Adolphi has, for one month, closed its portals—though neither heat nor cold, rain nor wind, ever seems to affect it or cause a diminution in the numbers who nightly laugh away the hours most merrily. The theatre has been closed in order that it may undergo an entire cleansing and re-decoration, and our old friend will, early in September, come out quite strong, with a new face. Madame Celeste, Miss Woulgar, and Miss Mary Keeley, with Mr. B. Webster, Mr. Paul Bedford, and Mr. Parsello, are off to Liverpool, and on Monday next, will delight the Liverpudlians at the Theatre Royal, by appearing in some of their most popular characters. At Liverpool they intend pitching their tents for a fortnight, at the expiration of which time they will proceed to Birmingham for a like period. "Masks and Faces," "The Tartuffe," "The Thirst of Gold," &c., are among the pieces which will be presented during the stay of these inimitable comedians in the provinces.

Buckstone finds that the bright eyes and twinkling steps of the Nena are drawing him right down crowded houses, so that he has not yet sounded the warning note, but still goes on merrily as "marriage bells."

The Olympic closes next week, and Mr. Wigan we think, may congratulate himself upon having achieved a very great success on his first essaying to become a manager. Little Robson has contrived to pull the management through triumphantly; this riant son of Momus goes to Dublin and thence to Liverpool.

The Strand will continue its season with several novelties which are now in course of preparation.

Miss Romer announces an English version of Le Prophète at the Surrey, for Monday evening. It is said that neither pains nor expense have been spared on this Opera; remembering the "Huguenots" and some other operas presented under this lady's management, we may safely take her word that the novelty will be given with every regard to finish and effect.

CREMORNE.—FLEMING NATIONAL REGATTA.—Very extensive preparations are making at these delightful gardens for the distinguished company who have promised their support to, and are expected to take a part in the above national enterprise, which is appointed to come off on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, at Putney; the committee having arranged with Mr. Simpson for the evening meetings to take place at Cremorne; and for the distribution of the numerous prizes there by the Lord Mayor. We understand that the aggregate amount these prizes very considerably exceeds in value and variety those of any former year, being estimated at between £ and £600 pounds; and we are happy to find that the best prizes are not confined to amateurs on the Thames, but are, in a truly British spirit, liberally thrown open to the world, which will no doubt induce a competition rarely witnessed, as the prizes are really worth contending for; being £100 for four oars, £30 for pair oars, and £20 for sculls. The Plate consists of appropriate emblematical vases, cups, &c.; indeed, the whole of the prizes, including a very beautiful boat, will be exhibited at the gardens during the three days, in a pavilion expressly designed and erected for the occasion, with every accommodation for the Lord Mayor's retinue, the committee, subscribers, and their ladies. Should the weather prove propitious there is no doubt the prize-worthy efforts of the committee will be responded to in the most liberal manner. The cups were shown on Wednesday last at "The Lily Club," and elicited the highest admiration.

The much-talked-of Parachute tralicame off successfully at these gardens on Tuesday last. At the advertised time, seven o'clock, the Royal Cremorne Balloon was released from her moorings, ascending with great rapidity, and taking a course directly over London, prevented the possibility of the aeronaut releasing the parachute within sight of the Gardens, as was intended; but as soon as an available space appeared, which did not occur till Kingsland was reached, the bolt was drawn, inflation immediately took place, and the extraordinary resisting power was practically shown by a very steady and perfectly safe descent.

RAILWAYS AND TELEGRAPHS.

A RAILWAY BRIDGE ON FIRE.—The Southern Times says that a train of the South Western Railway, which left Dorchester on Saturday morning last, experienced a most providential escape from total destruction, and fearful loss of life. On reaching a wooden viaduct between Poole and Wimborne, which is of great height from the ground, the bridge was discovered to be on fire to the extent of 20 or 30 feet. The draught through the interstices caused the flames to rage with great violence, but after much difficulty they were extinguished by the passengers and officials. It is supposed that a burning cinder from a passing engine must have ignited the wood-work of the bridge.

SUBMARINE TELEGRAPH.—On Saturday, July 22, one end of the Submarine Telegraph rope was dropped in the harbour of Spezzia, by the Persian, which left immediately for Corsica, uncoiling the rope as she went. Intelligence has been also received that this the first portion of the great Mediterranean submarine telegraph from Spezzia, in Piedmont, to Cape Corso, in Corsica, a distance of about 100 miles, has been successfully laid down, as well as the communication across the Straits of Bonifacio, a distance of about 10 miles, from Corsica to the island of Sardinia. It is also understood that the contractors, Messrs. Tupper and Carr, are nearly ready with the remaining 150 miles of cable to connect Capo Spartivento, the southern point of Sardinia, with the African coast, where it will join the Algerian lines. The above event was celebrated by a salute from 21 guns.

ITALY, CAPE CORSO, July 25.—The laying down of the submarine telegraph from Spezzia to the island of Corsica—an event of world-wide importance—has just been most satisfactorily accomplished. As I conclude this, a gun has been fired on board the Persian by an electric spark passing twice to Santa Croce and back, through the whole length of the cable on board and in the water—that is, along 440 miles of wire, awakening the echoes of the Corsican hills with the tidings of their now being joined to the main land by ties, which it may be hoped will be found productive of the happiest results to all parties.

COPENHAGEN, July 27.—The Flensborg railway advances rapidly. The 40 feet long iron-bridge over Angolbo-street excites general astonishment. Its construction is similar to that of the Britannia-bridge. The station buildings are not yet ready. The official technical controller, Captain Ovesen, has given great satisfaction by his talent and urbanity, without which the line would have been thrown back, as is the case with the Roskilde-Korsør line, where Major Dreier has done much mischief. As to the continuation of the Flensborg line northward to Frederikshaven, which has been done. As I foresaw, nothing will come of the plans for railways in Sweden. Between the two stools—Mr. Peto's scheme, and that of the Government—the whole movement falls to the ground. The parliamentary committee accepts neither. It has decided on recommending a commission to inquire into the lines laid down in the drawing for South Sweden, and to report on the same to the next Diet. It grants a sum of 100,000 r.d. bko. for this purpose.

BEALON LODGE, No. 502—STAR AND GARTER, NEW BRIDGE.—The brethren of this Lodge, which is rapidly progressing in numbers and efficient members, will meet on Wednesday, 10th instant, for the purpose of installing the W. M. elect Brother W. Watson, P. M., No. 23. We need not dilate upon our brethren's excellence; suffice it that no one connected with the craft of the present day works more for the promotion of the order, which has won him the golden and deserved opinion of his brethren in Freemasonry. What will make the ceremony still more interesting is, that Brother Bealon, P. G. S. W., in compliment to the Lodge, and to do honour to a worthy brother, will officiate as installing Master; this, coupled with the well-known catering and liberality of P. M. Brother Adams' fine host, the locality of New Gardens, advantage of rail, omnibus, and steam-boat, will offer a day of recreation and enjoyment, as well as one of instruction, to its members.

SCOTLAND.—MASONIC INSTALLATION OF LORD PANMURE AS PROVINCIAL GRAND-MASTER.—Dundee was enlivened on Thursday by a masonic demonstration. The object of the meeting was the installation of Lord Panmure into the office of Provincial Grand-Master, to which he was appointed by the Grand Lodge of Scotland on the demise of his Lordship's father. Everything went off to the entire satisfaction of all present conducted by Brother Laurie, secretary to the Grand Lodge of Scotland. Lord Panmure, in a most elegant and truly masonic speech, congratulated the Brethren upon the auspicious events of the day, assuring them that though this was the first of the provincial meetings under his chairmanship, they should very soon find it would not be the last.—Dundee Advertiser.

CORNWALL.—The Provincial Grand Lodge and Festival of the Free and Accepted Masons of Cornwall was held this year at Callington, on Tuesday week, and on the occasion a large number of Brethren from the several Cornish Lodges, as also from those of Devonshire, were present. The lodge was close tyled at half-past ten o'clock; the Brethren walked in procession to the parish church, where the service was read by the Rev. Henry Farwell Roe, and an excellent sermon preached by the Provincial Grand Chaplain, the Rev. H. Grylls, M.A., Vicar of St. Neots, who took for his text Micah vi. 8. After the service the Brethren returned in procession to the Lodge, when the annual business was transacted. The Deputy Provincial Grand Master, Brother Ellis, of Falmouth, performed the duties in the absence of Sir Charles Lemon, the Provincial Grand Master. The collars for the ensuing year were given to Brother Smith (Governor of Scilly Islands), as Provincial Grand Senior Warden; to Brother Childs, of Liskeard, as Provincial Grand Junior Warden; to Brother Pearce, of Penzance, Provincial Grand Treasurer; to Brother Molesworth, of St. Aubyn, as Provincial Grand Sword Bearer. Brothers Kempthorne and Peter, of Callington, also were invested with provincial honours. Several votes of charity were made to poor Brethren. The Deputy Provincial Grand Master (Ellis) paid a complimentary tribute to Brother Kempthorne for the excellent working of his Lodge, and published the proceedings of the Lodge by delivering a very able lecture to the Brethren. The Lodge was then closed, and at three o'clock the Brethren assembled at Golding's Hotel, and partook of a splendid dinner. The Deputy Provincial Grand Master Ellis presided. After the loyal and masonic toasts were given, the ladies were admitted, and seemed anxious to gather all the secrets they possibly could. The Royal Marine Band was in attendance, and the following Provincial Grand officers belonging to the Devonshire Lodge:—Brothers T. Russell Maynard, Jenkin Thomas, Killingly, T. Pollard, and Schlesinger. Visiting Brethren W. Dament, W. M., of Lodge 224, E. W. Cole, W. M., Lodge Fortitude, J. C. Hancock, P. Marshall, R. A FREEMASON TAKEN BY PIRATES.—Under our "Naval Intelligence" we have noticed a case of Piracy, in connection with which the following details have just been received by Captain Halstead, R.N., secretary to Lloyd's, from their agent at Porto Rico.

"St. John's, Porto Rico, July 6, 1854.

"This morning came in the British sloop Sea Flower, Captain Thomas, master, from Port au Plat (Hayti), and reports that on the 23rd ultimo, when about twenty-five miles west of the end of this island (say in the Mona Passage), she was stopped and overhauled by a fast-sailing schooner of about 125 tons, armed with long brass guns (18 pounders on a pivot, and two small guns, one on each side), and manned by about 60 to 70 white men of all nations, or at least speaking all languages; showed no colours, had on deck a blue signalled flag, with a red square on it; no small arms were seen, but there was a large chest on deck that may have contained them. Could not make out which was the captain; a tall man with a long red beard, whom Mr. Thomas supposed might have been the commander, as he was the most active in speaking, giving orders. He appears himself to be under the control of a smaller individual, who spoke less but gave signs that were obeyed by the first mentioned. The man with the red beard he thinks was an American, or, as he expresses it, "Yankee," from a peculiarity in his way of speaking. The vessel was detained for a day and a half, and when cast adrift a ship and a brig was in sight, towards which the schooner made for. The vessel was robbed of 2½ coil (of half coils) of cordage, and the captain's coat was taken by one of the men that boarded the sloop. Capt. Thomas, who was taken on board of the schooner the moment she came alongside, was kept there the whole time. He believes his being a freemason saved him from being robbed, as his trunk was taken on board the schooner, and upon its being opened his masonic apron, sash, &c., presented themselves. He then saw signs pass from one to the other, who wore on board. They treated him well all the time, and sent back his trunk without touching its contents. The little money he had was in gold, visible in the trunk, but it was not touched. The supposition is that the vessel is either a pirate or a Russian privateer, waiting for the Royal West India Mail steamers, which come up that way from Jamaica, Cuba, to St. Thomas, &c., and are known to have large amounts of silver dollars, &c., on board almost every voyage."

Bits and Spurs.

WANT OF SPACE.—An editor at a dinner table, being asked if he would take some pudding, replied in a fit of abstraction, "owing to a crowd of other matter I am unable to find room for it."

A SWIMMING WAGER.—We understand there is a Staffordshire gentleman staying at the Imperial Hotel, who has offered to make a bet of £100 to swim from Cork to Queen's-town.

SPIDERS AND THE WEATHER.—If the weather is likely to become rainy, windy, or in any other respects disagreeable, spiders fix their terminating filaments, on which the whole web is suspended, unusually short. If these filaments are made unusually long, the weather will be serene for ten or twelve days. If spiders be totally indolent, rain generally succeeds; their activity during rain, on the other hand, being a sign that it would be only of brief continuance, to be followed by fair weather. Spiders generally make some alterations in their webs every twenty-four hours. If these changes take place in the evening they indicate a pleasant night.

THE ARCTIC EXPEDITION.—An Admiralty order has been received in Limerick for £468, payable to a poor man named Hickie, as wages due to his son, Cornelius Hickie, shipwright on board the lost Erebus and Terror, exploring expedition of Admiral Sir John Franklin.

FARINGDON.—SPARROW CLUB.—It is now fully determined to establish a sparrow club in this town, the meetings of which will be held at Mr. Smith's, the Folly Inn; a large number has joined the list, and Tuesday evening next is fixed to meet at the Folly Inn to frame the rules and make all preliminary arrangements for the completion of the club.

THE BEAR AND THE BOOTJACK.—A request made by Prince Gortschakoff on Sunday last at Vienna was refused, and this so incensed the "courtly diplomatist" that he would receive no visits during the whole day, and vented his wrath on one of the waiters, whom he beat with a bootjack.

DISTINGUISHED FOREIGNERS.—Amongst the cargo of the Ripon, arrived last week at Southampton, was a living hippopotamus from the White Nile, a dog-faced and a whiskered monkey, also a civet cat—all three from Nubia, and 28 live she-goats from Egypt. The hippopotamus is a female, about 9 months old. It was caught in a net in the Upper Nile, and when caught it was about the length of a man's arm. It floundered about much before it was secured. It is now a huge monster. It has been kept in Egypt in order to reach England in the hot weather. It had a strong wooden house, consisting of a dormitory and bath-room on the main deck. Its name is Adela, and it seems to recognise the name when pronounced by its Arab keeper. It had two keepers—one a native Arab, and the other a person connected with the Regent's-park Zoological Gardens. It was fed on corn, meal, and milk, morning and evening. The milk was obtained from the 28 she-goats on board, which afforded about a bucketful twice a day. It was in its bath about twenty hours out of the twenty-four, and oftentimes entirely buried its body, with the exception of one ear. It sleeps in its dormitory with the Arab, resting its huge head on the latter. If the latter leaves, it exhibits uneasiness, and the Arab is obliged to go to it, and to shout out "Adela, here I am." The Arab occasionally dogs it with a stick, as if it were a dog. It must have light both in its bath and sleeping room. Its bath was a fresh-water one daily. The hippopotamus now in the Zoological Gardens is a male, and should these animals breed their young will be the greatest curiosities in natural history ever seen in this country. The dog-faced monkey is with young, and is one of the most sagacious ever seen in England. The goats are of a peculiar breed, and there was great difficulty in getting them from Alexandria.

THE TURKISH TRANSPORT FOR TURKEY.—Each officer has a good sized cabin to himself, with a stowage in it; and a dining cabin, in which fifty could dine comfortably. They breakfast at nine (I give you the fare of one day, being a fair sample)—Cold fowls, ham, pickled salmon, curry and rice, hot fry, hash, tea, coffee, and eggs. Twelve o'clock, lunch, with port, sherry, brandy, and malt. Three o'clock, dinner, soup, roast leg mutton, roast ducks, bodied fowl (twice laid), tripe stew, roll pudding, gooseberry tart, dessert, &c.; port, sherry, claret, malt. Seven o'clock, tea, with preserves, butter, honey. Eight to ten o'clock, spirits and wines, biscuits, &c. Time filled up with reading, writing, gossiping, smoking, watching the progress by the land, &c. I believe that few have much to complain of. Sunday all dress in their best, have prayers, and appear attentive. Occasionally falling in with a transport, and, if French, all hands speedily cheering, which is always returned.

SMITH LARK AND LONG MOURNING.—The Court of Mecklenburg-Strelitz has gone into mourning for fourteen days for the infant son of Duke George, which survived its birth at St. Petersburg three hours.

THE SAMPOON OF SILISTHIA.—I have not yet done with the wonders of the Arab Tabia. The Russians, in order to dislodge the Arnaouts from their ditch, carried their own trenches within a few yards from that paltry defence, which was formidable only because the bravest men that ever lived held it. So near was the Russian ditch, that the engineers threw the earth by shovelfuls into the Arnaout ditch. This was effected with an enormous loss to the besiegers. On one occasion a Major Emmena, a gigantic Hungarian, issued from the ditch leaning on the pole of a wagon, and challenged the Russians in the other ditch to come out and fight him. They accepted the challenge by taking hold of one of his legs, and endeavoured to drag him into their quarters. But the Arnaouts took hold of his other leg, and pulled him in their direction, while Major Emmena, utterly unconcerned, flourished his heavy pole and laid it on the Russians. Skulls were cracked and bones broken wherever that formidable weapon descended, and thus being freed from his assailants the Arnaouts drew Major Emmena over. That gallant officer's life was saved on this occasion, only to be lost on another.

THE GUARDS' CLUB, AT ALDYEN, NEAR VARNNA.—The Guards, animated with the recollections of Pall-mall and St. James's, have established a club in their quarters. There is not much gilding or plate glass about it, but it is a social pleasant place enough, and, for a camp, quite a refinement. It is merely a large square bower, the roof and sides of which are formed of slates, interlaced with small boughs of trees; and one compartment thus serves for the salon-a-manger, drawing, smoking, reading, and visitors' rooms. Here, towards the cool of the evening, most of the officers rendezvous to exchange old newspapers, and while away the hours in the consumption of the fragrant weed; and here, as a matter of course, all news and camp chat takes its origin and circulates throughout remote divisions. Without a visit to the club, we should never know the accurate weight of the last perch which Major Blank, of the Highlanders, drew from Lake Devna with a single line, nor how many doves were shot and hares seen in one day by young Swankie, of the Guards. Here, also, we learn on what particular part of his anatomy Captain So-and-so was pitched, in trying to make a Turkish horse take a fence; and who formed the last party which started for Shumla, where they broke down, and when they returned, fatigued and disappointed. Conversation such as this, upon the few incidents which occur to break the dull monotony of our lives, form the principal attractions of the club, to which each visitor brings his own tin pot and spoon; and Mr. Grace, the keeper of an extensive kind of canteen store, and general restaurateur to the division, supplies cold brandy and water, bitter ale, &c., at very profitable prices. Altogether, the Guards' Club is rather a favorite place of resort, and its establishment has done much to relieve the tedium of ordinary camp life at Aldyen; though the 1st division must get up athletic games if they want to eclipse the rest entirely.

INCREASE IN THE STRENGTH OF THE NATION.—In 1821 the number of males in Great Britain under 20 years of age and the number above 20 were nearly equal. The census of 1851 reveals a very different state of things. The increase in the young population (under 20) since 1821 has been rather more than 2,500,000; the increase in the adult population (above 20) has been more than 4,000,000. The males at the soldier's age of 20 to 40 amounted to 1,966,664 in 1821, and to 3,193,496 in 1851; the increase in the 30 years is equivalent in number to a vast army of more than 1,200,000 men. While the population under 20 increased 37 per cent., the population between 20 and 40 increased 60 per cent. Assuming, as may fairly be assumed, that the population under the age of 10 years, and the great bulk of the population of the age of 70 and upwards, are chiefly sustained by the industry of the population living in the middle period of life, extending from the age of 20 to the age of 60, it will be found that in 1821 the 6,367,991 persons of the middle age sustained 4,355,166 children and old persons, or 68 per cent. of their own number; while in 1851 only 5,797,295 ineffective by age (57 per cent.) were sustained by 10,082,296 of effective population. Tested by these facts, the strength of the nation has increased faster than its numbers.—Census Report.

OAKS.—Mincement.

The above specimen of success must convince all concerned in sporting affairs of the superiority of his information; and as he detests rigmorale and puff, refrains from "sounding his own trumpet." One trial will convince every one; therefore try his advice on the events of next week. Terms—full meeting, 5s.; single event, 2s. 6d.; to the end of the season, 11s. Enclose a supply of addressed stamped envelopes. Address, 15, Charing Cross. Post-office orders made payable at Charing Cross. Stamps taken.

VIRAGO, BRIBERY, HEAPY, &c.—YOUATT

WILLIAM GRAY sent Virago to win the Goodwood Cup immediately on the appearance of the weights, and never changed his opinion. For the Goodwood Stakes I sent Tros only, previous to the acceptance, and then at 30 to 1, with advice not to lay against Adine and Bribery; consequently must have been very valuable to subscribers that made a book, and of course to them is a win. My concluding advice was, "Should Heapy go back in the betting be on him." This horse went back to 12 to 1. Tros saw hedging at 4 to 1, which must have been a very profitable investment to those who acted on my advice. I also stuck to it in my last "Issue" not to lay against "Bribery." If any one has a right to claim the actual winner it is me, but I cannot have the audacity to claim as having sent the mare to win for all that. Heapy ought to have won.

DONCASTER ST. LEGER.—I am satisfied that this Race will be won by an outsider, and now at 50 to 1. There is no mistake in this, as I have got all the secret through very peculiar circumstances, and almost similar to the way I gained the information of Andover for the Derby, when at 50 to 1, and Mincement for the Oaks at 20 to 1. Terms, 5s. and per centage; send addressed and stamped envelopes. To the end of the season, 11s. Address, 15, Charing Cross. P. O. Orders made payable at Charing Cross.

AN EXTRAORDINARY AND RAPID CURE OF ERYSIPELAS IN THE LEG, AFTER MEDICAL AID HAD FAILED.
Copy of a Letter from Mrs. Elizabeth Yates, of the Post-office, Aldwick-road, near Bognor, Sussex, dated January 12th, 1853.

Sir,—I suffered for a considerable period from a severe attack of Erysipelas, which at length settled in my leg, and resisted all medical treatment. My sufferings were very great, and I quite despaired of any permanent amendment, when I was advised to have recourse to your Ointment and Pills. I did so without delay, and am happy to say the result was eminently successful, for they effected a radical cure of my leg, and restored me to the enjoyment of health. I shall ever speak with the utmost confidence of your medicines, and have recommended them to others in this neighbourhood similarly afflicted, who derived equal benefit.

I am, Sir, your obliged and faithful Servant,

CAUTION.

MESSRS. ALLSOPP AND SONS find it necessary to caution the Public, and especially Shippers of their Ales to the Colonies, against Frauds committed by parties in selling spurious Ales for the name of Messrs. Allsopp and Sons.

Messrs. ALLSOPP AND SONS have felt compelled by the extent to which this illegal and fraudulent business has been carried on, to proceed in several cases by obtaining injunctions from the Court of Chancery, and have ultimately been driven to prosecute criminally for the commission of this offence. They beg to call attention to the Case of THE QUEEN v. GRAY and GOSLIN, in which LORD CAMPBELL sentenced the parties charged to "Twelve Months Imprisonment, with Hard Labour." Vide "Times" and "Morning Advertiser" of the 10th May.

Messrs. ALLSOPP AND SONS will thank all persons having reason to doubt the genuineness of any article sold under their name, to send them the earliest information, in order that immediate steps may be taken for prosecuting the parties.

Messrs. ALLSOPP AND SONS will be happy to furnish the Names of respectable Houses, where a supply of their Ales may be depended on, as genuine from the Brewery.

MOORE'S PATENT MOVEABLE GLASS VENTILATOR,

PERFECT VENTILATION GUARANTEED.

An Effectual REMEDY FOR SMOKY Chimnies.

TARIFFS MAY BE HAD.

EFFECTUALLY REMOVED FROM SHUT-WINDOWS.

The two louvre Ventilator (see engraving), from 6s. each.

For Windows, Partitions, Factories, Workshops, Warehouses, Greenhouses, Cottages, Stabling, Granaries, and other Buildings, Railway & Private Carriage, &c.

In Churches and Public Buildings, also in Stilling and Bed Rooms, Nurseries, and enclosed places generally, where people assemble, the impure air of the breath, the burnt air of the lights, the odour of dishes, &c., is always heated, and therefore specifically light, all ascend itself towards the ceiling; but as, in ordinary rooms, no opening exists there for escape, they soon contaminate the whole of the air in the room to the level of the chimney mouth, from which only can any portion ultimately pass away. From this arises great, though often unperceived, injury to the health, and finally to the constitution of the inmates.

For Farms, Dairies, Outbuildings, &c., the Ventilator can be made to form a complete Window, Iron Frames, and Rough Plate Glass, &c.

Ventilators made to any size, and to most forms of Sashes; also for Sky or Fan Lights, and other purposes.

A considerable saving and additional safety by having fixed Window Sashes.

MOORE'S PATENT "LEVEL VENTILATOR" forming a regular current of air, is calculated to effect all that is required for improving animal and vegetable health. The vitiated air is emitted at the opening left for that purpose.

To Smoke-pers they are particularly recommended, as from their capabilities of removing the foul air caused by the gas in the shop and windows, they effectually preserve the stock in good condition, and prevent explosion of gas.

They can be fitted into Metal Sashes if required.

Stained and other Ornamental Glass Louvres to correspond with design of Window.

WATER POISONED

BY
PIPES.

"The above engraving represents accurately a section of a leaden pipe, which was employed for a short time in conveying water from a well on the grounds of Mr. Dick, of Bournemouth, Isle of Wight. The original section of pipe is 8 1/2 in. long, 2 1/2 in. diameter, and 5-10 in. thick. A great part of the internal surface is corroded by the action of the water; but, as shown in the drawing, four deep excavations have been made, and another is shaded out of view by the manner in which the section of the pipe has been cut. The water has run these deep pits almost through the pipe, and not only upon the portion which we have illustrated, but has formed similar channels throughout the entire length."—Expositor.

DURABILITY OF GUTTA PERCHA TUBING.

Many inquiries having been made as to the durability of Gutta Percha Tubing, the Gutta Percha Company

(Second Testimonial.)

March 10th, 1862.

"In reply to your letter received this morning, respecting the Gutta Percha Tubing for pump service, I can state, with much satisfaction, it answers perfectly. Many builders and other persons have lately examined it, and there is not the least apparent difference since the first laying down, many several years; and I am informed that it is to be adapted generally in the houses that are being erected here."

THE FIELD SUPPLEMENT

VOL. IV.—No. 84.]

SATURDAY, AUGUST 5, 1854.

[GRATIS.]

THE FIELD OF WAR.

OUR WOODEN WALLS.

THE BALTIC FLEET.

PREPARATIONS FOR ACTIVE WAR.

H.M.S. —, Baltic Fleet, Ledsund, south of the Aland Islands, July 25.

The allied squadron left Baro Sound on the 18th inst. The French division of the fleet first proceeded from the anchorage, followed by the rear division of the squadron, under Admiral Chads. The van, under the orders of Admiral Corry, next swept by, while the centre division, led by the leviathan Duke of Wellington, brought out the remaining force of this mighty host of naval armics. The ships present, manned with about 24,000 and some odd hundred men, formed immediately, as soon as they had gained sea room, and sailed in the following order:—

Van.	Centre.	Rear.
Neptune	Duke of Wellington	Edinburgh
Monarch	Hogue	Cressy
Cumberland	Acre	Cesar
Prince Regent	Blenheim	Royal George
St. George	Princess Royal	Nile
	James Watt	Ajax

The steam-frigates Arrogant, Amphion, and Dauntless were sent forward in advance, on the starboard beam, to reconnoitre. The paddle-wheel steam-frigates Penelope, Magicienne, and Basilisk looked out ahead. The Impérieuse and Dragon were left behind in Baro Sound with orders to proceed to join the squadron of observation off Helsingfors, in which service three French frigates and the Euryalus, Rosamond, and Desperate, were employed. The Desperate has since joined the squadron at this anchorage, and her place opposite Helsingfors has been taken by the Magicienne. As the fleet proceeded in the order specified out of the Gulf of Finland, the French ships formed a fourth line. The Lightning, Alban, and Pigmy, did the duty of mounted aides-de-camp, galloping here and there, with orders between the lines. The Belleisle, hospital-ship, sailed between the English and French columns.

The block ships got under weigh from here early on Saturday and proceeded up to Bomarsund. The force under Admiral Chads consists of Edinburgh, Blenheim, Ajax, Hogue, Leopard, Amphion, Basilisk, Alban, Zephyr, Locust, Lightning. The Valorons must either be patched up or sent to England, or else she must be docked in one of the friendly Swedish naval ports. The French ships and the Arrogant anchored on Saturday afternoon (22nd). On the same afternoon a slow and steady booming of cannon wafted over the waters, from the direction of Bomarsund, broke the stillness of the rural scenes by which we are surrounded, the suspicion naturally arose that the block ships were engaging the enemy's batteries. After about an hour's duration the firing ceased, and it was only late in the evening, on the return of the Lightning, that we were informed of the cause of the cannonade. While the ships were running into the anchorage the forts fired upon them. All the shot fell short, although some of them came close. The ships did not return the fire. They increased the distance a little between themselves and the forts, and then let go their anchors.

One of the Russian soldiers has succeeded in desecrating from the forts, and is now on board the Leopard. Several others attempted the same feat, but were shot in the attempt. Captain Sullivan, of the Lightning, has just made a prisoner of a police-constable, or some such functionary in uniform, on one of the islands. He calls himself a Consul and Sheriff.

OUR FRENCH ALLIES.

COPENHAGEN, July 30.—The vessels Prince, Fox, Vantour, and Herefordshire, on board of which are a portion of the 3rd and the 51st of the line, passed at 12 o'clock at noon before Copenhagen, pursuing their voyage in the Baltic. The health and behaviour of our soldiers are excellent. A letter from Elsinore, dated June 25, says,—"The Imperial yacht Reine Hortense has sailed again for Copenhagen, where she will take on board General Baraguay d'Hilliers. The Fulton, with two other vessels in tow, passed yesterday evening, but without stopping in our roadstead. In the night there also arrived the French frigate the Asmodée, towing the Saint Louis, and the English frigate Termagant, having in tow two sailing-frigates laden with troops. Our troops are received with the utmost sympathy.

COPENHAGEN, July 26.—The hired steam-transport Junus, with French troops on board, sailed last night for the Baltic, and the Holyrood steam-transport arrived at the same time for the north. The three French transport-steamers, with troops on board, which arrived at Elsinore, have gone on.

DANZIG, July 26.—The French paddle-wheel steamer Lucifer sailed for the French fleet with 70 oxen, and a large quantity of fowls, fresh butter, eggs and vegetables. The hired steamer Frederick Franz arrived last night from Baro Sound to fetch provisions for the British fleet.

KIEL, July 27.—A French squadron, consisting of a line-of-battle ship (the Tilsit, 90), two frigates, and three war steamers, all with troops on board, has arrived in the bay. The steamers, Coccyto, Gooland, and Laborieux, are taking in coal. A good many of the officers have got leave, and are gone to Hamburg by the railroad. The French line-of-battle ship St. Louis, 90, got ashore last evening in the outer roads, in attempting to enter the port.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 20.—The British and French ships of war at Sulina are capturing several Greek and other vessels, going in and coming out (mostly with cargoes), which they are sending down here under escort.

LAD SOUND, ALAND.—The French ships are in fine order, and, as they let go anchor and furled sails, it was the admiration of the whole fleet. It is discovered, however, that in the process of furling they omit to take in two reefs, thus making their evolutions appear very rapid.

Off Bomarsund the French ships have the English ensign at the masthead, and the English fly the French colours. This looks like action.

SAILING OF TROOPS.

CHOLERA ON BOARD A TRANSPORT SHIP.

PLYMOUTH.—The Lord Auckland, from London for the East Indies, with drafts for the 60th Rifles, the 10th, 24th, and 87th Regiments, consisting of Lieutenant Steer, 7 ensigns, and 184 men, put into the Sound on Monday morning, the cholera having broken out on board. She had gone as far as lat. 40, when she put back on account of the sickness. There were seventeen cases and three deaths. A hulk has been sent out as an hospital ship, and the sick will be removed from the Lord Auckland with all possible speed. The Lord Auckland left London on the 17th.

"LOOK TO THE COMPASS!"—The Tynemouth (No. 102) arrived at Constantinople on the 17th ult. and was despatched immediately to Varna. This fine new screw-ship was on several occasions nearly lost, more especially off Dungeness, and again off Cape Finisterre, and was taken upwards of 100 miles out of her course, and certainly was three days longer on her voyage from England to Malta than she would otherwise have been, had her compasses been correct; but they varied two points, though it was thought every precautionary measure had been taken previous to the vessel's leaving England. Her preservation is due to the great zeal and caution of her commander, Lieutenant Dundas, R.N. The passengers on board describe his anxiety to have been something painful to witness, and so great as to have made him positively ill. The military surgeon on board offered his assistance in a medical way, which he declined, knowing medicine could have no beneficial effect. All observed his anxiety, but for a long time he prudently concealed the cause. At last he told a scientific gentleman on board that he could not trust to the compasses, and was steering by observation. This led to a very strict investigation of the binnacles, and, by the aid of a small magnet, it was found that, in the cover which was put on at night to hold the lights, the bottom was strengthened by a rim, and inside this rim was inserted a piece of iron wire. This they removed, and immediately the compasses became correct, and thus by a piece of neglect in the maker of the compasses this fine vessel and all on board ran great risk of being lost, and doubtless would have perished had it not been for the extraordinary care of the captain. Probably other vessels—for instance, the Tayleur—may have been lost from some such simple cause. The compasses have the names of Hewitson, Newcastle, on them.

TROOPS ON THE MARCH, OR UNDER ORDERS FOR FOREIGN SERVICE.

The Adjutant-General proceeds to Turkey as a Major-General upon the staff. Brigadier-General Torrens and Brigadier-General Goldie also proceed to Turkey. Lieut.-Col. Francis Seymour is to be Assistant Adjutant-General, and Colonel Ash Windham Assistant Quartermaster-General, on the Staff in Turkey.

Thirty-four gunners of the Royal Artillery arrived in the garrison at Woolwich from Portsmouth on Saturday, at 7 p.m., in charge of a non-commissioned officer, having volunteered to join the companies under orders for service in the East.

THE TURKS AND THE RUSSIANS.

THE BASHI-BAZOUKS.

In consequence of the war in the East a more than common interest has been given to these wild species of freebooters, who form an important arm of the Turkish force, especially as an attempt is about to be made to discipline them by placing them under European officers accustomed to bring Arabs and Indians within military rule. Our three illustrations convey a most truthful representation of these fearful-looking soldiers of fortune, ready to fight for pay or plunder or anything, and, we fear, nearly on any side.

THE IMAM (MAHOMEDAN PRIEST) BLESSING BASHI-BAZOUKS AT THE SIRASKIERAT, CONSTANTINOPLE.

The Bashî-Bazonks constitute a corps of irregular Turkish cavalry. They come from all points of the empire, and from every Mussulman territory. Among them may be found Asiatic Turks, Kurds, Tchérkess, Egyptians, Tripolitans, Tunisians, Algerian Arabs, and Kabyles. These wild people, with their native costume, form the most varied and picturesque groups that can be imagined. These men go to the war for pillage and destruction, and we must avow that they are by nature admirably fitted for their employment. With their magnificently draped rags they might pass for the bandits of Salavator Rosa. They look well at a distance when going through their evolutions, but when seeing them de file from the depths of a forest more than one valorous heart would beat with emotion.

Without discipline, obeying only the chief of their choice; without pay, and consequently without the means of subsistence,—these soldiers are of necessity pillagers. All the country between the fortified positions of the Turks and the advanced posts of the Russians has been ravaged by them. Still these men are susceptible of discipline, and we doubt not with energetic leaders and a pay which shall place them beyond the reach of absolute want, they may become a regular and effective corps for scouring the country. For this purpose several hundred have arrived at Varna from the advanced posts; others will follow to the amount of 4,000. They are to receive tenpence a day and a ration of barley and bread. With these means they will provide for themselves and their horses. Their conditions are so favourable for people habituated to procure what they need by force, that there is every reason to believe that all that is required of them, both morally and physically, may be achieved.

THE WAR IN EUROPE.

RETREAT OF THE RUSSIANS.

The evacuation of the Principalities by the Russians must be for strategic reasons, as no official communication of the fact has been made by the Czar to the Austrian Government. The Diplomatist Gortschakoff has been informed that after the Emperor of Austria has joined the army no further negotiations relative to the evacuation of the Principalities can be carried on. On the 27th of July the Russians quitted, and the Turks occupied, Brateschi. The Russians were retreating in forced marches to Schelava, and thence to Poposoti and Obilicheski, with all their artillery and wagon trains. The Bucharest hospitals were to be evacuated by the evening of the 29th. Ottenitza was evacuated by the Russians during the night of the 27th, after the tête de pont and the bridge of boats had been destroyed. The Turks immediately occupied the island opposite Kularasch. On the 28th, the Russian army quitted Kulingermi, and in the evening were to bivouac between the Argish and Suban. Their artillery carriages, hospital and baggage trains were leaving on parallel roads towards the Sereth. The complete evacuation of Bucharest was to be effected on the 31st of July. During this retreat or flight the thermometer was 104 in the shade.

At Bucharest, on the 27th of July, the Turks were expected in two or three days, and will have a splendid reception. The Presse states, under date Belgrade, August 1, that according to a despatch from the Turkish head-quarters, the Russians are leaving Wallachia in three columns. The province is to have an army of occupation of Turks and Austrians. The immediate evacuation of Moldavia is not expected.

THE WAR IN ASIA.

KARS, July 20.—On the 2nd July a severe battle was momentarily expected: the whole of the Russian corps stationed at Alexandropol had quitted their camps, and marched towards Kars, but to the great disappointment of the Turks, three hours after, they thought better of it, and returned to their stronghold. Two days previously the Bashî-Bazonks, under Ismail Pasha, had severely handled a regiment of Cossacks, and carried off sixty horses, which are now safely packed at Kars Chai. Nothing can exceed the high spirits of the Ottoman soldiers.

NAVAL OPERATIONS IN THE BLACK SEA.

Dates from Constantinople to the 24th of July state, that a strong body of the allied troops had gone in fifteen ships from Baltsik to Anapa.

Five Russian boats had been sunk by two English steamers while raising the engines of the Tiger.

In the arsenal of Constantinople many gun-boats are being fitted out.

A PIRATE OR PRIVATEER SEEN OFF THE WEST INDIA ISLANDS.

A letter received from St. John's, Porto Rico, states that the British sloop Sea Flower, from Hayti, reports having been overhauled on the 28th of June, 25 miles west of this island, in the Mona passage, by a fast sailing schooner of about 125 tons, armed with a long brass gun (18-pounder on a pivot) and two small guns on each side, manned by 60 or 70 white men, speaking all languages; showed no colours, but had on deck a blue signal flag, with a red square in it. The Sea Flower was detained for a day and a half, was robbed of 2½ coils of cordage, and the captain's boat was stolen by one of the men. A ship and a brig leaving in sight the sloop was cast off, and the schooner made towards them. She was supposed to be either a pirate or a privateer.

THE PREBLE.—The United States' sloop of war Preble, S. Commander Thomas T. Craven, from Norfolk, and last from Plymouth, arrived at Spithead on Saturday morning, and saluted the national flag, the Port-Admiral, and the United States Consul, Mr. Pappalardo, by whom the commander has been introduced to the naval and military authorities to pay his respects. The Preble has 36 naval cadets on board, who will be practically instructed in all the duties of seamanship on the voyage, and sailed from Spithead on Tuesday, for Cherbourg and Brest, and thence to the United States.

YARBOURN.—H.M.S. Hornet, 17, Captain Campbell, sailed from Yarmouth on Saturday going eastward: she is intended to reinforce the White Sea Squadron. (Has returned to Sheerness.—Ed.)

GREEK INSURGENTS AND PIRATES.—Letters from Athens give some details of the capture of the 150-ton vessel, the Thessalia, by the squadron of Admiral Barbier de Tenan, near Volo. The vessel belonged to Effendiou, brother-in-law of Dr. Costi. Munitions of war and a sum of $5,000, in gold were found on board. It is not denied that the vessel was proceeding for the purpose of renewing the insurrection, and letters that prove the complicity of M. Philipe, the king's librarian, were discovered on board. The Admiral insisted on treating the crew of the vessel as pirates, but, owing to the entreaties and remonstrances of the representatives of the German Powers and the French Ambassador, the matter was left to be decided by the Courts. Had they been declared pirates they would, in all probability, have been hanged or shot. The certainty acquired as to the real character of the ship and other circumstances, tending to show that the Court was still engaged in conspiracies, had produced an unanimity of opinion between the French and English Ministers as to the absolute necessity of changing the personnel of the royal household.

POINTS-MOUTH, July 22.—GALLANT CONDUCT OF A BRITISH NAVAL OFFICER.—On Thursday afternoon one of the lads belonging to her Majesty's ship Illustrations, 46, Capt. Harris, received a letter, the contents of which were of such a nature as to determine the rash young man to commit self-destruction. He consequently jumped out of one of the ports into the sea. Most fortunately the splash was heard by Lieut. Marcus Lowther, additional lieutenant on board the Illustrations, who instantly sprang from the stern gallery, a height of 30 feet, and grasped the hapless lad as he was about to sink, and thus had the satisfaction of saving the life of a fellow creature.

HARBOUR OF NAPLES.—A letter from Naples states that workmen are now employed in forming a harbour of refuge, which merchant vessels will be able to enter, when prevented by bad weather from getting into the Bay of Naples. The first idea of this port was suggested by the late Admiral Ducloux, who, during a short residence at Ischia, made the necessary surveys, and submitted them to the King of Naples, by whose orders the works have been now commenced.

ALLEGED OUTRAGE ON BOARD AN EMIGRANT SHIP.—The New Orleans Delta of the 4th has the following respecting an alleged outrage by the crew of an emigrant ship from Liverpool:—"We last evening heard rumours of gross outrages and consequent excitement in connection with an emigrant ship from Liverpool, which arrived yesterday. The entire ship's company, with the exception of the captain, mate, and carpenter, are charged with the most fiendish outrages upon the female passengers during the passage. We hear that a body of the friends and countrymen of the emigrants, highly excited, proceeded to the ship, attacked the negroes, and threw some of them overboard. We refrain from mentioning the name of the vessel until we obtain further particulars."

PIRATES IN THE STRAITS OF SCIO.—FALMOUTH, July 23.—The Sarah Cole, from Trieste, which was boarded and plundered by pirates in the Straits of Scio, previously to the 27th April, was spoken 4th July, in lat. 37° N., long. 10° W., and supplied with provisions and clothes, by the Iron Gun, Scott, arrived here.

THE DANUBE.—On the 10th, according to a telegraphic despatch of the 18th of July, the Anglo-French were busily engaged in removing the snaken ships in the Sulina and Kilia mouths. The Russian batteries were being restored by the English. The Russian Danube flotilla, consisting of 25 serviceable steamers and 36 gun-boats, is said to have no chance of escape, and must inevitably fall into the hands of the English and French, unless the Russians prefer to blow up these vessels.

BALTIC.—Mr. I. A. Cary, mate of the Magicienne, has been dismissed the service by sentence of a Court-martial holden on board the Neptune on the 11th inst.

TOLON.—The Soubriel of Toulon announces that the Caravane and Egérie transports are preparing for the embarkation of more troops for the East. Two new ships of the line (the Algésiras and Eylan) are advancing rapidly. They are both fitted up with screws, and will be ready for sea, should the war continue, within six months.

CIRCASSIA.—In the bay of Noworossisk, where Admiral Brunt arrived on the 8th of July, the anchorage is the best on the Circassian coast—150 feet depth of water. The report from Varna of the landing of 7,000 French troops in this bay, and the taking of the Forte Monte Nako, will probably be confirmed by the next despatches from Constantinople.

THE DUGUESCLIN. It appears that on the retreat from Cronstadt to Baro Sounds, her Majesty's ship the Duke of Wellington was in advance, and was closely followed by the French line-of-battle ship Duguesclin. The Duke of Wellington, at a very moderate speed, entered Baro Sounds, and proceeded leisurely and safely to take up her anchorage. The Duguesclin, in following, deviated a few yards, and only a few yards, from the direct line taken by her precursor, and ran upon a polished incline plane of granite. The abrasion of the sea, or some other natural cause, had rubbed away every point from the granite rock, and the Duguesclin forced herself slowly up the inclined plane, until instead of having 23 feet water, as is her usual draught, she was brought up, fixed, with only 17 feet water above her keel. All her guns and heavy stores were taken out. Large anchors were taken astern, and purchased on from the ship, and jammers were made fast to some of the most powerful steamers, which endeavoured to draw her down the inclined plane. After 19 hours incessant labour, the Duguesclin was once more afloat, without having received any damage of material consequence.

PRIZE MONEY.—HERMES.—Notice is hereby given, that the account rules of the bounty-money awarded for the destruction of pirates in the China Seas by her Majesty's ship Hermes, between the 20th and 22nd June, 1852, and now unpaid, will be registered in the High Court of Admiralty on or after the 4th August next.—WOODHEAD and Co., agents, London, July 24.—London Gazette of Tuesday.

PENDROKE.—H.M. steam-corvette Falcon, 16, will be launched here, August 10.

CAPTURES FROM THE RUSSIANS.

On Saturday notice was given by the High Marshal of the Court of Admiralty that the undermentioned ships taken breaking the blockade of the Gulf of Finland would be condemned within 20 days by the High Court of Admiralty as lawful prizes to their captors—namely, the De Vrouw Alida, Liver late master, prize to her Majesty's steamer Archer; the Steen Bille, P. H. Beck late master, prize to her Majesty's steamer Confield; and the Annechian Jantiva, Simon J. Oostera late master, prize to her Majesty's steamer Archer.

The following Russian ships taken in British ports sailing under simulated papers, will forthwith be condemned as droits and perquisites of the Admiralty:—The Amalie, Alroe late master; the Baltica, Pygelstrom late master; and the Kolus, Ludwichev Schidwacht late master, seized at Lieth; and the Krnest Merk, taken in the port of Hull.

The notices required by the Court of Admiralty in respect to the Russian ship Oton, P. Voss late master, prize to her Majesty's steamer Alban, having expired, she, with her cargo, will be sold for the benefit of her captors.

The Russian three-master Orion, sailing under Tuscan colours, which was captured off Leghorn by the French steam-sloop Averne, was brought into Toulon on the 19th inst.

By advices received from the White Sea it appears her Majesty's squadron had captured some Russian vessels, crum-laden, as also a war schooner called the Volga, which have been sent home to England for condemnation. Two French ships-of-war, the Leamanoir and Psyche, have joined the rendezvous at Hammerfest.

THE FRENCH NAVY AND MERCHANT SERVICE.

DANTZIC, July 19.—The French man-of-war steamer Lucifer has just sent a boat on shore. All that can at present be learned from her is, that the Lucifer left the combined fleets at anchor in Baro Sound on Saturday. Several frigates were detached cruising on the coasts of Finland, but no action of any kind had taken place.

STAVANGER, July 7.—The French brig-of-war, Deannanoir, of 10 guns and 130 men, Captain de Morelles, arrived here yesterday. The French frigate, Psyche, which has been lying here for three weeks, sailed on the 4th instant for the rendezvous at Hammerfest, to join the combined squadron for the White Sea.

MARSEILLES, July 22.—The cholera increases in intensity daily in our unfortunate city. The deaths yesterday unwegestiert were 165, and last night the mortality was frightful. To add to our misfortunes, the typhus fever, and a disease called "le fièvre milliaire," which decomposes the blood in a few minutes, are committing great ravages amongst the miffling classes. Emigration continues on a large scale; nearly 100,000 persons have quitted the city. In the military hospital there is between 500 and 600 sick; the deaths are considerable. Our authorities are doing all they can to take from the view of the inhabitants the frightful spectacle of the numerous burials. The military are conveyed in an ambulance to the burial ground, constructed in haste, and able to convey ten bodies. The rest of the burials are performed during the night. The churchyard has been found not to possess sufficient space to bury the poor, and bodies half consumed have been dug up and burnt, to make room for the new comers. It is reported to-day that the plague has broken out on board a vessel in Toulon harbour. Several deaths have been already recorded, and the vessel sunk in the roads. Eleven a.m.—The cholera is officially announced at Toulon.

STEAMERS.

The Industry screw steam storeship, Master-Commander Bradley, arrived in Plymouth-sound on Friday evening, the 21st, with her coal-bunkers on fire. On her passage from Woolwich she narrowly escaped the fate of the unfortunate Jasper. When off Margate smoke was observed rising from the boilers, and holes for the admission of water were immediately cut in the deck each side of the funnel, and the engine set to work. This had the effect of suppressing the fire, but, whenever extra power was necessary, it recommenced. The Industry is iron built, of 640 tons, and was originally intended to carry coal, for which purpose she has a large hold forward. The midship plate of the coal bunker, instead of being five or six feet is only two feet from the funnel, and the deck is much too close to the boilers. Whenever there was occasion to force the necessary pressure in the engine-room something took fire, and through this the lagings or linings of the boilers were consumed, and the coal in the bunkers was ignited. On Saturday afternoon, after being surveyed, she left Plymouth-sound for the dockyard, where she was inspected by Admiral Superintendent Stopford, Mr. Turner, and other officers, when fire was again discovered in the engine-room, to which the dockyard hose was immediately conveyed. Her funnel is in front of the mainmast, from which it is only seven feet distant, so that no sail can be hoisted on this mast; and during the Channel passage, in consequence of the copper not coming low enough down, it became necessary to fix some tin plates in front to prevent the spar from taking fire. The Industry is bound for the Black Sea.

LIVERPOOL, Sunday Evening.—The Europa has arrived from New York with advices to the 12th, and 355,070 dollars in specie. She spoke both the steam-ships Asia and Pacific. The Committee on Foreign Relations had reported back the fishery and reciprocity treaty. Californian advices are to the June 16th. Among the despatches from Commander Perry was the Japan treaty. New and rich diggings had been discovered at Kinn River. Trade had been moderately active. The Star of the West had arrived with upwards of 1,000,000 dollars of Californian gold.

Six hundred negroes had been landed at Havana by the American vessel Gray Eagle, which vessel was afterwards captured by an English cruiser, and finally surrendered to a Spanish man-of-war.

The French and British squadron had been reinforced. The French Admiral Duguesclin, died on the 3rd.

The Russian frigate Dinna has left the Sandwich Islands for Sitka. Shortly before her departure, her Majesty's sloop of war Trincomeale arrived and anchored alongside her.

BAGDAD.—Rachid Pasha is at present engaged in establishing a line of steamers between Bagdad, Bassorah, and Mossoul. One of the vessels intended for this service is expected at Bagdad about the end of this month. He also intends to have a flotilla to cruise between Chât-el-Araq and the Persian Gulf, in order to protect that coast from pirates.

GOLD FIELDS.

The Ajak is announced from Melbourne, with 10,000 ounces of gold, valued at 40,000*l*.

THE GOLD MINES OF EQUADOR.—The accounts received from the Paché tend to confirm previous reports respecting the discovery of gold deposits in the bed of the Amazon River and the Copierio of Lima contains a letter, dated Quito, giving some particulars regarding the gold deposits of the River Paute, in Ecuador, a stream which empties itself into the Amazon.

Foreign Intelligence.

ON THE 29th THE DANISH GOVERNMENT proclaimed the constitution for the entire monarchy. The Imperial Council is to consist of 57 members, and will meet biennially.

THE NONWEGIAN PARLIAMENT has adopted the motion of Motzfeldt, for the abrogation of the office of viceroys, as an institution insulting to the country, and threatening it with a provincial character, by a majority of 72 to 29.

THE NEWS FROM ALEXANDRIA, dated July 18, confirm the account of the death of the Viceroy, Abbas Pasha, at Beulah, from an attack of apoplexy on the night between the 12th and 13th of this month. The attack was so sudden that even his own physicians could not be called in time. The Viceroy had returned home alone. The next morning, at break of day, the two Mamelukes on duty found him dead on a sofa. The body was conveyed to Cairo on the same day by the care of the Kiaya Pasha, who had arrived from Alexandria in the morning, and the remains of Abbas Pasha were reposing near those of his father at the time when the greater part of the population were ignorant of his death. On hearing of the event, Said Pasha, his uncle, the legitimate successor by the terms of the firman of 1841, immediately assumed the direction of affairs at Alexandria. All the authorities, without exception, placed themselves under his orders. A few hours after the arrival of the courier, announcing to him his accession, the son of Mehemet Ali installed himself as master in the palace of his father, at Raz-el-Fin, amid the unanimous acclamations of the population of Alexandria and the European colony.

THE ADVICES FROM MEXICO are dated the 3rd of July. News of the death of the rebel General Alvarez had just been received by the Government, but it remained to be seen if this event would cause the revolutionary movement he had originated in the State of Guerrero to be abandoned.

IN THE UNITED STATES, in political matters, the chief event has been the publication of the treaty between the United States and Japan. Its provisions are:—The maintenance of cordial amity. The ports of Simoda and Idzu to be open to American ships for supplies of wood, water, provisions, coal, and other necessities; payment in specie to be made for them at certain rates, to be fixed by the native officials. The Japanese to assist all United States' vessels that may be wrecked on their coasts, and the shipwrecked persons to be free from molestation or detention, with liberty, after they shall have been conveyed to the port either of Simoda or Idzu, to go where they please within a certain range, to be hereafter specified, and which in the case of Simoda, is fixed at a distance of seven miles from a particular spot. Traffic to be permitted to United States' ships under such regulations as shall be temporarily established by the Japanese Government. American consuls or agents to be appointed at Simoda, if deemed expedient, after 18 months from the signing of the treaty, and finally, the United States to be always allowed such privileges as may at any future time be conceded to any other nation.

THE SPANISH INSURRECTION.

The Espartero Ministry is composed of the following names:—

General Espartero—President of the Council.
General O'Donnell—War.
Don José Olouzo—Justice.
Don Francisco Santa Cruz—Interior.
Don José Manuel Molluro—Finance.
General Allente y Salazar—Marine.
Don Joaquin Pacheco—Foreign Affairs.
General Serrano is named Captain-General of Andalusia.

COLONIAL INTELLIGENCE.

MAURITIUS, MAY 30.—The most important item of intelligence we have to report since our last dispatch per Aringo, is the eruption of cholera at Port Louis. The first case occurred in the person of an infant, at Grand River, which proved fatal. The disease next presented itself in one of the yards of the civil prisons. The report at first raised was that this outbreak had occurred among a large number of Indian vagrants arrested by the police; but this was speedily contradicted, and it was established that the earliest cases in the prisons occurred in the misdoers' ward. Immediately on its becoming known that cholera existed in the prisons, the most active measures were at once adopted by Government for their evacuation. For this purpose two hulks were hired as pontoons for the reception of the prisoners, and a large number of them were also despatched to the Flat Island. The newly-formed municipal corporation assembled and took into consideration the best means of effecting the sanitary measures rendered indispensable by the outbreak of the epidemic. It cannot be concealed, however, that the town of Port Louis was never perhaps in a state less prepared to meet an epidemic such as cholera than it is at this moment; and, should the contagion unhappily continue, little short of a miracle can prevent its being most fatal in its effects among the lower classes of the inhabitants. The total number of cases reported up to this date is 276; and the deaths 170.

AUSTRALIANA.

RIVER MURRAY.—Advices regarding the navigation of the river Murray have been received from its explorer, Captain Cadell, by the Golden Age, giving additional proof of its commercial importance to all the three colonies of South Australia, Victoria, and New South Wales. According to the previous accounts, not only had Captain Cadell opened up the navigation for 1,200 miles, but the shipment of produce from various stations on its banks had already successfully commenced, and the Government of South Australia were taking measures to enable the lands on each side to be settled as rapidly as possible. It now appears that he has extended his observations for a further distance of 700 miles to a locality called Bethanga, which is described as a place of great beauty, near the junction of the Mitta Mitta with the Murray; and that, although the river in that part shows more than he expected, he believes that by the removal of snags and other impediments it can be rendered perfectly available—a work for which the Governments of the three colonies interested will, it is assumed, readily find a sufficient sum. These advices also mention that two steamers, named the Gundagai and Albany, were about to be employed by Captain Cadell to carry out still further explorations of the river and its tributaries.

MELBOURNE UNIVERSITY.—The Dublin Evening Post contains the following:—"We are happy to announce that the University of Melbourne has selected a distinguished Irishman to fill one of the most important chairs in that institution—a man distinguished in his department of science, not alone in Ireland, but throughout Europe. We subjoin a copy of the minutes:—"Professor M'Coy, of the Queen's College, Belfast, has been unanimously selected by Sir J. T. W. Herschell, Professor Alhey (the Astronomer Royal), and other members of the Melbourne Professorship Committee, to fill the Chair of Natural Sciences in that university. The stipend is £1,000 a-year, with a house, and allowances for travelling expenses, &c. It gives us infinite satisfaction to make this announcement regarding the elevation to a very distinguished position of a native of Dublin, who has worked his own way to eminence without aid or influence from any quarter, save that derived from the strength of his own genius and acquirements. We may add that Professor M'Coy is nephew of the late Frederick William Conway."

ANOTHER APPOINTMENT TO MELBOURNE COLLEGE.—The Galway Vindicator announces the appointment of W. E. Hearne, Esq., Greek Professor in Queen's College, Galway, to be Greek Professor in Melbourne College, Australia. The salary is said to be £1,000 per annum, with a handsome private residence.

QUICK PASSAGE.—The Henry Moor, built at Greenock by Messrs. John Scott and Sons, has made the run from Greenock, from port to port, in 81 days, and from land's end to land's end in 72. The Melbourne Argus says she is one of the finest iron-ships afloat.—North British Mail.

OUTWARD BOUND, LONDON.—The vessels entered and cleared for Australia, between the 15th and 21st July inclusive, comprise the following:—

The Emigration Commissioners have taken up three vessels for Sydney, at £17 9s. 6d.; Melbourne, at £18 17s. 6d.; and Portland Bay, at £18 19s. Advertisements for three more have been issued, and rather better terms are expected, owing to the Government demand for transports. For the transports the Government will not pay more than 19s. 6d. per ton n. m., for three months certain. Several of the first transports taken obtained over 30s. Outward freights generally continue flat, and for coals we note a further decline during the week. The following are the quotations of freight by vessels loading on the berth at this port, per ton of 40 feet:

MAILS FOR AUSTRALIA.—GENERAL POST-OFFICE, Aug. 1854.—Arrangements have been made for the conveyance of mails to Australia once in every month, by the establishment (under a contract with the General Screw Steam Shipping Company) of a packet to run once in two months direct from Southampton to Australia, alternately with the existing line of packets from Singapore, in connection with the Indian mail service. The mails for Australia will accordingly be made up in London, during the remainder of the present year, on the following days:—August 4th, morning, by direct packet; September 4th, morning, via Southampton and Singapore; September 20th, evening, via Marseilles and Singapore; October 4th, morning, by direct packet; November 4th, morning, via Southampton and Singapore; November 20th, evening, via Marseilles and Singapore; December 4th, morning, by direct packet. All letters and newspapers for New South Wales, Victoria, South Australia, and Van Diemen's Land (except such as may be specially addressed "via Marseilles"), will be forwarded by the packets of the General Screw Steam Shipping Company direct from Southampton, or by the line via Southampton and Singapore, according as they may be posted in time for either line of packets. Postmasters will see that this regulation differs from the regulation laid down for the despatch of letters to India, &c., which, as a rule, are forwarded via Marseilles, unless specially directed to be sent by another route, while letters for the Australian colonies above-mentioned will be conveyed by the long sea route as the rule, and only via Marseilles when so directed. This is necessary, as letters via Marseilles can be forwarded to Australia only once in two months, and if inadvertently posted without any special address, would be subject to a very long delay. The postage upon letters for any of the Australian colonies when conveyed by direct packet, or via Southampton and Singapore, will be 1s. the half-ounce; and when addressed to be sent via Marseilles, 1s. 10d. if under a quarter of an ounce, 2s. 3d. if weighing a quarter of an ounce and not exceeding half an ounce, and so on, according to the scale in operation for charging letters addressed to India. Newspapers posted in accordance with the regulations will be transmitted by packet direct, or by packet via Southampton and Singapore, free of charge, but will be liable to a postage of 3d. each when sent via Marseilles. The postage upon both letters and newspapers must be paid in advance. Letters, &c., for Western Australia, are forwarded by private ships, unless specially directed to be sent via Singapore, or by some other route.

THE HON. FRANCIS CHARLES LAWLEY, late M.P. for Beverley, and who has been for some time acting as private secretary to the Chancellor of the Exchequer, has been appointed Lieutenant-Governor of South Australia, in the room of Sir Henry E. F. Young, now Governor of New Zealand.—Globe.

THE MARCO POLO, which left the Mersey on Saturday week for Melbourne, was towed out to sea by the steaming tug Tartar, and left by her at 1 a.m. on Monday, about ten miles S.W. of Waterford, quite clear of land. The captain of the steam-tug reports the wind at the time light from N.N.E. the ship, with all available sails set, and making about five knots per hour. His reports that, shortly after leaving the Marco Polo, the wind freshened from the N.E., which would be exceedingly favourable for the ship. The Marco Polo during her three celebrated trips had always favourable weather at starting, and her fourth voyage commences even under more favourable auspices.

FRANCE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, THURSDAY, AUGUST 3.

The only new fact relative to the war known here is, that a countermand has been sent from the Ministry of War to Toulon, where two thousand artillerymen with cannon, shells, and ammunition, were on the point of embarkation for the Black Sea, with the object, as was generally supposed, of investing Sebastopol by land. The public are very probably left in the dark here, respecting the movements of troops about to take place, in order to prevent information reaching the enemy—but it is impossible to keep extensive embarkations like these altogether secret. It is remarked that the countermand was sent the day after the arrival of the late debates in Parliament, in which there was so much disclosed of the intentions of the allies relative to Sebastopol, and other points in the Black Sea. Whatever be the cause, however, of this countermand, there is no doubt of the fact of its having been sent, and the chance of any important operation against the enemy in that quarter this year proportionately less.—Tant pis! These continual delays, and the worse than lukewarm speech of Lord Aberdeen, have greatly chilled the enthusiasm felt here in the war, and should the brave old Turks fight another battle—of which there is an immediate prospect—again unassisted by the French and English troops, it will create an universal feeling of disgust throughout France, and I presume still more in England, where you always allow — Cold diplomacy

To thwart the fiery warrior's noble daring,
And blunt his honest steel."

When I last wrote, the weather, after many weeks of cold and wet, had changed to the fiercest heat of the dog-days, and the farmers were congratulating themselves on one of the finest harvests for years. Another change has, however, much lessened these pleasant anticipations, for we have since been visited by storms and rains as violent as any remembered by the "oldest inhabitant" in the course of his eventful career. Some of the finest trees have been felled by the tempest, both in the Tuileries and in the Bois de Boulogne. Happily, the storm has not, it appears, been general, as accounts from the west and south state a general decline in the corn markets.

The cholera, which has gone down here, continues its ravages in various places in France and other parts of the Continent, but particularly in Italy. A private letter from Genoa states that there it has been dreadfully fatal, and the evil is frightfully augmented by the brutal ignorance of the lower classes, who are acted upon by incendiary reports, loudly accusing both the Government and the physicians of poisoning the people. So far was this insane rumour credited, that some of the apothecaries' shops were broken into and destroyed, while the intelligent men were obliged to conceal themselves to avoid being murdered by the infuriated mob. This horrible state of things naturally left those attacked by the disease without assistance, and the deaths were consequently numerous. The physicians were called upon by the Government to attend to their patients; but these gentlemen, not unreasonably, refused to come forward without some protection for their lives. The police, in consequence, have published an edict insisting on their going on with their duties, which is pleaded all over the city, but this document is quite silent as to the causes of their refusal to act. The pestilence is, however, now declining.

Few things happening within my memory in England, have been more keenly commented on here, than the late courts martial at Windsor, in which the officers of the 46th cut so deplorable a figure. There is but one feeling as to the scandalous manner in which Lieut. Perry was treated, and the opinion, particularly among military men, is little more favourable towards the Commander and superior officers, than towards Lieut. Greer himself. The mischief of conduct like this is not confined, unfortunately, to the actors; it reflects discredit, in the eyes of foreigners, on the character of the whole British Army. English officers, though not at all superior in information or military education to those of the French and other continental forces, have heretofore always enjoyed a reputation abroad, as being in manners and conduct emphatically gentlemen!—a characteristic which is never seen in any man, or in any part of the world, without inspiring respect. How far this enviable prestige is likely to suffer from the scandalous scenes described, is very easy to infer. The advocates of duelling, here, have seized on the affair with avidity, as showing at least one consequence that has attended the abolition of that mode of keeping the peace; and one of the military journals sharply remarks that many scenes of this kind have been reported in the army since the ultima ratio of the pistol was put an end to. The fact is, that like all other evils of this world, duelling had its attendant good, and the perfect equality it established between a powerful brute and a feeble antagonist, was one of its benefits. The midnight outrages to which Mr. Perry was subjected could not have occurred in the French army. I do not mean among the officers, but even among the common soldiers. For here no soldier of any rank ever receives a blow, or equivalent insult, from a comrade without its ensuing in a duel. They fight chiefly with swords, but in cases where this gives any undue advantage to one of the parties, the pistol is adopted. Whether it be the result of this system or not, one cannot pretend to say, but certain it is, that no troops in the world are more conciliatory than the French. The privates, I should add, are always obliged to obtain the permission of their commanding officer before they fight. It may be of no disservice to the 46th, and other corps in our gulf army, to know that their conduct in the barracks, as in the field, is observed and commented on by foreign troops, with a scrutinizing but not ungenerous spirit.

One of the great hobbies of the Parisians, that Paris should be a seaport, is now in a fair way to be realised. Last autumn, the Emperor offered a reward of £2,000 to the ship-builder who would construct a vessel having all the qualities of a good sea-boat, and at the same time drawing so little water as to enable it to find its way, through the shallow Seine, up to Paris; M. Armand, a Bordeaux ship-builder, solved the problem, and since that time Paris has been visited periodically, by smart vessels, sloop-built, and with false keel boards, who strike all but their masts at Rouen, come up to Paris and rig them anew, to the delight of the bandeuds. There is now a smart little barge of about 250 tons loading at the quay opposite the Louvre, for Rio Janeiro; and still farther to gratify the flogos, La Galatée, a steam sloop of war, mounting four guns, and built on M. Armand's principle, has been ordered by His Majesty to come up to Paris, where she arrived the other day; she is an object of great curiosity, and pride at the same time, to the natives, who prognosticate that the capital will ere long take the shine out of Havre and Brest, as a vaisseau de guerre is actually moored in sight of the Tuileries. La Galatée is forthwith to receive, in lieu of her present armament, a couple of ninety-six-pounders on traversing slides, and she is dispatched as a gun-boat to the Baltic. She draws but five feet water when heavily laden, and is a beautiful specimen of naval architecture. Her only fault is that she is a puzzle, and not a screw steamer, and a single shot may, therefore, place her hors de combat. She has a picked crew—as fine a set of blue-jackets as ever trod the unsteady footings of the hatches, and all eagerness for a brush with les Cosaques.

The Government, I am sorry to say, do not evince any disposition to relent in the strict enforcement of the severe laws on the press. The other day the Bulletin de Paris received a warning for stating that, at the Invalides, a salute of 101 guns had been fired in honour of the raising of the siege of Shistia, and the Echo Agricole has also been "warned" a second time, against spreading false news touching the harvest; the London Daily News likewise has been seized at the post office, for comments on the treatment of L'Echo, conceived in a spirit of bitter hostility to the powers that be.

The private apartments at the Tuileries are at present open to the inspection of the privileged few who have sufficient interest to procure admissions. The sleeping apartment of the Empress has been converted into a real fairy palace. The ceiling represents the goddess Flora, on her throne in the kingdom of flowers, and over the doors and windows are medallions, some representing emperors, and one, a beautiful portrait of the Empress's mother, la Reine Hortense, which Boucher himself could not have surpassed; those charming pieces are due to the light and fanciful brush of Ferdinand Depon.

TOBY PEEPS' OPINIONS ON RACING EVENTS.

We feel it to be a duty we owe ourselves to call particular attention to the unprecedented, sound, and almost unfailing opinions upon coming events, week after week communicated under the signature of "Toby Peeps." Read and compare the certainty with which he has picked out the winners; and even when unsuccessful, for "it is not in mortals to command success," it has not been an error of judgment, but the result of circumstances beyond human control or calculation. This week, at Goodwood, he has earned a proud distinction among the patrons of the Turf, and several sporting men, acting upon his advice, have been large winners, as we here prove.

RECEPTION OF ESPARTERO AT MADRID.

Espartero made his entry into the capital on the 29th ult., at eight o'clock, a.m., by the Puerta Alcala. The wide street which bore that name, and which is for the future to be called the Calle del Duque de la Victoria, was filled with a compact crowd, and every window was occupied. The infantry wore a blouse, tightened round the waist, and a foraging cap adorned with green ribbon, hearing the words, "The Constitution, or Death!" Troops of the line accompanied the cortege, and General San Miguel, on horseback, was by the side of Espartero's open carriage. There were also three or four other carriages, in which were seated some superior officers, wearing their uniforms and decorations; a deputation of the junta, and another of the municipal council of Madrid. This latter body had also sent its members in grand costume of crimson velvet, laced with gold, and cap of similar velvet and white plumes. They were four in number, and rode in an open carriage. It was not without great difficulty that the horses and carriages could get through the immense multitude, particularly near the Puerta del Sol, where the street becomes considerably narrower. The acclamations in honour of Espartero were deafening, and the multitude seemed to want to take him from his carriage and embrace him. At the corner of the Puerta del Sol, and of the Rue d'Alcala, a number of white pigeons were let go, ornamented with green ribbons. In the Rue Mayor it was really thought Espartero would be suffocated under the mass of flowers which were flung down on him. Espartero, standing erect in the carriage, responded to the enthusiastic reception thus given him by opening his arms, bowing to the right and left, and then closing his arms on his heart.

The cortege arrived about nine o'clock at the court of the palace. Espartero then alighted, and went up to Queen's apartments, the crowd being so thick as almost to prevent the door of the carriage from opening. The acclamations continued after his entrance into the palace, and redoubled at the moment it was thought he must have arrived in the presence of the Queen. But without doubt the people reckoned on having some share in the interview, for after about a quarter of an hour cries arose of "Al balcon!" and every eye was directed towards the grand balcony of the royal presence-chamber, the blinds of which remained pitilessly closed. The interval was prolonged in this way for half an hour, and at the moment Espartero made his appearance below to get into his carriage, the Queen showed herself at the balcony just mentioned. The whole of the crowd then turned towards her with enthusiastic cries of "Viva la Reina!" "Viva la Reina Constitucional!"

On the evening of the 29th ult. General O'Donnell arrived at the residence of Espartero. The two Generals then presented themselves on the balcony, whence Espartero addressed the multitude. He then embraced O'Donnell. Both went to the Palace, where Espartero took the oaths as President of the Council, in the presence of the Queen. The Queen-Mother was still at Madrid, but it was believed that on the following day (the 31st) she would set out for Portugal.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

THURSDAY.—LORDS.—The Bribery Bill was read a second time. It was understood that in committee the Duke of Newcastle would propose an amendment limiting the duration of the measure to two years.

COMMONS.—Sir G. Grey, remarking that a motion had been placed on the paper by Sir J. Pakington calling attention to the circumstances under which Mr. Lawley had been appointed Governor of South Australia, proceeded to state that Mr. Lawley had been selected for the governorship of the colony by the Duke of Newcastle, he (Sir G. Grey) felt himself justified in recommending her Majesty to authorise his appointment. It was known that Mr. Lawley had been connected with the turf, but under circumstances which reflected no discredit upon him, and which had left no liabilities behind them. Subsequently, however, rumours reached the Duke of Newcastle, and were by him communicated to himself, touching some alleged transactions on the Stock Exchange in which it was said Mr. Lawley had engaged while holding the responsible position of private secretary to the Chancellor of the Exchequer. By Mr. Lawley's own confession, he had learnt that those rumours were partially well founded, and though in his speculations that gentleman had made no use of official secrets, and indeed, had lost by them, he had felt it to be his painful duty to recommend the Queen to recall his appointment to the colonial governorship in question.

Sir J. Pakington acknowledged the candour of the explanation offered by the Secretary for the Colonies.

Mr. V. Smith suggested that a system of promotion should be established, and that functionaries who had tried their hands successfully upon colonies should be selected for the more important governorships.

The subject then dropped, and the House went into Committee of Ways and Means.

The Militia (Scotland) Bill was read a third time and passed.

The clauses of the Public Revenue and Consolidated Fund Charges (No. 2) Bill were all agreed to without discussion.

Mr. Spooner moved that the Maynooth grant should be included among the items to be removed from the Consolidated Fund, and included among the annual votes.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer opposed the motion.

Mr. Disraeli supported the motion respecting the Maynooth grant.

Mr. Newdegate contended that as Oxford University was subject to Parliamentary control, the same measure ought in justice to be dealt to the Maynooth establishment.

The committee then divided—

For the motion	43
Against	108-65

The bill then passed through committee, and was ordered to be reported.

The Court of Chancery Bill went through committee.

The Medical Graduates (Ireland and Scotland) Bill was withdrawn.

The House having resolved into committee on the Customs Acts, a series of resolutions fixing the customs' duties on various articles for the present year were agreed to. The only alteration of importance was the reduction of the duty on hops, from £2 5s. to £1 per cwt., which met with some opposition, but was carried on a division by 61 to 21. The House adjourned.

OXFORD v. BALDEN.

A well contested match was played on the Balden Ground on Tuesday week, between the Oxford City and the Balden Clubs, which ended in the defeat of the Oxonians, their opponents having three wickets to go down. The unevenness of the ground, made it a very difficult matter for the Oxford long-stop, hence the great number of byes which led to their defeat.

WITNEY v. WHEATLEY.

A match between the Wheatley, or South Oxfordshire and Witney Clubs, commenced on the ground of the latter on Monday; but owing to the heavy rains that fell during the day, not one innings each could be played ere the wickets were struck. Witney were the first to defend the timber, but owing to the strength of their opponents, both in bowling and fielding, the defence was rather weak, for, on the last man retiring, 32 runs only had been made. Wheatley, on the termination of the day's play, wrote 30 for the loss of four wickets. The wicket-keeping of Mr. G. Fruin, on the part of the Wheatley, was of the very first order, and elicited marks of approbation from all parts of the field. As an amateur wicket-keeper very few can compete with him. After the play a large party partook of an excellent dinner at the Marlborough Arms Inn, and under the presidency of Mr. Richard Smith, of Witney, a pleasant and convivial evening was spent. During the day a master tradesman, a member of the club, who had behaved in a most ungentlemanly manner in the marquee, received at the hands of the chairman in the evening so severe a rebuke, that there is little doubt it will have the effect in future of producing much better behaviour. The chairman, a thorough friend to cricket, has been the means of restoring the Witney Club, and in doing so, had made it his business to call upon several of the leading inhabitants of the town to request their assistance, one of whom was the Rev. Mr. Sinclair, the rector. The reverend gentleman told Mr. Smith that if the club was conducted in a respectable manner, he thought he, as a clergyman, should not be doing wrong in becoming an honorary subscriber, knowing, as he did, that a right reverend prelate (the Bishop of Winchester) had in the same manner supported the Farnham Cricket Club. The chairman, on the member of the club above alluded to entering the room, requested him to leave it immediately, otherwise he, the chairman, would, as he could not sanction such proceedings as he had witnessed that morning, and that he was determined, as long as he was president, that the club should be conducted in a respectable manner. The conduct of the chairman in this matter was highly applauded by all present.

THE BALTIC.

CAPTURE OF A RUSSIAN GUN-BRIG BY THE CUCKOO.—Her Majesty's steamer Cuckoo (2) has destroyed a Russian gun-brig in the Gulf of Bothnia. The Russians at first showed fight; on receiving some shots they were seized with a panic, threw their guns overboard, and, taking to the boats, reached the shore, leaving their vessel.

An immense gun has been forwarded from Woolwich to the Baltic, for Rear-Admiral Chads. This gun will command a range of no less than 7,000 yards, or something over four miles and a quarter.

TURKEY.

The rumour that the Grand Duke Michael was killed before Silistria begins to assume some consistence. Eighty siege pieces from England have been landed at Varna.

Three Russian ships, sailing under Spanish flags, and laden with Circassian girls have been taken into Varna.

Lord Cardigan, who has returned from his long and toilsome exploring trip to the Danube, has brought back a budget of information, which will be found eminently useful. No less than 18 horses were "knocked up" by fatigue. The noble lord had to "rough it" in the open air for seventeen successive nights with his Hussars, who speak warmly of his assiduous attention to their comfort, and of the cordial, soldierly spirit in which he shared every privation they had to endure.

Two more piratical vessels have been burnt by the Garval French steamer in the Gulf of Scala Nova, below Smyrna.

RUTSCHUK, July 10.—On the 12th Omar Pasha reached Rutschuk.

Thirty English sailors, under Lieutenant Glynn and Prioe Leiningen, have taken direction of the Turkish flotilla at Giurgevo.

Thirty English pioneers, under Captain Page, of the Royal Engineers, are assisting in completing the fortifications of Giurgevo.

Letters from Schumla state that 18,000 English troops were to reach Rutschuk on the 8th.

It was believed that the attack would take place on the 20th.

ACTION IN THE DANUBE.

[From Friday's Gazette.]

Her Majesty's Ship Vesuvius, off Sulina,

July 8, 1854.

Captain Hyde Parker directed a strong party of boats from the Firebrand and Vesuvius to accompany him up the Danube for the purpose of destroying some works which were occupied by the Russians. At 2 p.m. the boats entered the Danube, Captain Parker's gig in advance; at a bend of the river, opposite a number of houses on the right bank and a large stockade on the left, a sharp fire was opened upon him, and his boat was nearly killed; some of his men were wounded.

The heavy boats were coming up and Captain Parker at once pulled back to them, halting me to land the marines and be ready to storm. This order was executed by the marines and a detachment of seamen in the same gallant spirit with which it was given. Captain Parker then dashed on shore, in his gig, and at once advanced with a few men; he was in front and greatly exposed; a tremendous fire was soon opened by the enemy upon them, and a few minutes after landing a bullet passed through their leader's heart, and in a moment this gallant sailor ceased to live.

The command of the force then devolved upon myself. I directed the gun-boats and rocket-boat at once to be brought to the front; the storming party was formed by Lieutenant Jull, R.M.A., the gun-boats commenced a most effective fire upon the houses and battery, and in a short time the enemy's fire was silenced.

I directed the storming party to advance, and the place was entered at a run by a detachment of marines and sailors, headed by Lieutenant Jull, R.M.A., and Lieutenant Hawkey, R.M. We found that the enemy had already retreated at the year, and so thick was the cover, that pursuit was vain.

The work that we had taken was a gabion battery, the guns of which had been taken away and the embrasures filled up. It consisted of a front along the river raised about 15 feet high, and 400 yards in extent; in the rear was a masonry, and the two flanks, which were not 30 yards in length, were defended as in front; this work enclosed about fifty government houses, stables, store-houses, and a magazine. The works have been entirely demolished, the houses destroyed, and nothing now marks the spot but a heap of ruins. Part of the town of Sulina, from whence the enemy had opened fire, has been burnt; the principal street I have thought it proper to spare.

There was no means of computing the enemy's loss, although they were seen to fall inside the intrenchments. I am disposed to think that they were assisted in carrying off their wounded, and even defending the place, by some Greeks, as men in the dress of that country were seen intermixed with the Russian troops.

From the heavy fire that was opened upon us, and from the number that were seen afterwards collected at a distance, the enemy must have been in great force before they retreated.

It becomes my duty to report to you the extreme good conduct of all employed on this occasion. The gun-boats were most skillfully managed under circumstances of great difficulty. They were commanded by Lieut. Sullivan, Acting-Lieut. Lyons, and Messrs. Gooden and Kerby, mates.

Mr. Carey, second master, has, I regret to say, been badly wounded; he behaved most excellently.

It fell to Lieut. Jull's lot to have an opportunity of particularly distinguishing himself by his coolness and gallantry whilst in command of the marines; and he speaks most highly of Lieut. Hawkey, the non-commissioned officers, and men that were with him.

The medical officers have merited our best thanks. Dr. O'Hagan, in the execution of his duty, was in the midst of the fire, and his clothes were pierced by bullets.

I have, &c.,

(Signed) RICHARD A. POWELL, Commander.

Vice Admiral J. W. D. Dundas, C.B.

Her Majesty's Steam-frigate Firebrand, off Sulina, July 8, 1854.

Sir,—I have the honour to forward the returns of the boats employed, and the number of men killed and wounded at the attack and capture, this day, of a stockade on the left bank of the Danube.

The command of one division of the boats, after the lamented death of Capt. Hyde Parker, devolved on me; the punice under my immediate command being in advance of the other boats, caused the principal part of the enemy's fire to be directed upon her, and I regret to say that five men in that boat were wounded (three severely).

I have, sir, to speak in the highest terms of the good conduct and steadiness of the whole of the officers and men under my command under the galling fire of the enemy, and I would beg to bring them strongly before your notice. Where all behaved so well it is almost impossible to particularise, but I beg particularly to mention James Shade, able seaman, who I regret to say, after much distinguishing himself, was severely wounded.

Lieutenant Jull, R.M.A., speaks in equally high terms of the marines under his command.—I have, &c.,

POULTRY.

CARRIAGE OF EGGS.—It may be interesting to some of your readers to know the result of an attempt to send eggs from here to America to be hatched there; and as it has been pretty successful it may induce others to try the same mode of procuring poultry of the finer breeds. By one of the New York steamers, which left this in the end of April, I sent a box containing 61 eggs of different selected breeds; they were 12 or 13 days in reaching New York, and on being landed they were sent on 80 miles further by steamboat, and were placed under hens on the following day. Of the number sent, four were broken on the journey, and of the remainder one-half were hatched and were alive on the 27th of June—the date of my last communication—a very good result, considering both time and distance, especially as all but one dozen had been brought to Liverpool by railway.—D. J.

AGRICULTURE.

SALE OF RAMS.—The great ram fair was held in our Smithfield on Tuesday last. Nothing could exceed the specimens of that highly popular breed, the Shropshire-downs, whether of the peculiar Berrington blood, or without that distinctive mark. There were a large number for sale from the flocks of Messrs. Crane, Jukes, Minton, Pickersock, Houghton, Farmer (Drayton), Claridge, Stanier, and Calcott. Some of the prices obtained were considered exceedingly good. Mr. G. Hilditch offered 36 rams for sale, the property of Messrs. S. and Joseph Meire, John Evans, and Rev. C. P. Peters. Four of the rams belonging to Messrs. Meire were let, one of them fetching as much as 51 guineas for the season. It was really a splendid animal, good at all points. The highest price Mr. Hilditch sold a ram for was £33, the lowest £6 10s.; and the average £12 10s. each. A large number of agriculturalists attended the sales.

TO REAR POTATOES FOR SEED.—Plant a potato very near the surface of the soil, which raise by covering it with a small quantity of mould round it, tie the stem up with a stick, or better still, nail it up to a wall, and as the tubers form, draw away the soil from them with the hand, take them off frequently, and cover up the roots again, and blossoms and seeds will be produced.

LINCOLNSHIRE.—The hay and clover harvests have been more favourable than was anticipated; in many places the scythes has made great progress. The crops of wheat, oats, barley, and beans have this last fortnight greatly improved by the warm weather. The wheat stands high and well, and has a large ear, it also gives promise of a great yield. The potatoes look better than of late years, in some instances the blight has made its appearance among the later sorts, but at present in an incipient form; the hope is entertained that this year's crop will be less tainted with the blight than formerly. Indeed throughout the whole county, all accounts agree in describing the appearance of every kind of crop as luxuriant, and holding out the promise of a most abundant harvest. At the fat stock markets there have been but a small supply of sheep,—price firm. Of beef, an average supply,—price a trifle higher. We expected much at Lincoln last week, but we were positively overwhelmed by the actual spectacle that awaited us in the old city. Our neighbours who stayed at home will not believe our accounts of what we saw, but look upon nine-tenths thereof as fables and dreams.

DEVIZES.—The potato disease which appeared in this neighbourhood a fortnight since, and caused some alarm, has made but little progress; it first became visible as a dark vein on the leaf, around which on the under surface the green was of a darker and duller appearance, and when submitted to the microscope, was found to be covered with a fungus, which rapidly overspread the leaf, which then withered, blackened, and died; here and there large patches are thus influenced, whilst other portions seem entirely free, but if the disease has attacked the leaf and slightly the haulm, it has at present but little affected the tuber, bushels of which are dug, in some cases without an instance of disease, and when met with an unprecedented characteristic has hitherto been presented, the smaller potatoes being affected and the largest perfectly sound; and should this happy state of things continue there will be an abundance of this root, the yield being positively exuberant. The prospects of the wheat crop never appeared better, mildew, red-rust, &c., are it is true to be met with, but still much less so than for many years past, and a fortnight's fine sunny weather would introduce harvest. Oats, barley, and rye are magnificent; beans are said to be a good crop, although here and there touched with blight. Turnips are good, indeed remarkably so, but have been suffering from the difficulty there has been during the long continuance of rain in getting them hoed; but the last fortnight's fine weather has given the farmers an opportunity of getting this important process to a great extent performed. The hay crop has not so materially suffered from the wet as was anticipated, and the later crops will, with favourable weather, be not only abundant but of excellent quality.

PRICES OF STOCK.—At a sale at the hundred of Bassetlaw, of a herd of cattle bred from the late Earl Spencer's stock, good prices were realised. The cows and heifers realised a total of £1,252, giving an average of £43 each. One animal fetched 130 guineas, and another 100 guineas.—Gloucester Chronicle.

SALE OF COTSWOLD RAMS.—The following are the average prices obtained for Cotswold tups at the annual sale held on the hills this week: At Mr. William Lano's, Broadfield Farm, £23 10s. each; Mr. Thomas Wells's, Hammett, £7 19s. 6d. each; Mr. Barton's, Coln Rogers, £11 13s. 8d. each; and Mr. William Hewer's, Northleach, £14 9s. each.—Gloucester Chronicle.

SAVING OF FLAX SEED.—THE RUSSIAN WAR.—The Royal Flax Improvement Society of Ireland has just issued a circular to landed proprietors and farmers in that country, containing advice which similar parties in England and Scotland may profit by. It is as follows:—Farmers are earnestly requested to observe, that so long as the war continues, Riga seed cannot be had in sufficient quantity for the Irish sowing. Unless they take care to save seed for themselves, from the crop that is now growing, they will not be able to sow the usual quantity next spring. This would be very unfortunate, as the high price at which flax must keep, during the war, should induce them to sow largely.

STOCKS OF WHEAT IN HULL.—It is an extraordinary fact, and we state it on good authority, that, at the present moment, the stocks of wheat at the port of Hull amount to 80,000 quarters.—Doncaster Gazette.

HOP INTELLIGENCE.

BOROUGH, July 31.—The accounts from the plantations continue to come very bad; many of the best grounds are now said to be fast going into blight. Duty, 50,000. A brisk demand for all fine hops.—Daily News.

MARKETS.

MONEY MARKET.

MONDAY.—The English funds were steady, and closed at an advance. Consols opened at the prices of Saturday, namely, 92½ to 3 for money, and 92½ to 3 for the account, and remained with little alteration throughout the greater part of the day. A further decline in the corn-market, however, coupled with a report that the Government had received a telegraphic despatch of the capture of the Aland Isles, caused an improvement to 92½ to 3 for money, and 92½ to 3 for the account, at which the market closed with firmness. The tendency to confidence throughout the day was strengthened by the news from the Danube as well as by the arrival of 350,000*l.* in specie by the West India mail. Bank Stock left off at 210 to 212; Reduced, 92½ to 3; Three-and-a-Quarter per Cents., 93½ to 3; Long Annuities, 4½; India Stock, 222 to 225; India Bonds, 2s. to 5s. premium; Exchequer Bills, par to 3s. premium; and Exchequer Bonds, 98½ to 3.

TUESDAY.—The English funds opened at the improved prices of Monday, but, owing to the market being well supplied with stock throughout the day, they closed at a decline of an eighth. Consols were first quoted 92½ to 3, and left off at 92½ to 3, for money, and 92½ to 3 for the account. There was increased ease in the discount market, but neither this nor a repetition of the report of the capture of the Aland Isles exercised the slightest influence in removing the dullness which has prevailed among the speculators for some time past. Bank Stock closed at 210 to 212; Reduced, 92½ to 3; Three-and-a-Quarter per Cents., 93½ to 3; Long Annuities, 4½; India Stock, 222 to 225; India Bonds, 2s. to 5s. premium; Exchequer Bills, par to 3s. premium; and Exchequer Bonds, 98½ to 3.

WEDNESDAY.—The funds opened at the slightly lower prices of Tuesday evening, and were again dull throughout the day, some rather heavy sales by the broker for the Court of Chancery having easily affected the market. Consols for money were first quoted 92½ to 3, and, after having touched 92, they closed at 92 to 3 for money, and 92½ to 3 for the account. Bank Stock left off at 210 to 212; Reduced, 92½ to 3; Three-and-a-Quarter per Cents., 93½ to 3; Long Annuities, 4½; India Stock, 223 to 226; India Bonds, 2s. to 5s. premium; Exchequer Bills, par to 3s. premium; and Exchequer Bonds, 98½ to 3.

THURSDAY.—The Bank of England to-day reduced their rate of discount from 5½ per cent., at which it had stood since the 11th of May, to 5 per cent. The English funds opened with considerable heaviness at a further decline of an eighth, and, but for the notification from the Bank, would evidently have resumed to the close of business without reaction. Upon the alteration in the rate of discount becoming known, an improvement of ¼ per cent. took place, and the market closed with steadiness. Consols for money were first quoted 92 to 3, and they left off at 92½ to 3. For the account the last price was 92½ to 3. Bank Stock closed at 209½ to 211½; Reduced, 92½ to 3; Three-and-a-Quarter per Cents., 93 to 3; Long Annuities, 4½; India Bonds, 2s. to 5s. premium; Exchequer Bills, 1s. to 4s. premium; and Exchequer Bonds, 98½ to 3.

FRIDAY, 12 o'clock, 92½ to 3. Market rising.

SMITHFIELD.

MONDAY, July 31.—We had a fair supply of beasts as to numbers, but the quality was very indifferent. The demand was more active, and Friday's advance is fully maintained. There was a larger number of sheep; trade was by no means brisk, although there was not much reduction in price. We had very few good lambs on offer; they were readily disposed of at advanced rates. Good calves were rather dearer. From Germany and Holland there were 1,463 beasts, 4,290 sheep, and 253 calves. Scotland, 100 beasts; Norfolk and Suffolk, 200; and 2,200 from the Northern and Midland Counties. Best Scots, Herefords, 4s. 10d. to 5s. 2d.; best shorthorns, 4s. to 5s.; second quality beasts, 3s. 4d. to 4s. 4d.; calves, 3s. 6d. to 5s.; pigs, 3s. 4d. to 4s. 6d.; sheep, best South-downs and half-breeds, 4s. 10d. to 5s.; best long-wools, shorn, 4s. 8d. to 4s. 10d.; ewes, second quality, shorn, 3s. 6d. to 4s. 4d.; lambs, 5s. to 5s. 10d. Beasts at market, 4,035; sheep and lambs, 31,780; calves, 343; pigs, 420.

COUNTRY CATTLE.

DERBY SMITHFIELD, Aug. 1.—Our market was better supplied with fat beasts to-day; the demand was good, with a full attendance of buyers. The number of sheep and lambs was less than it has been on some preceding markets, fully maintaining our past quotations. Fat and store calves was about the average, and in good request. The supply of pigs was large, without any alteration of price. Beef made 6d. to 6½*d.*; mutton, 6½*d.* to 7*d.*; lamb, 7*d.*; veal, 6*d.* to 6½*d.* per lb.; pigs, 9s. 6d. per score; rough fat, 6d. per stone, commencing July 12; hides, young, 90 and above, 3½*d.* per lb.; ditto, young, under 90, 3½*d.*; old cows, all weights, 3d.; old hides, 2½*d.*; calf skins, 10*l.* and under, 4d.; above 10 and under 16, 4½*d.*; above 16, 3½*d.*; all calf skins, 3½*d.* less.

EXETER.—An average supply of prime beef. The transactions were principally at from 10s. to 10s. 6d. per score; but where the quality was superior, it was still by some parties deemed worth 11s. per score. Of barreners the supply was slack, and the demand limited, prime quality being at 7s. per score, and inferior ditto 5s. 6d. per score. There was a small supply of butchers' calves, with a tolerable amount of business doing at 6d. per lb. Cows and calves were in small supply, with slack sale, at from 10*l.* to 16*l.* Sheep were in about an average supply, with business indifferent. Prices vary but little from last week. Large wethers, 6*l.*; small ditto, 6½*d.*; ewes, 5½*d.* to 6d.; lambs, 6*l.* to 6½*d.* per lb. Pigs a small supply, and but little business doing. Prices, however, show scarcely any variation from recent quotations. Large pigs, 60s.; large slips, 25s. to 30s.; small ditto, 15s. to 20s.; suckers, 7s. to 10s. each. Rough fat, 5d. per lb.

MARK LANE.

MONDAY, July 31.—There was a short supply of English wheat at market this morning, and its value gave way 1s. per quarter. Foreign wheat was in more extensive demand, and could not be purchased cheaper than last week. Barrel flour was quite as dear. Norfolk flour was sold at an advance of 2s. per sack, and is now generally held for 45s. The town millers were undecided at a late hour whether to reduce the top price 5s. per sack. Barley sold slowly at a reduction of 1s. per quarter. Oats were a heavy trade at a like decline. Beans and peas must be quoted 1s. cheaper. Arrivals into London from July 24 to 29—English wheat, 1,203 qrs.; Scotch ditto, 349 qrs.; Foreign ditto, 17,238 qrs. English barley, 10 qrs.; Scotch ditto, 587 qrs.; Foreign ditto, 5,230 qrs. English oats, 904 qrs.; Scotch ditto, 875 qrs.; Irish ditto, 50 qrs.; Foreign ditto, 35,665 qrs. English malt, 6,147 qrs.; Scotch ditto, 50 qrs.; Irish ditto, 50 qrs. Flour, 1,640 sacks, and 6,382 barrels.

COUNTRY GRAIN.

LEWIS, Aug. 1.—The supply of wheat at market to-day was a mere nothing, many of the merchants not having the offer of a single sample. The trade evinced a decided firmness as compared with that of last week, and the same descriptions of wheat realised 1s. per quarter more money—hence the depressed state of London market has not influenced this to-day. Beans dear, and the crop very badly spoken of. Red wheat, 56s. to 59s. per quarter; white, 65s. to 69s.; barley, 32s. to 35s.; beans, 47s. to 50s.; peas, 40s. to 44s. Averages for week ending Aug. 1—Wheat, 202 qrs. 2 bush, at 65s. per qr.

CHICHESTER, Aug. 2.—New white wheat, 16*l.* to 17*l.* per load; new brown wheat, 14*l.* to 16*l.*; old ditto, 15*l.* to 16*l.* 10s.; grinding barley, 34s. to 36s.; oats, 30s.; Irish oats, 28s. to 30s.; new peas, 42s.; beans, 50s.; malt, 76s. to 80s.; flour, 50s. per sack. Supply equal to demand.

PROVISIONS.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—A reluctance has been evinced to operate in Irish butter, and the supply getting larger, prices have a downward tendency. There are sellers of Cork according to quality at 78s to 94*s.*; Carlow, Clonmel, and Kilkenny, 88s. to 94*s.*; Limerick, 82s. to 94*s.*; and Waterford, 81s. to 83s. per cwt. Imports were 9,820 firkins for the past week, and stock is greater than in the previous year, with large parcels near at hand. Foreign is plentiful, and rates are depressed, demand being limited.—Friesland of fine quality is 90s. in 92s.; Holstein and Keil, 88s. to 92s.; Leer and Emden, 74s. to 78s.; and French, 72s. to 76s. Imports were 15,930 casks for the past week. English in large supply, and trade is dull; prime Dorset at 86s. to 100s., Devon 84s. to 94s., and fresh 9s. to 12s. per dozen lbs. Prime bacon is much wanted, and prices are supported, but there is a dull market for inferior and stale parcels, which can be obtained at some decline. Prices for Irish small meat rule at 69s. to 74s.; heavy 62s. to 72s.; Hambro', 64s. to 72s., according to quality; and American, 48s. to 54s. Imports were 5,000 bales for the past week. In middles not much has been done; Irish can be obtained at 56s. to 60s., and American 42s. to 46s. Hams have been much in request; Irish at 60s. to 74s., and English 74s. to 84s. Lard is difficult of sale; sellers are willing to accept for Irish bladdered 64s. to 72; keg and firkin, 57s to 62s.; American ditto, 50s. to 53s.; and refined, 64s. to 66s. Pickled middles of pork are in small supply, and wanted at 61s. to 62s. Cheese has been dealt in with caution, and rates are on the decline, ruling for Gouda at 38s. to 40s., Edam 48s. to 54s., and American 52s. to 60s. The firmness in the market for ships' provisions continues, and a large demand exists. Beef, prime Irish India, realiso 7*l.* 15s. to 8*l.*; mess, according to quality, 70s. to 120s.; pork, prime, 8*l.* to 8*l.* 5s. per tierce; and best mess, 92s. 6d. to 95s. per barrel.

HAY AND STRAW.

EXETER.—Large purchases of hay for prime quality mostly range at 12s. per seam. Large purchases of straw are generally at about 3s., with occasional variations at from 3s. 3d. to 3s. 6d. per seam.

FOREIGN.

HESSE.—In order to prevent the scandalous monopoly and forestalment of corn prices, by the sale to speculators of standing crops, the Government of Electoral Hesse has issued a decree, whereby it is enacted, in virtue of a law of 1817, that all such sales or purchases shall be null and void, and the parties punished in the mode prescribed by that law. The Electoral Government deserves great credit for standing peremptorily forward to prevent this abominable traffic.

TURF TALK.

"The chosen sport of a great and a free people."

OUR SAILOR KING.

AUTUMN, with its ruddy face, would seem to peep on us from a distance when the note is sounded of the advent of the Casarewitch and Cambridgeshire Stakes. The nomination for these famous races has appeared, and exhibits an entry of 153 horses for the former, while the latter, usually in the majority, falls short of that number by two. The handicappers have thus a goodly array on which they are to exercise their skill and judgment. To satisfy every owner would be next to an impossibility; but we trust that the cast will cause the smallest amount of dissensions, as, at the same time it shall bear the strictest test of impartiality. One hundred and six horses are entered for both events, including the winner of the Derby and the all-conquering Vinago. The most conspicuous of those nominated for the Casarewitch only are Acrobat, Ammonia, Coup d'Etat, Grapeshot, Heavy, Hunperford, Ilex, Ivan, Joe Miller, Jonathan Martin, Lettysheut, Lord John, Mincement, Muscovite, Rataplan, Red Lion, St. Andrew, Torment, and Tros. The Cambridgeshire, in the other hand, may claim the exclusive favour of Alembic, Annie Sutherland, Ariosto, Calypso, Champagne, Early Bird, Fact, Helena, Irving, Kennyside Hero, Knight Errant, Mayfair, Meteor, New Warrior, Orestes, Orinoco, Pelion, Quince Roebuck, Sittingbourne, Sortie, Testy, and Vindex.

There are three foreigners, Voyager, bred in France, Stern and Scherz, German-bred horses. In these days of fraternisation they are sure of a welcome, and due allowance will no doubt be made for the novelty of their position. The attentions of the first-named are confined to the longer race, but the German steeds go for both prizes. It may be here remarked that the entries are without the name of any animal trained on the other side of St. George's channel.
The gambler has, however, been thrown down for several Irish-bred horses of note, but who have been for some time in England. In the Cesarewitch are Dr. O'Toole, Indian Warrior, Gamekeeper, Knight of St. George, Gray Plover, and Tom; in the Cambridgeshire, Early Bird, Helena, The Deformed, Gray Plover, Tom, Indian Warrior, Knight of St. George, Gamekeeper, and Dr. O'Toole, all Irish-bred.
With the prospect of such a field there is likely to no lack of speculation; and the game has already commenced, something like a score having been backed for the contest in the Second October Meeting; Balrownie and the Star of Surrey taking precedence.

The St. Leger betting is still an enigma. Within five weeks of the event, we continue without a favourite. King Tom is up and down like a see-saw. The status quo is certainly preserved by Dervish, but with anything but a firm attitude.
The public, guided by previous running, began to fancy that Acrobat was the better horse; but the authorities at Whitewall say "No;" and, on its being rumoured that he is not to oppose his friend Dervish, the Son of Ithuriel was sent to the right-about. The layers of the odds may not, eventually, have the best of the bargain. The Trapper and Scythian receive support without advancement. And, in short, all sorts of possible and impossible nags are occasionally backed to the manifest advantage of those who make a book. The friends of Autocrat take the long odds with more confidence since it is asserted he has received the benefit of the same skilful treatment that Mr. Major bestowed last year on the Reiver in somewhat similar position. A change in the tone of the market must, however, be expected long before famous Warwick. It is to be presumed that we are not likely to see a start for the Doncaster St. Leger with 6 to 1 on the field.

The racing of the past week, multifarious as it has been scarcely requires comment. Rignon, Stoke on Trent, which we regret to hear was the scene of a fatal accident, caused by the falling of a stand, Reading, Lewes, and Tonbridge have had their meetings and the results registered, without being calculated to exert much influence on coming events. Lough Bawn's victory in the North Staffordshire, proves the truth of the adage, that "It's a long lane that has no turning;"
and, as he has lately acquired the art of finding his way to the winning-post, he may now go on and prosper. The Berkshire Stakes at Reading turned out to be a very comfortable affair for brother to Gray Tommy. The issue was a bit of a surprise to those who saw him run at Goodwood, but was not unexpected by the initiated few who had backed him for this race.

These are strange times, or the paltry attack on the late member for Beverley on account of his connexion with the turf had never taken place. A partiality towards horse-racing does not necessarily prove a disqualification for holding office; and, the unhandsome treatment Mr.
Lawley has experienced cannot fail to rally round him a host of friends. There is a puritanical spirit abroad that would reduce all things to its own narrow notions; but let it not meddle with the turf. Englishmen have made the racecourse their own; and, no unfortunate ear that ever trespassed on the running-ground would be more universally hooted than any interference with their favourite pastime.

There are no less than half a dozen meetings during the forthcoming week; namely, Wolverhampton, Egham, Polk-stone, Paisley, Plymouth and Hartlepool. Two or three are of a mere local character, but, nevertheless, promise some sport. Wolverhampton will of course attract the greatest attention of turfites. The Wolverhampton stakes is likely to be a spirited little affair—Newbold and Boniton being the chief favourites. Egham, despite a rather meagre list, will be certain with fine weather to draw a large number of visitors to the pretty Runnymede.

TATTERSALL'S.—MONDAY.

Although most of the afternoon was spent in paying and receiving, yet a good deal of business was transacted at intervals on the St. Leger.
At first the investments on King Tom at 4 to 1 exceeded £300; in the city, indeed, in the course of the morning, 700 to 200 was taken in one bet; but notwithstanding such demonstrations in his favour, his position was manifestly unsteady; at length 5 to 1 was betted, but the layer was the last to three—several persons stepped in to the rescue, and he was returned to 4 to 1. 6 to 1 to £200, and 11 to 2 in ponies, who were betted against Dervish—6 to 1 taken in the aggregate to £150 about The Trapper, and to 1 to some money about Scythian, who had an advancing tendency at the close. 300 to 25 taken about Autocrat—1000 to 50 The Knight of St. George—1000 to 45 Marryas, and 60 to 1 to a small sum about Calamus. Acrobat was evidently tumbling—from 200 to 1 taken at the commencement, he fell to 25 to 1, taken and offered.

With the exception that 4 to 1 was taken freely about Heapy for the Ebor Handicap, the rest of the betting was on a very limited scale.

In the course of the afternoon, the following announcement was posted in the room:—
"We, the undersigned members of the committee of the Room, hereby express our opinion that all persons indebted to Mr. Arnold, for Epsom, or previously, are bound to pay Mr. Hughes, who has his account up to that time."
(Signed) "C. GREVILLE."
"H. HOUS."

"August 7, 1854."
To explain this, it is necessary to state that owing to the death of Mr.
Arnold, on the 23rd of June, appointed Mr. Hughes to settle his Derby account for him, but in the exercise of his office, Mr. Hughes met with so many procrastinating excuses, that he was, at length, compelled to submit the case to the committee of the room, who delivered their opinion to-day in the above form. The consequence will be, that they will assist in settling so settle with Mr. Hughes will be held in the category of defaulters, and will be liable to the "rules and regulations in that case made and provided."

The quotation at the close were as follow:—

A large number of subscribers having proceeded from Reading to Lower races—now, for the first time, under the management of Mr.
Topham—there was a very small muster at The Corner, and only the following bets were laid:—

GREAT EBOR HANDICAP.
10 to 1 agst	Lord Zeland's Tros (taken)
7 to 1	agst Merrybird and Grand Inquisitor, coupled (taken)
ST. LEGER.
225 to 50 agst	Baron Rothschild's King Tom (taken)

175 to 25	agst Mr. Payne's The Trapper (taken)
200 to 10	agst Mr. Morris's Knight of St. George (taken)

There was a pretty good attendance at the room this morning.
Speculation however continued dull beyond precedent. The North Staffordshire Handicap and Berkshire Stakes, run to-day, engrossed the greatest share of attention. For the Ebor Handicap, and St. Leger, we have little change to notice since our last latest prices.)

away with the lead. Vingt-et-un, Cleveland, and Cock Pheasant heading the pack. No change of moment occurred until they arrived at the lower turn, when five or six of them ran out, leaving Cleveland with the lead.
He had only proceeded a few strides however, when some of them in pulling round and "righting" rushed against him, and driving him against a post, he was soon left in the rear. Midship then carried on the running to the half distance where she was joined by Brother to Grey Tommy and Vingt-et-un, and a close set to ensue. The gallant Grey, however, achieved the victory very cleverly by a length and a quarter, the second beating the third by a head. Pastorycock about two lengths

DROITWICH v. KIDDERMINSTER.

This match was played at Kidderminster; Sheldon and Richards bowling. The bowling was under-hand, and very good; Sheldon's being left-handed. Kidderminster lost their wickets for forty-one runs, which Droitwich headed by sixteen runs; this number being obtained by Mr. Richards by very good play. The Kidderminster bowling required more lively ground. It is round and very good, especially that of Hawkes. Wilkes, who was put on as a change, finely bowled Mr. Richards by a shooter; and Kidderminster went in again, this time with more success, Messrs. Talbot, Hawkes, and Kent doing most work with the bat, and the two former making excellent scores. The innings closed for 107, leaving 91 to be got off. Droitwich immediately put their men in; and when time was called had scored 30 for the loss of four wickets. The game is thus drawn, but rather in favour of Kidderminster, as the four best wickets had fallen. Sheldon, the left-handed bowler, should try to command his temper, as the exhibition of bad temper spoils all the amusement of the game. He should also forbear appealing without cause; for balls pitched a foot to the off and breaking in cannot possibly justify an appeal for leg before wicket.

WEEDON GARRISON v. THE RUGBY CLUB.

The annual match between the above set of war and the seat of learning, took place at Rugby on Monday week. The morning was fair, but in the afternoon the rain fell copiously, causing both sides to beat to quarters under the pavilion. The Garrison commenced action by sending in Byrne and Beck; the former, after making three ones, quitted the field, but Beck lived to see the last man out, after numberling twenty-four, by four threes, two twos, the rest single. Helmes was the next, and the next best man, he placing fifteen on the score by two threes, three twos, the rest single. The remaining eight averaged one each—seven out of this number having their wickets shot away by Buchanan and Sawyer in rapid succession; thus making a total of fifty-three, and all told.

The Rugby side now entered the lists; Caldecott and Benn leading the van. The former placed twenty opposite to his name, and the latter scored sixteen. Sawyer appeared to have a decided objection to singles, so made eighteen by a long ranger for four, two threes, and four twos. Buchanan and Clarke each placed thirty carefully down to their score. The former by three threes, five twos, the rest single; and the latter by eight twos, the rest single.

The Garrison added twenty-four to the Rugby score, in consequence of their ball practice being wide of the mark in thirteen instances, also by allowing ten byes to go past the outposts. After a short council of war it was considered advisable to strike, and the Garrison retired homeward, leaving the civilians masters of the ground, but not before they had partaken of the hospitality of the Rugby Club in the shape of a dinner, &c.

ROYAL WESTERN YACHT CLUB REGATTA.

The annual regatta in connection with the Royal Western Yacht Club took place on Wednesday week, at Plymouth. The weather was fine, and a good breeze blew from the N.W. The Regatta did not attract many yachts from a distance. On that fine promenade the Hoe, the band of the Royal Marines was stationed, and a numerous and gay assemblage took place. So few were the yachts that a schooner and a Bermudian rigged yacht were entered as cutters.

In the Sound there were the Cloud, the yacht of the Commodore of the club, the Earl of Mount Edgemore; the schooner Beatrice, Sir Walter Carey, Bart.; Georgiana, schooner, Captain Thelluson; Fancy, schooner, Rev. R. P. Hartop (do.); Mr. T. Fox's yacht, &c. &c.

The sailing committee, which consisted of H. S. Blake, Esq. (chairman), C. Cardew, Esq., S. Triscott, Esq., H. Fells, Esq., with Captain Shum, as secretary, took their station on board a vessel moored in the Sound for the purpose of starting the yachts, and timing them as they came in, and shortly after one o'clock the signal gun gave warning to the vessels to take their respective stations for the first race, which was—

A CLUB PRIZE of £35, open to all cutters of thirty tons and upwards, bona fide the property of a member of the Royal Yacht Club, and holding the Admiralty Warrant, for which the following were entered:—

Name.	Tons.	Owner.	Flag.
Marina	52	William J. Foster, Esq.	White and blue flag, crest in the centre.
Osprey	59	Lieut.-Col. H. W. Huey	Blue, white, blue, white vertical.
Sea Flower	35	Henry Moore, Esq.	White flag, blue border.

The course was through the Western Channel of the Breakwater, round a marked vessel moored off Penice Point, thence to another marked vessel moored off the Mew Stone, leaving both on the Port-hand, returning through the Eastern channel of the Breakwater, rounding the buoy of the Cobbler, which is to be left on the Port-hand, then round the committee vessel having a blue ensign flying, which is also to be left on the Port-hand, proceeding round the course as before, and which vessel will be the winning post in the last round, passing between it and the shore—twice the distance.

All being in readiness the gun was fired at 1h. 15m. 10s., and a very excellent start was effected. The sails were hoisted in an instant. The Osprey, which occupied the second position, appeared to catch the wind first, and shot up abreast of Marina. In this position they continued till reaching the breakwater, neither vessel appeared to gain upon the other. The Sea Flower appeared to have no chance from the first. At 1h. 51m. 45s., the Osprey rounded the vessel opposite Penice Point followed by the Marina at 1h. 54m., and the Sea Flower 2h. 3m. On rounding the Cobbler-buoy the Osprey weathered in splendid style, and in fact throughout the race she was handled in a first-rate manner. She passed the committee's barge at 3h. 42m. The Marina did not weather the buoy so well, and considerable time was lost between the buoy and the Committee's barge in shifting her topsail for a square one. It was consequently 3h. 54m. before she passed, being exactly twelve minutes behind the Osprey. The wind having considerably fallen, the chance of the Sea Flower became less, and being far behind her competitors, she gave up the race before passing the Cobbler-buoy. The second round presented no feature of variation from the first. The Osprey went away with the lead, and in sporting phraseology, kept it, the time of arrival being as follows:—

	R.	M.	S.
Osprey	6	5	25
Marina	6	30	30

The next race was:—

A CLUB PRIZE of £35, open to all yachts from 10 to 30 tons, bona fide the property of a member of the Royal Yacht Club, and holding the Admiralty Warrant. The following yachts entered:—

Name.	Tons.	Owner.	Flag.
Annie	25	S. Triscott, Esq.	Blue and White flag, horizontal.
Wasp	25	John Fleming, Esq.	Blue flag—orange, Maltese cross in centre.
Dolphin	20	Capt. H. Storey, R.N.	Red flag.
Pixie	14	W. F. Moore, Esq.	Blue peter.

The Wasp was a schooner, but she was allowed to start in the race rated as a fifteen ton cutter. The start took place at 2h. 14m. The race was a capital one, the Annie, Pixie, and Wasp, going off in splendid style, and keeping so close together, that until they passed the boat at Penice Point it was impossible to say which was first. The Annie then slightly got the lead, followed closely by the Pixie and Schooner, and in this position they continued until they passed the Committee's barge in the first round as under:—

	R.	M.	S.
Annie	5	21	0
Pixie	5	24	0
Wasp	5	26	30

Annie obtained a considerable lead, which she maintained, coming in about a quarter after eight o'clock, about five minutes before the Pixie. The Dolphin gave in early in the race, and the Wasp before reaching the Cobbler-buoy in the last round.

A race four-oared gigs belonging to yachts in the Sound. First, £3; second, £2; and third, £1.

Bats belonging to the Georgiana, Eclipse, and Beatrice, started, and after a well-contested race of about six miles, the Eclipse came in first, Georgiana second, and Beatrice third.

The sports of the day were brought to a conclusion by a cable-punt race, first prize, £1; second, 10s.; and third, 5s. The race was from the Committee's barge, round the Cobbler-buoy, and back, and it was a very exciting one, and afforded a great deal of amusement.

THE REGATTA BALL, under the patronage of the Royal Western Yacht Club, took place on Wednesday night at Elliott's Royal Hotel, and was numerously and fashionably attended.

TORQUAY ROYAL REGATTA.

The great annual regatta at the above picturesque and marine retreat took place on Friday the 4th inst., and as usual, drew together thousands of person from different parts of the kingdom, many of whom travelled from Bath, Bristol, Taunton, Exeter, and more distant places.

The prizes consisted of a purse of 30 sovereigns, for yachts upwards of 25 tons; a purse of 20 sovereigns, for yachts of 15 and under 25 tons; a purse of 10 sovereigns, for yachts not exceeding 15 tons; a purse for Torquay fishing-boats; a silver cup, for four-oared gigs; a second prize of £4, for four-oared gigs; and a third prize of £3, for four-oared yacht gigs; £3, for four-oared gigs, rowed by women; £2, for two-oared gigs; £5 10s., for trailers, rowing with the implements used by them in their trades; besides several minor prizes, for punts, net-boats, duck hunts, walking the bowsprit, racing on kilderkins, and a vast number of other aquatic sports.

The first race was for a purse of sovereigns for Torquay fishing boats, for which the following started:—

Name.	Owner.	Flag.
Venus	J. Lear	Red.
Star	T. Lear	Red and White.
Holath	Thomas Bowden	Blue.
Headdon	S. Harley	Blue, White, and Red.
Deceiver	E. Harley	Yellow.
Coquette	H. Hocking	White.
Yulecan	W. Bowden	Chiquered.
Athlon	John Tapper	Red and Blue.
Why Not	Thomas Hawey	Green.
Jack	R. Webber	White and Blue.

The course was from a mark abreast of the jetty, round a boat moored off Goodrington Sands, from thence to a mark off Brixham, proceeding thence to a mark-boat off Berry, returning by the south-east to the starting-point. Twice round the course, a distance of 26 miles. After a very spirited contest, the prize was won by the Star, T. Lear, beating the second boat, the Dreadon, by 26 minutes. The other boats were not timed.

The next race was for a purse of 30 Sovereigns, for Yachts of from 15 to 25 tons, O.M., bona fide the property of gentlemen and kept for pleasure only. The course the same as in the preceding race:—

Name.	Tons.	Owner.	Flag.
Vampire	15	C. Wheeler, Esq.	A Bat on White ground, Red border.
Annie	23	Saml. Triscott, Esq.	Blue and White diagonal.
Dolphin	22	Capt. Storey, R.N.	Red.

The following resolution was passed at a meeting of the stewards of the regatta:—"Resolved, that no entrance fee be charged for either class, and that the winner of the first prize pay three sovereigns towards the Regatta Fund. The winner of the second prize to pay two sovereigns. Half-minute time."

At 1h. 38m. the signal-gun was fired, Vampire being the first to get away, followed by Annie, and after her Dolphin. Vampire, however, continued her leading position, and on her arrival abreast of Paignton Sands, at 2h. 3m., she had the lead of Annie five minutes, there being about the same difference between her and Dolphin. The positions during the round were not altered, unless it was by Dolphin going more to leeward. Annie struggled hard to overhaul her opponent, but Vampire still held a good wind, and never was reached. The first and second rounds were concluded as follows:—

FIRST ROUND.
	R.	M.	S.
Vampire	3	26	0
Annie	3	28	0
Dolphin	3	37	0
SECOND ROUND.
	R.	M.	S.
Vampire	4	56	30
Annie	5	5	0

Dolphin was not timed in the second round. Thus Vampire has added another to her many victories formerly obtained.

The races for yachts from 25 to 35 tons, and for yachts not exceeding ten tons, did not fill, the only entries being the Thought, G. Coope, Esq., for the former, and the Bacchante, H. J. Waring, Esq., for the latter. That such should be the fact is most extraordinary, seeing that no entrance money was required, and that the following yachts were in the bay:—Ariel, Georgiana, Beatrice, Fanny, Silph, Shark, Chase, Lady Rowena, Albatross, Caprice, Moya, Isabel, Eclipse, Paragon, Osprey, Mariner, Sea Flower, Fawn, Margaret, Eulalie, Lily of the Valley, Juan, Anna, Paul Pry, and several others.

The next was a race of a novel description by four-oared boats, but for which no oars were allowed to be used. It was called the Trades' Rowing Match, and for which the following were entered:—

Name.	Trade.
The Hot Roll	The Bakers' Craft.
The Nonpareil	The Gardeners' Gigs.
The Jean d'Acres	The Coalheavers' Drag.
The Tapped Hen	The Maltsters.

In the place of oars the competitors were required to use the implements of their trade as a means of propulsion—viz., the bakers their oven peels, gardeners their spades, maltsters their shovels, and coalheavers their scoops. This race excited the utmost amusement, and loud bursts of laughter testified how it was enjoyed by the immense multitude that witnessed it. The maltsters made a good start ahead, paddling with their malt shovels, but the "men of dough" with their peels soon passed them, and finally won by three lengths.

Another droll species of amusement was produced by eight kilderkins being set afloat, bearing the significant names of Swipes, XXX, Barclay and Co.'s Entire, Heavy Wet, Old Tom, Gin and Bitters, Hot Coppers, and Water Bewitched. Upon each of these casks a daring competitor straddled across, with a short paddle, and in many cases, from the difficulty of maintaining an equilibrium, they were unable to preserve their upright position, and frequent duckings rewarded their temerity amidst perfect roars of laughter. Ultimately, we believe, the prize was most appropriately won by "Heavy Wet."

The whole concluded with the regatta ball at Webb's Royal Hotel, which was very numerously attended.

ROYAL SOUTHERN YACHT CLUB REGATTA.

The Royal Southern Yacht Club opened its campaign on Tuesday morning under the most favourable circumstances. The weather was beautiful in the extreme, with a moderate breeze from the westward. In the first race the Acorn, of 102 tons, Captain Wiggall, was entered, but did not start.

PRIZE of £40 for Schooners, the property of members belonging to any Royal yacht club. Time race, according to Ackers's scale.

Name.	Tons.	Owner.	Flag.
Elizabeth	75	R. Wright, Esq.	Yellow, four blue squares.
Acorn	102	Capt. Wiggall	Red burgee.
Wasp	25	J. Fleming, Esq.	Blue, orange—Maltese cr.
Genevra	142	Str P. Shelley	Red, swallow-tail.
Mayfly	114	G. P. Bidder, Esq.	Red burgee.
Aquiline	51	J. Cardinal, Esq.	Blue burgee—gold eagle.

The signal-gun for starting the schooners was fired at eleven o'clock. The whole got away without difficulty, and laid down the river on the starboard tack, the Elizabeth keeping the lead, and rounding the Calshot light-vessel 4 minutes 45 seconds in advance of the Genevra; the Genevra was 4 minutes 15 seconds ahead of the Wasp, which was closely followed by the Mayfly, the Aquiline being nearly 3 minutes afterwards. Thence they worked down the Solent with a steady westerly breeze till they reached the flag-boat off Yarmouth in the following order:—Elizabeth, Wasp, Genevra, Aquiline, and Mayfly, there being a difference of 14 minutes from the first to the last. The yachts then stood before the wind, under a press of canvas, making the Warner in the following order:—Elizabeth, Mayfly, Wasp, Genevra, and Aquiline. In rounding this point the Elizabeth was 31½ minutes in advance of the Aquiline. They then returned through Spithead for the Southampton Waters; and the Elizabeth, who passed by the Medina steamer, pushing on for the goal to be there to receive the yachts had a considerable lead. The following were the times of arrival:—

	R.	M.	S.
Elizabeth	7	55	0
May Fly	9	11	0
Wasp	9	27	0
Genevra	9	28	0
Aquiline, not timed.

The Elizabeth was remarkably well sailed, and by running over to the north shore, in making for the Warner, and, consequently, keeping much out of the force of the tide, there is no doubt she gained a considerable advantage over her antagonists. Had the Wasp followed her example her chance of success would have been much greater.

In the cutter-match only three started, viz., Arrow, Bonita, and Wildfire. The Phantom, Thought, and Marina, could not get round from the westward in time to be at the starting-vessel.

PRIZE of £40, for cutters the property of members belonging to any Royal Yacht Club above 20 tons. Time race, allowance of Time according to Ackers's scale up to 70 tons.

Ship	Tons	Owner	Colour
Thought ..	25	C. Coope, Esq.	Red
Arrow ..	102	T. Chamberlayne, Esq.	Blue, with white arrow
Bonita ..	30	T. Barnes, Esq.	Fish, blue ground
Wildfire ..	56	J. Thynne, Esq.	Blue
Marina ..	51

The course for this as in the former match, was from the starting vessel off the club-house, round a flag-boat off Yarmouth, leaving it and the Calshot light-vessel on the starboard hand; thence round the Warner, leaving it on the port hand; returning to pass between the flag-boat and Southampton Pier.

The race for the cutters may be soon told. The Arrow, which was the favourite vessel, took the lead and maintained it throughout, rounding all the points considerably ahead of her competitors. At the Warner, the last point before returning to Southampton, she was 18 minutes in advance of the Wildfire. She came in a winner by a considerable distance, some of the others arriving at eight o'clock.

The entries came in as under:—

Ship	Tons	Owner	Colour
Arrow ..	102	T. Chamberlayne, Esq.	Blue, with white arrow
Wildfire ..	56	J. Thynne, Esq.	Blue
Bonita, not timed.

In addition to the two foregoing matches, there was another for cutters under 15 tons, for a silver cup of the value of 20l. For this the following contended, viz:—

Name	Tons	Owner
Mazappa ..	15	C. Bromley, Esq.
Vesper ..	15	P. Roberts, Esq.

The course for these minor yachts was from the station, back to the Brambles, twice round. The Vesper was the winner by a considerable distance. The club very liberally placed the Melina steamer at the disposal of their friends, and many ladies and gentlemen availed themselves of a very delightful trip. The Rear Commodore of the club, Captain O'Brien, was on board, and by his arduous and polite attention contributed much to the enjoyment of the guests.

THIRD PRIZE.

Vesper beat Mazappa and Fawn.

SECOND DAY.—WEDNESDAY.

The only match on the card was for the VICE-COMMODORE'S CUP. It was open for yachts of any tonnage belonging to the Royal Southern Yacht Club. Time race, according to Ackers's scale. The following started:—

Yachts	Tons	Owners	Colours
Elizabeth ..	75	R. Wright, Esq.	Yellow, with four blue squares
Thought ..	25	G. Coope, Esq.	Red
Arrow ..	102	T. Chamberlayne, Esq.	Blue, with white arrow
Antagonist ..	25	Lord W. Lennox	Light blue Maltese cross

Mazappa .. 12 .. C. Bromley, Esq. .. Red, with white border.

Vesper .. 15 .. P. Roberts, Esq. .. Red

Sonnambula .. 20 .. J. A. Wake, Esq. .. Red and blue diagonal.

The whole of the yachts got away very prettily on the firing of the signal-gun, but, as it was almost a dead calm, the first part of the race was merely a drifting match. As many of the vessels had other engagements, it was thought best to sail under this disadvantage rather than postpone the race, and hence the reason for starting. The Arrow and Thought were the favourites, and were backed at odds against the field. For nearly two hours after the start hardly an air of wind existed, but about two o'clock a slight breeze sprang up from the south-east, and the yachts succeeded in making a slight progress down the Southampton Water until they reached Calshot Castle, at which point they were lost to view.

In the course of the morning, the vice-commodore of the club (Lord Fitzhardinge) arrived in his yacht, and was saluted from the club-house battery in the usual manner. His lordship very generously sent a brace of prime bucks for the annual dinner on Thursday.

Yachts	Tons	Owners	Colours
Vesper ..	15	P. Roberts, Esq.	Red
Elizabeth ..	75	R. Wright, Esq.	Yellow, with four blue squares
Thought ..	25	G. Coope, Esq.	Red
Arrow ..	102	T. Chamberlayne, Esq.	Blue, with white arrow
Antagonist ..	25	Lord W. Lennox	Light blue Maltese cross
Mazappa ..	12	C. Bromley, Esq.	Red, with white border
Sonnambula ..	20	J. A. Wake, Esq.	Red and blue diagonal

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES.

SIR,—My attention has been drawn to an article in your paper of yesterday in which the following passages occur:—
"An English yacht, belonging to Lord Lichfield and Easton, having Lord C. Paget on board, ventured somewhat too near the guns of the place."
"She is stated to have been in the most imminent danger of capture."

As the owner of the yacht in question, I hope I may be permitted to say that we kept at a safe distance from the guns of the forts, and were never in danger of capture.

I have felt it due to Lord Clarence Paget and the officers who accompanied me, as well as to myself, thus to correct the unintentional error into which you appear to have been led, as, had we placed ourselves in such a position, in an unarmed vessel, we should have been guilty of an act of folly.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

Albany, Aug. 6.

The regatta is fixed for Monday 4th September (weather permitting), when several prizes will be contended for by yachts, fishing smacks, and racing boats. Particulars of which will be daily announced.

LAUNCH OF A NEW YACHT.—During the present week a new yacht, built by Messrs. Johnson and Majors, Brunswick Dock, was launched from their ship-building yard. The vessel is called the Liver, and she was launched with all her sails set, and fully coppered and prepared for sea. The Liver is built on the lately-adopted plan of an iron frame covered with planks, which gives strength, combined with carrying capacity. She is 67 feet long between perpendiculars, 11 feet nine inches deep, 16 feet beam, and 78 tons measurement. The vessel has been built much in the style of the yacht America. She has a neat figure-head, representing the bird after which she is named. The launch took place at eleven o'clock. The ceremony of christening was performed by Mr. James Alexander. The launch was after the style commonly adopted in North America, namely, on a great incline, and all the ribbands and other timbers, except the bulks on which they rested, going into the water with the vessel. The yacht had the colours of the Liverpool Yacht Club at her masthead and peak. Her sails, as we have stated, were set. They were made by Messrs. Laphorne and Sons, of Cowes, and are well cut. As soon as the daggers were struck down the vessel moved down the ways into the water, and she was brought up by her sails in a very short space. She then stood over for the Cheshire shore, and was exercised a little opposite the yard of her builders, in which she appeared to advantage—wearing and staying well. Subsequently she went down to the landing-stage, to receive a party on board for a pleasure cruise. The Liver goes to Cowes, and she is entered to compete in the great regatta there on the 28th instant, when she is expected to do herself credit.

THAMES GRAND NATIONAL REGATTA.

TUESDAY.—With the very praiseworthy intention of renewing the aquatic sports on the Thames, and, if possible, renewing their former glories, a few gentlemen set zealously to work to get up the regatta, which commenced this day, and which was attended with a success as deserved, as it must have been highly gratifying to the feelings of those who had striven to organise the amusements. The patronage of H. R. H. the Duchess of Gloucester, and of the Right Honourable the Lord Mayor, having been obtained, an additional éclat was thus given to the proceedings.

The fates were most propitious, for we seldom have in this variable climate so "fair a day" as that enjoyed on the inauguration of the Thames Grand National Regatta. It was just the day to enjoy river sports, and therefore it is not much to be wondered that the gathering was numerous in the extreme. Railway, steamboat, and omnibus, deposited their human loads upon the banks of the "Old Father," as the hour for the contest drew near. The distance between Putney-bridge and Chiswick was "all alive" with company of every class, and the cheers which they sent forth evinced the interest and good wishes they entertained for the success of the spirited undertaking.

The sports opened with THE WATERMEN'S PAIR-OARED MATCH, open to all the world. Money prizes, amounting to £45.

First Heat.	Green	Yellow	Dark Blue
T. Bruce and H. Winslip ..	1
T. Cole and R. Coombes ..		2
T. Goodrum and T. Coombes ..			3

Bruce and Winslip got away with the lead, which they manfully maintained throughout the race. At the start the Elswick men were closely pressed by Goodrum and his associate, but the champion and ex-champion gave them the go by, and so gained the second honours. Wood and T. Clasper who had been entered did not row, as they could not obtain a boat.

Second Heat.	Red	Light Blue
Henry Clasper and W. Pocock ..	1
H. Kelly and R. Piner ..		2

After a lapse of about two hours the grand heat came off, and resulted as follows:—

Henry Clasper and William Pocock ..	1
Bruce and Winslip ..	2
Cole and Coombes ..	3
Kelly and Piner ..	4

This was a very exciting race, the winners dashing off at the start and arriving at the goal more than a length ahead of their antagonists.

WATERMEN'S APPRENTICES (Below Bridge), for a Coat, Badge, and Freedom, and various Moneyed Prizes.

First Heat.	White	Dark Blue
H. J. White ..	1
S. G. Pope ..		2

Second Heat.	Green and White	Dark Blue and Yellow
W. Long ..	1

Third Heat.	Pink	Light Blue and White
W. Deat ..	1
R. T. Hall ..		2

Final Heat.	Light Blue and White	Dark Blue
R. T. Hall ..	1
W. Fry ..		2

The first and second heats were well contested, the successful parties having their work cut out for them. The other heats, from want of a good amount of competitors, fell off in point of interest.

TRADESMEN'S SCULLERS' RACE, FOR SILVER CUPS.	Flak	Light Blue
J. Chandler ..	1
J. Challis ..		2

CHAMPION FOUR-OARED MATCH, open to all the world. First Prize, £100, with £25 for the other boats.

First Heat.	White	Green	Dark Blue
Sons of the Thames ..	1
Hammersmith and Chelsea ..		2
Hammersmith Sandhays ..			3

The following were the crews:—

Sons of the Thames.	Hammersmith and Chelsea.	Hammersmith Sandhays.
T. Mackinnon, J. Mackinnon, David Coombes, coxswain, Hammersmith and Chelsea crew.	J. Bolder, T. Hoare, J. Bolder, coxswain, THE SANDHAYS.	R. Coombes, T. Cole, T. Holmes, G. Green, Wright, Hilbert.

This was a very excellent illustration of the day, and every one was on the tip-toe of expectation when the crews pulled to the starting point. The betting was 2 to 1 against the Elswick crew, which from being freely taken, dropped to 6 to 4. Against Coombes or the Chasers 3 to 1 was offered.

The Sons of the Thames did not get to work until the last, but good steady pulling soon got them the lead, which they kept.

Second Heat.	1	2	3
The Elswick crew ..	1
Clasper's crew ..		2
Feather's Wandsworth Club ..			3

The names are as follows:—

Elswick crew.	Clasper's crew.	Feather's crew.
H. Winslip, M. Cook, T. Clasper, S. Wood, T. James, H. Sutter, J. Davidson, T. Bruce, A. Maddison, H. Clasper, G. Holson, G. Sutter, T. Driver, coxswain.	J. Oliver, coxswain, CLASPER'S CREW, J. Forster, coxswain, FEATHER'S CREW.

A good start was effected, the Elswick crew after a few pulls leading slightly; at about Hammersmith, they shook the other boats off, and ultimately gained the race by a length and a half.

Grand Heat.	1	2	3
The Elswick crew ..	1
Sons of the Thames ..		2
Clasper's Newcastle ..			3
Chelsea and Hammersmith ..			4

This contest may fairly be said to have been between the Elswick crew and the Sons of the Thames, the latter of which hung on to its opponent well and brought into play all their skill; a series of well-directed spurts put out by the Sons of the Thames brought them in advance at Hammersmith-bridge; but the Elswick men came out to meet the emergency, and they won with the nose of their adversaries' hind level with their stroke-oar. The other crews fell off almost from the commencement. The other races were:—

Gentlemen's Pair Oars for a Silver Cup.	1	2	3	4	5
Messrs. Chamberlayne and Edwards ..	1
J. and J. Danton ..		2
Clark and Bennett ..			3
Welch and Walford ..				4

Three crews started, and Messrs. Whitehouse, Prior, Dobree, Edkins, Turner, Schlotter, Kny, and H. Playford won, steered by Chapman.

The Geminal steamer was moored off the Messrs. Searle's establishment at Putney, for the convenience of subscribers, and the indefatigable proprietor of Cromorne had chartered two vessels to accompany the races.

WEDNESDAY.—A ghummy morning and a few soaking showers resulted in a bright and pleasant afternoon, which fact rendered the attendance as numerous as that of yesterday. Want of space prevents us entering into the detail of a very interesting day's sport, and we are therefore compelled to confine ourselves to a brief outline of the proceedings. The opening match was 'The Watermen's Scullers' Race, open to all the world, for prizes amounting to £34. The first heat was won by John Mackinnon, Richmond; James Camillish, Newcastle, 2. There was a hard struggle between Alfred Ralph, Wandsworth; and T. James, Wandsworth, for a place, which resulted in the latter being dead beat. The second heat was as follows:—T. Mackinnon, Richmond, 1; H. Kelly, Putnam, 2; E. F. Gale, Pinlicko, 3; G. Driver, Wandsworth, 4.

The final heat, to the surprise of all, was won by H. Kelly, red, beating T. Mackinnon, yellow, 2; J. Camillish, pink; J. Mackinnon, white.

MATCH FOR £100.

This was a match between Robert Newell and Henry Clasper, which caused the former to resign contesting the foregoing race. Newell gave his opponent two lengths start, and having lost a slight advantage gained shortly after the start, Clasper came in the victor after a well-rowed match. The other races were junior scullers' race for silver cups. First heat rowed over by Mr. E. G. Williams, red; Second heat also rowed over by Mr. H. Bacon, dark blue. Final heat was won by Mr. H. G. Williams, red; H. Bacon, dark blue, 2. The Tradesmen's Pair for silver cups was easily won by Pyo and Baines. Senior Gentlemen's sculls for a presentation silver cup, fell to Mr. H. Playford, green, by several lengths.

LANDSMEN'S FOUR-OARED MATCH, FOR PRIZES AMOUNTING TO £70.

The Claspers, Newcastle crew, 1; Hammersmith and Chelsea crew, 2; The Feathers, Wandsworth; Hammersmith Sand Boys; Godwin's crew. The amusements concluded with a "scratch."

SATURDAY, AUGUST 12, 1854.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

The announcement, on Saturday last, by the journal supposed to be in the immediate confidence of the Government, that on or about that very day, a force of 100,000 English, French, and Turks, were actually taking the Crimea, burst upon the town like one of Dundas's shells. In fact, as Tom Moore wrote,

"When this was read, no Congreve rocket Discharged into the Gallie trenches,
E'er equalled the tremendous shock it Produced——"

we were going to add "upon St. Stephen's benches," but experience has taught our legislators not to give way to their sensations on the subject of war, seeing that the Government is not easily moved to sympathy. But the tidings, which it was and is believed would hardly have been risked unless the journalist had good grounds for his statement, have proved the one theme of conversation ever since their promulgation, and inasmuch as a fortnight from the date of the appearance of the article will allow ample time for intelligence to arrive from the Black Sea, we presume that next week we shall be in a position to record either that the Times has been signally deceived, or that England and France have struck a tremendous blow. While awaiting more certain news, the gallantry of Sir George Brown ought not to be forgotten. The veteran martinet, with his staff, embarked on board the Fury, and actually steamed, by night, into the harbour of Sebastopol, waited for light enough to enable him to reconnoitre and to count the guns, and allowed himself to be fired upon, as dawn made it clear to the Russians that "a chiel was among them, kin' notes." The vessel was struck, but those on board escaped, and returned to the camp. The fine old soldier, determined to see for himself what the place was like, is worthy to be remembered.

Another story, which appeared on the same day, has turned out a canard. We were informed that a yacht belonging to Lords Euston and Lichfield had approached so much too near the guns of Cronstadt that an armed steamer set out to cut her off from the fleet. But an English steamer seeing this, dashed up to the rescue, accomplished it, and returned. The narrator adds that on board the Russian were the Emperor and various members of his family, who had come to see the yacht taken, and who might themselves have been easily captured, or sent to the bottom, had the Captain of the English steamer known what an august prey was before him. The story did not seem to ring very truthfully, and a letter from Lord Lichfield, who says that he never took the yacht into a position of danger, and would have been very foolish had he done so, gives it the coup de grace, for with the danger away goes the deliverance, and all the good company.

The information from the Baltic requires confirmation, but it is most probable that a successful attack has been made upon the Isle of Åland. Sir Charles's time is now growing limited, and when the ice sets in, we presume that the magnificent fleets will be withdrawn, a few steamers being sufficient, with the aid of nature, to keep up the blockade. If Sebastopol be taken, we can wait for Cronstadt, but if both could fall, we might begin to talk about treaties of peace, to the great advantage of various interests.

Before the whole of our impression is published, Parliament will have been prorogued. Her Majesty has intimated her gracious intention of proroguing in person. The materials for the composition of the speech from the Throne are scanty. Punch intimates that after a seven months' session, the Lords have abolished dog-carts, and the Commons have smashed Sir Thomas Wilson. If the news of a victory could arrive in time to swell the opening paragraph, it would be a god-send for the Ministers, but this is hardly possible, and they must drop back upon the commonplaces which it was said Pitt could have made, extempore, into a King's speech. The Houses themselves have been doing a great deal of business with a very little talking, since last week. The only exception has been the first Indian Budget, which was opened by Sir Charles Wood, on Tuesday last, in a two hours' speech of singular badness, delivered to a house of twelve members; all who could be prevailed upon to attend and hear the condition and prospects of our Indian empire. The pecuniary statements of Sir Charles were not satisfactory, but he gave an interesting account of various public works which have been effected in India, especially the gigantic Ganges Canal, and he also gave gratifying intimation as to the intentions of Government to promote education upon large and liberal principles, and without religious distinction. It would be well if such provision could be made for the children of the English peasant as is to be made for the peasant of Hindostan. The Bribery Bill, which the Commons, for reasons of their own, evidently dislike, has been revised by the Lords, and the paying voters' travelling expenses has been made illegal, but, en revanche, the Commons have limited the action of the bill to a single year. The Russian Securities' Bill, adopted by the Government, has been passed, despite Mr. Baring and Sir F. Kelly. We are informed also, by Mr. Sidney Herbert, that if Government can succeed in framing a Testamentary Jurisdiction Bill which shall please everybody, they will introduce it next session. Doctors' Commons is not reported to have trembled much at the news.

The Spanish drama has reached the end of the first act, which terminates with the repentance of the Queen, who weeps, and promises constitutionalism and virtue, and with a grand tableau of the triumphal entry of the Duke of Victory (Espartero) into Madrid. The end is to come.

There is little domestic news of interest, for the progress of cholera is too grave a matter to be treated among the table topics of the day. The wretched woman Brongh, who murdered her six children at Esber, has been tried and acquitted on the ground of insanity, a result for which all had been prepared who remembered the now unhappy creature's fortunate antecedents, and the impossibility that a woman once selected as nurse to the heir of England would be allowed to die on the scaffold.

BATOUM.—DRAWN BY T. H. WILSON.—(See Page 762).

Parliamentary.

MONDAY.—Lords.—Lords Brougham, Campbell, and the Lord Chancellor joined in deploring the untimely fate of the Bills of Exchange Bill, which, having prosperously made the passage through their Lordship's House, had been lost in the Commons on that dangerous point at this season, the second reading. The bill was an admirable bill. It was not at all, as had been alleged, a job, and it was sanguinely hoped that there was a better time coming for it next session.

Lord Stradbroke then hoped that an uniform system of weights and measures might be introduced, but received small encouragement from Lord Aberdeen, who thought that the subject required more mature consideration.

Lord Montagu, however, denied the difficulty of adjusting our weights and measures, and asked for a decimal coinage as well.

The Lord Chancellor then abandoned one more Law Reform Bill, and, on the motion of the Duke of Newcastle, the Bribery Bill was read a third time.

On the motion that it should pass, the Marquis of Clanricarde revived the objections to the clause which permits the payment of the travelling expenses of voters by the candidate. He moved an amendment on this clause, rendering it illegal to pay such expenses. To this Lord Redesdale objected, as well on the ground that their Lordships should not introduce such amendments in a bill deliberately adopted by the other House, as that the clause was necessary to prevent a preponderant influence accruing to the inhabitants of towns. The Duke of Newcastle took a middle course. He admitted the force of Lord Clanricarde's arguments, but doubted the effect of his amendment, and proposed that, instead of reversing the decision of the Commons, the clause should be altogether struck out. To this Lord Campbell and other Lords with some hesitation assented, and though Lord Clanricarde persisted in his amendment, it was defeated, the clause was struck out, and the bill passed.

Many other bills were forwarded a stage without discussion, and their Lordships then adjourned.

Commons.—The Consolidated Fund Bill, with the appropriation clause, passed through committee.

On the order for going into committee on the Encumbered Estates (West Indies) Bill.

Sir J. Pakington made a strong appeal to the Government on behalf of West India proprietors, with reference to the hurricane loans. He entreated the Government not to press for the full payment of the loans; the amount, he thought, should be reduced in the same ratio as the estates had diminished in value.

Mr. J. Wilson explained the general principles which the Government had laid down under the acts passed for the extension of payment of these loans, and which had been acted upon, he said, in the most liberal spirit. Out of 69 estates, it had been brought to a settlement satisfactorily by composition, sale, or settlement. When a bond fide holder of an estate, who was indebted under a loan, with a desire to come to a settlement, made a proposition to the Exchequer Loan Commissioners, it was met in the most liberal spirit.

Mr. Ellice contended that the whole question as to the circumstances under which the loans were advanced and the present condition of the West India proprietors should be referred to a committee to report on a liberal manner of dealing with it.

Sir G. Grey said the law had placed the responsibility of recovering these debts in the hands of the Exchequer Loan Commissioners, and all he, as the secretary of State for the Colonies, could do was to collect from the West Indies all the information he could obtain as to the condition of the colonies, and refer it to the Treasury and the Commissioners. The course pursued was to consider each individual case upon its own merits, and the fairest consideration was given to every proposal. While there was no desire to press with undue severity upon parties, the Government were bound to look to the just claims of the country.

After some observations from Mr. Hankey and Mr. V. Scully, the House went into committee on the bill, the clauses of which were agreed to.

The Legislative Council (Canada) Bill and the Customs Bill likewise passed through committee.

The Public Health Bill and the Mayo County Advances Bill were read a third time and passed.

The Customs' Tariff Acts Consolidation Bill was read a second time.

The Russian Government Securities Bill was read a third time.

Sir F. Kelly moved to omit the first (material) clause, and to substitute another, which included in the prohibition subscriptions to a loan, and changed the terms of the remainder of the clause, and inserting a proviso that the act should not extend to any subscription or purchase in any country by any commercial house trading and having a place of business in any foreign country, and wherein a British subject and an alien were partners or jointly interested.

The Solicitor-General opposed the motion.

Mr. Hume objected to the principle of the bill, and recommended that the bill should be dropped.

After a few remarks by Lord D. Stuart and Mr. Wilkinson,

Lord J. Russell defended the principle of the bill, and, for the reasons suggested by the Solicitor-General, did not think it advisable to adopt the amendment of Sir F. Kelly.

The amendment was then negatived.

Sir F. Kelly then moved a proviso, intended, he said, to prevent a great injustice to commercial men in this country without in the smallest degree injuring the Emperor of Russia.

This motion was also negatived, and, on the question that the bill do pass, the House divided, when the ayes were 51 and the noes 13.

The bill then passed, and the House adjourned.

TUESDAY.—Lords.—On the motion of Lord Redesdale, the standing orders of the House were amended, so as to provide that there shall be only one inquiry for both Houses in the question of compliance with such orders by the promoters of private bills, and Messrs. Smith and May were appointed their Lordships' examiners for this purpose.

The Commons' amendments to the Episcopal and Capitular Estates (1834) Bill were agreed to.

The Merchant Shipping Acts Repeal and the Duchy of Cornwall Office Bills were severally read the third time and passed.

The Public Revenue and Consolidated Fund Charges Bill was read the second time, and the standing orders being suspended, the bill was passed through all its remaining stages.

The Militia Bills were committed.

The Public Health Bill passed through all its stages, the standing orders being suspended for that purpose.

The Metropolitan Sewers Bill was also passed.

Other orders having been disposed of, their Lordships adjourned.

Commons.—Sir George Grey stated that the constitutional acts passed by the Legislative Councils of New South Wales, South Australia, and Victoria, would be printed for consideration during the recess.

Lord John Russell moved that the Lords' amendments to the Bribery Bill should be agreed to.

After discussion the House divided, when the numbers were—

For agreeing to the Lords' amendment . . . 78

For Lord Hotham's amendment . . . 21

Majority for agreement . . . 57

Lord Hotham then moved the adjournment of the House, and was defeated by 68 to 16; and other motions for adjournment being successively rejected, at length a compromise was arrived at, to the effect that, on condition of the operation of the bill being limited to one year, opposition was not to be persisted in.

Lord John Russell assenting, the Lords' amendment was agreed to.

On the order of the day for considering the Consolidated Fund (Appropriation) Bill.

The Common Law Procedure Bill and the Bankruptcy Bill were read a third time and passed.

The House went into committee on the East India Company's revenue accounts, and Sir Charles Wood, addressing an audience of twelve members, proposed a series of resolutions based on accounts, to which, in their printed form, he continually referred the committee for fuller information. The revenues and outgoings of the different districts of Bengal, Madras, Bombay, and the north-western provinces he stated in detail, and showed that in each case there was a surplus which on the whole Indian account amounted to £331,265, and this, as compared with other years, was, he showed, satisfactory. As regards the sources of revenue, he explained that there was no probability of an increase in the land tax, and that there would in all likelihood, be no diminution in the revenue from opium. In reference to salt, a commission for investigation into the existing system had been issued, and when the report arrived he should be happy to produce it. There was no reason to anticipate an increase in the Customs revenue, and on the whole, therefore, there was no prospect of a general increase of revenue from India; nor, he added, was there much hope of diminished expenditure. The feeling of the House last year was that the expenditure for public works and for judicial establishments should be increased rather than diminished, and the evidence that had been taken justified this view. Nor would any one desire a reduction in our expenditure for the purposes of irrigation. A very considerable reduction had, however, been made in the very important item of interest on the Indian debt, the great mass of the Indian Five per Cents, having been converted into Four per Cents, an operation immediately beneficial, and calculated to be still more so in its ultimate results. Under the circumstances, he could not recommend the running the risk of any remission of taxation. Lord Dalhousie's energy had been directed to internal improvements. He adverted to the opening of that gigantic work, the Ganges Canal, which he described as exceeding in importance any work of ancient or modern times. It served both for irrigation and navigation; the main trunk was 525 miles long, and the branches 373, making together nearly 900 miles, with a breadth varying from 140 to 80 and 20 feet, and a depth varying from 10 to 8 and 5 feet. It would irrigate 14 millions of acres, and 64 millions of people would reap benefit from it. It had last year been decided that, let circumstances be what they might, the construction of the Great Indian Railway must go on, and, once undertaken, the works had been pushed on without delay; a portion was in operation, and he hoped that much more would be speedily completed. An electric telegraph from Calcutta to Agra, and from Agra to Bombay, had been constructed. The commissioners had not yet been able to prepare a bill for dealing with the law courts, but he hoped they would be able to do so almost immediately. The regulations for the examination for admission to the service had been promulgated, and the first examination would take place in January next. As regarded Hulsebury, he regretted that he could not report that anything had been done. Finally, he came to the important consideration of what had been done towards promoting education, described its condition in the various presidencies, and bore a tribute to the successful working of the Indian colleges. Government proposed to do all that could be done for furtherance of education in India, namely, to grant aid, utterly irrespective of religious instruction, to all schools, missionary, Mahometan, and Hindoo, in which a sound secular education was given. It was proposed, also, to establish universities in the centres of the great presidencies, on the model of the London universities, and these would grant degrees, and below them would be established schools in which both English and the vernacular should be taught, and the whole of them were to be submitted to constant inspection, under an officer of the Government. There would also, probably, be professional branches in the colleges. At the close of the honourable baronet's speech the number of members present amounted to twenty.

Sir Erskine Perry expressed the utmost satisfaction with a large and generous support which, for the first time, was being extended to the cause of education in India.

Mr. Kinnaird thought that it would be very advantageous if the governor of each presidency had to present an annual written statement of its affairs.

After some other observations the resolutions were agreed to, the House resumed, and was shortly afterwards counted out.

WEDNESDAY.—Commons.—On the order for the third reading of the Consolidated Fund (Appropriation) Bill.

Mr. Hume called attention to the report of the last session on the slave-trade, and urged renewed application for the fulfilment of the treaties with Spain for a total suppression of the trade to Cuba, the only place, he said, where slaves were now carried. He acknowledged that everything had been done by Her Majesty's Government that could be done with the Government of Spain, but all efforts were defeated by the venality of the Cuban authorities, countenanced by members of the Royal Family of Spain, who were connected with the trade.

Lord J. Russell said it was unfortunately too true that the venality of official persons opposed obstacles, and it was notorious that Queen Christina derived a considerable profit from the traffic in slaves. A change had, however, taken place in the Government of Spain, and General Cucha had been appointed Governor-General of Cuba. There was every disposition to put down this trade on the part of her Majesty's Government, who would keep a watchful eye on the subject, and exert every effort to accomplish the great object of putting a stop to this abominable traffic.

Sir G. Peckell recommended the employment of a stronger naval force on the coast of Cuba, with screw steamers of small draught.

Sir H. Willoughby inquired whether, as the Chancellor of the Exchequer had intimated at the beginning of the session, the total expenditure for the year, which he (Sir Henry) assumed at £64,000,000 or £65,000,000, would be defrayed by taxes raised within the year; or, if that principle was abandoned, what amount of debt would be contracted? He complained that the Chancellor had been selling savings-bank stock, a proceeding which, he said, was not only injurious to the savings-banks and to the bona fide holders of stock, but involved a great constitutional principle.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer said, he had nothing to add to what he had already stated to the House on the subject of our finances, but, as far as he could judge at present, the expenditure would be provided for without any addition whatever to the national debt. In reply to a question by Mr. Wilkinson, he admitted that the sales and purchases of stock by the Commissioners had, in some instances, resulted in a loss of capital.

In answer to an inquiry by Mr. J. Phillips more,

Admiral Berkeley said, no certain intelligence had been received by the Admiralty respecting the Russian steamer Vladimir eluding the blockade at Sebastopol.

The bill was then read a third time, and, after a few observations by Sir H. Willoughby and Mr. Hume, passed.

The Encumbered Estates (West Indies) Bill, with the Legislative Council (Canada) Bill and the Customs Bill, was then read a third time and passed.

The report on the East India Company's revenue accounts was brought up and agreed to.

The Lords' amendments of several bills were considered and agreed to.

Mr. W. Lindsay moved an address praying Her Majesty to appoint a commission to inquire into the present state of the river Tyne.

After some observations by Mr. Ingham, Mr. Hume, and Mr. Wilson, the motion was agreed to.

The House adjourned at 5 minutes to 4 o'clock.

THE METROPOLIS.

PROROGATION OF PARLIAMENT.

(FROM A SUPPLEMENT TO THE "LONDON GAZETTE" OF TUESDAY NIGHT.)

Palace of Westminster, Lord Great Chamberlain's Office, August 8, 1854.

All peeresses, on announcing their intention of being present on the occasion of the prorogation of parliament, on Saturday, the 12th instant, will have places reserved for them in the House of Lords, if the announcement be made at this office before five o'clock on Friday, the 11th inst.

Peers' eldest sons will have tickets for the Peers' eldest sons' box forwarded to them, upon a written or personal application at the office.

No strangers can be admitted except by a ticket from the Lord Great Chamberlain.

The doors will be opened at 12 o'clock.

WILLOUGHBY DE ERESBY, G.C.

ADULTERATION OF BEER.—Witness, himself a London publican, states that most publicans have a system of doing something to their beer:—"It is not possible to make a living by selling beer at 3d. a-pol, for which the brewer gets 1s. a-gallon; but if a pail of 'liquor' be put into it there is that amount of profit." The beer is dashed; there is what he calls 5 per cent. of water put in the beer. As to spirits, the same witness states that paying 12s. a-gallon for gin he is obliged to mix water with it to sell it at 4d. a-quarter, which is but 10s. 8d. a-gallon; and that there is added, besides the water, sugar to sweeten it. Mr. Ridley, who has been long connected with the wine and spirit trade, and who has under his management certain offices for the analysis of alcoholic liquors, states that the standard price of all the large porter brewers—and as to which there are agreements among them is 33s. a-barrel, with five per cent. off—that is 31s. 6d. net. The barrel is 36 gallons; it is increased to 48 gallons by the addition of water and sugar, and then sold at 8d. per pot, which yields a profit of 15s. a-barrel, while in the genuine state the profit would be about 4s. The witness had sampled the beer of a house on the Surrey side of the water where they sell at 3d. a-pot, and draw 48 butts a-month, and found that, from their fraudulent process of reducing, they had a profit of 45 per cent. The witness further states that there are several recipes for the adulteration—such as, "to a barrel of porter 12 gallons of liquor, four pounds of roots, one pound of salt; and then there is sometimes, to bring a head up, a little vitriol, cocculus indicus, also a variety of things so very minute that, unless they are admitted by recipes in their hands, we cannot easily detect the small proportions."—Report of the Select Committee on Public-houses.

THE NEW ACT FOR THE ABATEMENT OF SMOKE.—On Tuesday the new act to abate the nuisance arising from the smoke of furnaces in the metropolis, and from steam-vessels above London Bridge, came into operation. There are eight clauses in the Act. Furnaces in the metropolis are to consume their own smoke, as also steam-vessels on the Thames above London Bridge. The penalty on a summary conviction is to be not more than £5 nor less than 40s. for the first offence, and £10 for the second. A penalty is not to attach where a furnace has been constructed or altered, and the person belonging to it "has carefully attended to the same, and consumed or burned as far as possible the smoke arising from such furnace." Constables may be empowered to enter and inspect furnaces and steam-vessels. There are admitted difficulties in carrying out the statute, and therefore the provision that no information is to be laid under it except by the authority of the Secretary of State, or the Commissioners of Police of the Metropolis or the City of London.

LOYD'S.—With regard to this proposition for closing Lloyd's every Saturday at two o'clock, in harmony with the general desire for an early termination of business on that day, it is satisfactory to state that the allegation to the effect that a great difference of opinion upon the subject exists among the underwriters is positively denied. The memorial to the committee for a meeting on the proposal was signed, it said, by nearly 200 of the leading members, while subsequently, on a show of hands, the motion in favour of early closing was carried by 64 to 4.

DOWNING-STREET AND THE LAWSON OBSERVATORY.—The withdrawal of the Government grant of £2,000, which had been calculated upon by the committee in Nottingham for the establishment of the above observatory, will, it is thought, render abortive all attempts to carry out the scheme. The money already subscribed, which is considerable, will, unless the subscriptions can be increased, be returned to the subscribers.

DEPARTURE OF METROPOLITAN POLICE TO THE SEAT OF WAR.—A number of police officers belonging to the metropolitan districts, specially appointed for active duty at the seat of war, took their departure on Monday evening last from London en route for Southampton, and then for Constantinople and Varna, or any other place where their services might be required. The corps consisted of about twenty of the finest men in the force, who, it is understood, volunteered to go upon foreign service. It is understood that another and far larger body of men are to follow those already sent off in the course of a few weeks. These policemen were provided with "Knight's English and Turkish Vocabulary."

RACKETS.

BELVIDERE TAVERN, PENTONVILLE.—A grand display will take place on Monday, August 14th, for the benefit of C. Bull, when Messrs. M. Pitman, G. Erwood, J. Caplin, E. Kenny, T. Morris, E. Greatwood, J. Sowden, C. Greatwood, and the London Amateur, with the principal professional players in London, together with many gentlemen Amateurs, will rally upon this occasion. The play will commence at three o'clock.

BELVIDERE TAVERN, PENTONVILLE.—On Monday the Belvidere grounds were crowded to witness some splendid play between the veteran Matthew Pitman, and his "old ally" M. T. Morris, against the London Amateur and another. The first match of 4 games out of 7 was for two magnificent silver cups. On coming to the scratch all parties were confident of success, and so great was the feeling in favour of the "old uns," that 6 to 4 went begging; 7 to 4 and 2 to 1 being asked, and in some instances obtained. The first game was decided in favour of the Amateurs by 11 to 7. The second was soon knocked off by the Amateurs scoring 11 to 2, and the layers of odds looking anything but "happy," and the odds up to 5 to 4 on the "pets." The third and fourth games fortune also awarded to the Amateurs, who won each by 11 to 7, amidst loud cheers.

A second match followed by the same players for two new hats, 4 games out of 7. Betting in favour of the winners of last match at starting, but after the first game got to evens, Pittman and Morris winning it by 11 to 5. The second game was also won by them at 11 to 6. The third game, the Amateurs not wishing to be combed as they had their opponents went in and got 11 to 3. The fourth game Mabby and partner got by 11 to 6. The fifth was won also by them at 11 to 4. The play of all parties was excellent throughout. Other matches followed by C. Bull and other professionals, and the Evening was spent in great harmony.

IRELAND.

RUSSIAN STEAMER OFF THE SHANNON.

DUBLIN, August 8.—A Limerick correspondent of Saunders's News Letter, writing last night, gives the following account of the appearance of a mysterious looking steam-ship off the west coast of Ireland. The particulars, he assures us, are authentic; whatever may be the circumstances, which has caused some local excitement, may hereafter be explained.

"Captain Gorman, master of the ship Jessie, which arrived in the river last evening from Quebec, reported to the Collector of Customs, at twelve (noon) this day, that, when about four miles off the mouth of the Shannon, he observed reconnoitring towards land, in very suspicious movement, a large steamer, about 170 feet long, with black funnel, as high as the mainmast of the ship. She did not hoist the English ensign when saluted, but bore off. The slow motion of the steamer, with heavy swells precluded Captain Gorman from ascertaining whether she was screw or paddle, but, from appearance, the steamer was either American or Russian."

In addition to the above, it is stated that Sweeney, the chief boatman at Kileredane Lighthouse (the farthest point on the Shannon), described the smoke of the steamer before the circumstance was reported to him by Captain Gorman.

P.S.—Since writing the foregoing, intelligence has been received through a young gentleman who arrived from Galway, to the effect that the same steamer was observed from thence also, lurking off land; and that the coast-guard revenue cutter and a small steamer were sent in chase of her.

DEPARTURE OF GRISI AND MARIO FROM LIVERPOOL.

LIVERPOOL, WEDNESDAY.

Madame Grisi and Signor Mario this morning left Liverpool in the Baltic, Captain Comstock, for New York. They are accompanied by Mr. Hackett, the American comedian, under whose direction they go out to commence an engagement in the United States on the 4th September. They sojourned at the Adelphi Hotel since their arrival, where, this morning, previous to their departure, they were presented, Grisi, with a splendid epergne, and Mario with a beautiful gold ring set with a very large bloodstone, both the gifts of an Indian lady, who witnessed the farewell appearance of these renowned vocalists at the Royal Italian Opera on Monday night. The presents came through Mr. Chappell, of Bond-street, and were addressed to the care of Mr. Radley, of the Adelphi Hotel.

ROYAL WELLINGTON THEATRE, BALTIC.—On the 28th ult., in the evening at seven o'clock, a private theatrical performance took place on board her Majesty's ship Duke of Wellington, being under the immediate patronage of the Commander-in-Chief. A large covering was stretched over the poop and quarter-deck of the flagship, and there were seats raised for the whole of the crew, the Admiral and his officers being on the poop. The seamen only performed, the pieces selected being Charles II., or the Merry Monarch, and the farce of Fortune's Frolic. The characters were exceedingly well sustained, and would have done credit to a minor provincial theatre; but the bronzed arms and neck of Lady Clara contrasted strangely with her elegant white dress and embroidered handkerchief. The attendance of a fine band playing overtures, and the usual supplies of nuts, oranges, and ginger beer, added much to the illusion of the scene. Sir Charles Napier and suite attended in person, and it concluded with great clat, much to the delight and enjoyment of the men.

THE TURKISH MUSEUM, HYDE-PARK CORNER.—The Russian occupation of the Principalities and the consequent state of hostilities, the gallant and surprising defence of Silistria, and the retreat of the aggressors even to the rear of Bucharest, render the Turks and everything Turkish the prevailing topics of the time, and the favourites of fashion. Thousands of our fellow-countrymen are now shoulder to shoulder with the Osmanlis ready to shed their last drop in the Sultan's righteous cause. For us "who live at home at ease," nothing remains but to pray for success to the allied forces, and to learn something more of the gallant nation whom they are at present assisting, against the pretensions of the unprincipled Czar. Books upon Turkey are now sought for with the greatest avidity. White's Constantinople and Miss Pardoe's City of the Sultan have certainly done much, very much, to diffuse a knowledge of Stamboul and its countless wonders; but there are two gentlemen at Hyde Park Corner who are daily doing still more. After private views to the press and a favoured few, they opened "The Turkish Museum" to the public on Thursday. This exhibition cannot but meet with immense and immediate success. It is not a mere wax-work display like Madame Tussaud's; it presents us with objects from which much may be learnt. Few who patronise "The Turkish Museum" will remain satisfied with a mere perusal of its catalogue, and a glance at the costumed figures set before them. They will be led to think about Turkey. In this museum we gaze upon the costumes of the Osmanlis, as they were worn down to 1826, the year of the destruction of the Janissaries, the year before Navarino; and these costumes are seen side by side with the dress of the present hour. Sultan Mahmoud and Sultan Abdul-Medjid are both before us. It has been our fortune to see both those Padishahs, and the likenesses are admirable, in the figure of Mahmoud the more especially. The costumes of the sons of Hajji Bektash are indeed no longer discoverable in the streets of Stamboul, but they can be seen at Hyde Park Corner. And we recommend all readers of "THE FIELD" to go and see them at once. It would be impossible to describe in detail, in our limited space, the sights that await the visitor to the Turkish Museum. Each compartment is lettered, and its contents numbered, so that, simply remembering that the letters run against the sun instead of with it, the catalogue is easily brought into play. We have a bath-house before us, with a tiler mending the roof; two bath-rooms, with figures the size of life undergoing the manipulations of the attendants; a barber's shop and garden, with two persons at tric-trac; an Armenian wedding, in which is seen Cazas Artine, who, in 1828, presented to Sultan Mahmoud the first steamer ever seen at Constantinople; groups of Janissaries come next, with their celebrated soup-kettles, which they regarded as Franks do their regimental colours, and ever reversed when they revolted as a well-known signal to Sultans; next we have Hajji Bektash himself, and outside two rooms stands Abdul-Medjid, while within is his daughter Fatima, a Turkish cradle, and habes in swaddling clothes; opposite, we have a slipper-shop; a baker nailed to a door-post for having false weights; a group of Bashi Bazouks, including the female Koordish chief, Fatima Khanoum; while in the centre we see a real grass-plot, and a veritable araba, containing a Turkish beauty, listening to her fortune being told by a gipsy. There are other groups, and, to crown the whole, Sultan Mahmoud is discovered in council with a good score of the highest dignitaries about him. We shall have more to say touching this highly interesting exhibition.

THE ELEPHANTS ABROAD.—It is from the Continent that we usually receive those wonders and monstrosities of talent, which draw the "gelt" from the pocket of "John Bull." It is our turn now. Cooke's performing Elephants are the prodigies which we have forwarded as specimens of our gigantic skill, and we are told that all Berlin, where those stupendous animals are now, is in perfect extacies at their miraculous feats.

THEATRE ROYAL, LIVERPOOL.—On Monday, Madame Celeste, Miss Keeley, Miss Woolgar, Mr. Webster, Mr. Paul Bedford, and Mr. Parselle, were most enthusiastically received at this house, where, during part of the time the Adelphi Theatre in London is undergoing redecoration, they will continue to perform in several of those sterling pieces which have been recently played by them with such immense success in the Metropolis, and which are already proving even more attractive in Liverpool.

Sporting Review for August.

This number contains several good and amusing articles. Those on turf matters by Craven and Druid are suggestive of reflection; and, though we cannot endorse some of the opinions contained therein, must attract the attention of the racing world. The embellishments—"Mice-meat," by Harry Hall, and "The Opening Day," by A. Cooper, R.A., are admirable. The winner of the Oaks comes upon us life-like from the pencil of H. H. We make an extract from Hawthorne's spirited article on the opening of the grouse season:—

"THE APPROACHING GROUSE SEASON IN SCOTLAND.

"D'ye like, brother sportsmen, the hills wild and free,
Where the crow o' the muircock gars a' ring with glee;
O'er the wild rocky glen, where the eagles abide?
Then on wi' the tartan, and off wi' me ride.

"D'ye like, brother sportsmen, the wild moor afar,
O'er the deep mountain's corry, or grey rocky scar;
O'er the sweet mossy glen, where the red deer abide?
Then on wi' the tartan, and off wi' me ride.

"D'ye like, brother sportsmen, the wild mountain and lake,
Or the wild roaring rapids, where salmon do take
The gandy fly-hook; where the grilse do abide?
Then on wi' the tartan, and off wi' me ride.

"Scotland," in the words of a popular writer on field sports, "surpasses every other country of Europe in the abundance and variety of its animal life. The country seems to have been made for the production of birds, beasts, and fishes; it has every imaginable requisite for the maintenance of a prodigious number of wild animals, and every single requisite in the highest possible perfection. It has seas that teem with fish, and salt-water lochs that seem to be so disposed as to bring the 'finny tribe,' to the very door of the human population. It has rivers of unsurpassed beauty, alternating with pool and stream, swarming with the silvery salmon and beautifully and brightly speckled trout. It has lochs where there are large trout, burns where there are small ones; it has sea rocks, where the round-headed and half intelligent-looking seal basks lazily in the sun, and rocky shores where the otter may be seen plunging in startled haste into the briny refuge; it has cliffs, where the birds of prey hold habitation, like castled robbers watching the passage of peaceful travellers."

"Yes! Scotland has mountain ranges where the red deer stalks along in his athletic pride, woods where the graceful and nimble-footed roe may be seen crossing the tender foliage. It has the mountain for the ptarmigan, the moor for the grouse, the fern brake for the blackcock, the dark pine wood for the capercaillie, the bog for the snipe, the coppice for the pheasant and woodcock, the fertile fields for the partridge, the hill for the hare and hole for the badger; it has land fowl and water fowl, from the eagle to the teal; it has cormorants and gulls, katie-wakes and divers, long-legged herons, short-legged puffers, gannets in thousands, ducks innumerable, the raven and the glede, the curlew and the sandpiper, the plover and the oyster-catcher, and a hundred others that decorate the wild scenery of Scotland. As a game country, Scotland has certainly no equal in Europe, nor, perhaps, taking all things into consideration, has she an equal in the world. India may have her tigers, her antelopes, her wild hogs, and her prodigious variety of the true game birds. Africa may have her lions, elephants, giraffes, spring-boes, water-boes, blue-boes, and her countless herds of the larger objects of the chase. America her deer, buffaloes, bears, wolves, prairie hens, wood grouse, and wild turkey, water fowl, and so forth; but in all these countries the chase, for the most part, is an arduous labour, requiring a special and perhaps distant expedition, and in general separating the sportsmen, at least for the time, from the amenities of civilised life. It is there not a recreation, but downright hard work, differing as much from the chase in Scotland, as whale fishing differs from the dextrous capture of the silver salmon with the slender rod and artificial fly. In other countries sport may be more exciting, attended with more perils and hazards, calling forth a greater amount of daring and presence of mind; but in all that relates to elegance, convenience, and what may be termed the fine arts of the chase, Scotland is pre-eminent; her game, like her scenery, is condensed into the smallest compass, as the eye that looks on her landscape can command mountain and plain, hill and valley, sea, river, heath, and burn, leafy woods and barren moors, and all visible at once; so that the different varieties of game, following the different varieties of ground, may be found within a very short distance of each other, and may be brought to bag by the sportsman in one single day's shooting.

NEW DESIGNS.

RAILWAY COAST DEFENCES.—We observe that Mr. Anderson, civil engineer, Edinburgh, who has recently turned his attention to the coast defences of this country, and to whose plans we referred on a previous occasion, has again brought his plans before the public, to show how the railways can be made subservient to our defence against foreign invasion. His contrivance, in this respect, is described as follows:—He has designed an ordnance railway carriage, resembling in construction a railway truck or tender, which shall be capable of being mounted with a heavy piece of cannon, to be worked by three men, and capable of rapid successive discharges. The artillerymen work under the protection of a large bomb-proof shield, from an aperture in which the gun is pointed. The carriage being at rest, the sides are turned downwards, and are fixed in the ground, giving a steadiness to the carriage, and forming a fender to protect the wheels; while the platform of the carriage can be moved completely round, on the principle of the turn-table, so that the gun may be directed to any point. Mr. Anderson proposes to make the carriage 21 feet long and 12 feet broad, and capable of carrying 30 tons; it will be mounted with a 32-pounder, but capable of carrying a 64-pounder—the largest piece of ordnance in the service; and this railway fort could carry 12 artillerymen, who, armed with Minié rifles, might do deadly execution among a landing enemy. The machinery for assisting the loading of the gun, and for turning the battery upon the enemy, is simple. Mr. Anderson estimates the additional mileage of railways required for his plan at about 100 miles; great proportions of the coast being too iron-bounded and precipitous to render a landing easy, or, indeed, possible. About 200 of these ordnance carriages would be sufficient, he thinks, for the protection of the whole British coast, and, of course, great numbers of them could be speedily concentrated upon any menaced point, and made to act with combined effect. The expense of carrying the plan into execution would be something less than £501,000. The Tay, for instance, is already supplied with railway lines on both sides, from which those locomotive batteries could defend the Firth; while the construction of a few miles would place the whole coast from Gronow to Berwick in as favourable a position.—Perth Courier.

It has been stated that the Cent-Gardes, at Paris, are to be armed with a weapon called the fusil-lance. The Emperor, who has made a serious study of what concerns artillery, and of arms of all kinds, demanded the construction of a carbine, which should be loaded at the breech by means of a cartridge carrying its own priming, and be provided with a sword forming a bayonet or a lance—the whole not to exceed the weight of a dragoon's carbine. In obedience to the orders of the Emperor, and with the aid of his counsels, Commandant Trouille de Beaulieu, of the artillery, has succeeded in constructing a weapon which presents incontestable advantages over those heretofore used. The new weapon is a little more than 4½ feet long, and at the extremity of it a flat sword, 3 feet long, can be fixed. The sword is straight, and hollowed out in the middle, so as whilst retaining its power of resistance at the sides, to weigh less than the ordinary lances. Detached from the carbine, it is easily handled, and is light and elegant in form. The fusil-lance completely only weighs a little more than 6½ lbs., which is nearly 2½ lbs. less than the rifle of the Chasseurs de Vincennes without the bayonet. The cartridge with which the carbine is loaded is suitable for the cavalry carbine, musketoon, and pistol of the same calibre. Carrying with it its own priming, it presents incontestable advantages in the manufacture and in promptitude of firing over those already in use. The rifle of the Chasseurs de Vincennes is of a calibre of nearly ¾ of an inch; that of the fusil-lance is only about one half that size. The charge of the rifle is a little more than English ounce; that of the new arm is little less than 1-8th of an ounce. The ball of the one weighs nearly 1½ ounces, and that of the other only a little more than ½ of an ounce. The interior of the barrel is grooved. The mechanism of the carbine is remarkably simple; it consists of only three pieces, and the main spring of the lock is on the outside, so that the state of the carbine can be ascertained without its being taken to pieces. By simply pressing the guard of the trigger the carbine is opened and armed, and the cartridge being placed, it can be immediately fired. The new carbine carries 1,312 yards—the same as the rifle of the Chasseurs de Vincennes. At that distance the ball flies with the same rapidity from both arms—that is, 109 yards a second. On, however, leaving the carbine it goes nearly 437½ yards a second, whilst that of the rifle goes only 306½ yards. To the distance of 600 yards the exactitude of the firing is superior to that of the rifle of the Chasseurs. By the simplicity of the movements, six shots a minute can be fired. The recoil is absolutely null, so that the soldier has his full liberty of action. So advantageous does the new arm appear, that the Emperor is causing a cavalry pistol to be constructed on the same model; it will carry nearly 875 yards—the distance of an 8-pounder.

PROVINCIAL.

ST. CROSS HOSPITAL.—On Friday one of the brethren of the above hospital, named Linott, committed suicide by hanging himself.

ISLE OF WIGHT.—Her Majesty, it is stated, intends erecting in one of the churches in the Isle of Wight, a monument to the Princess Elizabeth, daughter of King Charles I. This unhappy princess died at the age of 15, in captivity in Carisbrook Castle, in the above island, about a year and a half after her father was beheaded. She was a prisoner when her father suffered death, and had been so for nearly two years previous. She possessed a superior understanding.

SUICIDE OF DR. GRAHAMSLAY.—WORCESTER, Monday. The most profound sensations of surprise and regret pervaded the city this morning from intelligence received at an early hour that Dr. Gramsley, the medical (in fact, the) superintendent of the Worcester City and County Lunatic Asylum at Powich, had committed suicide by taking prussic acid. Dr. Gramsley was in Worcester on Saturday last, in his usual health and spirits, and up to the time of writing no cause is assigned for the melancholy deed. The doctor is a Scotchman by birth, and was appointed to the asylum at its completion about two or three years ago. He was greatly respected in this city. W. S. P. Hughes, Esq., appointed an inquest to be held on the body, on Tuesday, at which the verdict returned was HOME CIRCUIT—GUILDFORD, AUGUST 9.

KNOWN COURT.—Before Mr. JUSTICE ERLE.
THE ESHEN MURDERS.

Wednesday morning having been appointed for the trial of Mary Anne Brough for the murder of six of her children, the court was crowded the moment it was opened, and the greatest interest appeared to be created by the proceedings.

Soon after 9 o'clock the prisoner was placed at the bar. She was dressed in deep mourning. Her appearance is very unprepossessing. She was described in the calendar as being 43 years of age, and she was charged, upon six separate indictments, with the murder of Henry Brough, Harriet Brough, George Brough, the younger, William Brough, Caroline Brough, and Georgina Brough.

The husband of the prisoner was in court during the whole of the trial.

The prisoner pleaded "Not Guilty" to the whole of the indictments in a firm tone, and did not appear to be at all affected at the awful position in which she was placed.

Mr. Bodkin and Mr. Robinson conducted the prosecution; the prisoner was defended by Mr. Edwin James, Q.C., Mr. Hawkins, and Mr. Hale. The facts of the case have so recently appeared in "THE FIELD," that we deem it unnecessary to repeat them.

After evidence had been given, Mr. James addressed the jury for the defence to a speech of great eloquence and power. He proceeded to say that the present case was one of the most remarkable, perhaps, that had ever been recorded in our criminal annals. A woman proved to have been, up to the very moment of the occurrence taking place, a kind and devoted mother, stood at the bar before them upon a charge of murdering six of her children, to whom she was devotedly attached—a woman, who in a moment, by some unaccountable impulse, from being a kind mother, became a fiend, and in an instant destroyed the children to whom but a few short minutes before she had been attending with kindness and affection and the devotion of a mother. In one single instant her children were corpses around her, and she herself, self-murdered, lying on her bed by the side of two of them. Was it not clear that some mysterious agency, which none of them could divine, must have been at work, to occasion this dreadful tragedy, and was it possible for them to believe that the prisoner was mistress of her actions at the time she committed such a dreadful deed? The Almighty, for some wise purpose which it was impossible for them to unravel, did sometimes take away from man his reason, and reduce him to the condition of an irresponsible being, and the defence he had set up for the unhappy prisoner was, that she was in that state at the time she committed the act with which she was now charged. The jury understood that he did not mean to say that the prisoner was under any delusions, or that at the present time she was not, in all probability, perfectly sane; but he hoped to satisfy them that the dreadful deed was committed by her while she was under the influence of a temporary frenzy and of an impulse which it was impossible for her to control. He said he need hardly remind them of the delicate structure of the brain, and the facility with which it was thrown off its balance, and there were many cases where crimes had been committed under similar circumstances, and where persons had committed the most dreadful deeds upon some sudden frenzy, and had been acquitted on the ground of insanity. The learned counsel then referred to the well-known treatise of Dr. Taylor upon the subject of medical jurisprudence in which the cases of Stannynough, who murdered his three children to whom he had previously shown the greatest affection, who was acquitted on the ground of insanity, and who afterwards destroyed himself; and that of the girl Greensmith, who cut the throat of her mistress's child, to whom she was fondly attached previously, in support of his argument. He urged that all the circumstances of the case showed that the act was committed under the influence of some sudden frenzy, and he said that, being relieved by the quantity of blood that escaped from the wound she had inflicted on herself, the "dark cloud," as she expressed it, passed away, and she then for the first time became aware of what she had done. Her conduct afterwards tended to confirm this view of the case. She made no attempt to escape, but, on the contrary, her first thought was to endeavour to obtain assistance, and immediately made a statement, which no one could doubt was the exact truth, of what had taken place. The only way in which the conduct of the prisoner could be accounted for was by the supposition that her mind had been suddenly broken down, and that she was not conscious of the act she was committing.

Mr. Izol was then called as a witness for the prisoner. He said that he practised as a surgeon at Esher, and he had attended professionally upon the prisoner for several years. In 1852 she suffered from severe bleeding at the nose, and she also complained of great pain in her head, and he found it necessary to administer powerful medicines, and also to blister her. In September, 1852, she was delivered of a child, and eight days afterwards she was attacked by paralysis and completely lost the use of her left side; she also lost her speech, and her face was distorted. She gradually recovered, but never entirely regained her powers, and he observed symptoms of a disordered brain. In consequence of this, he said, he constantly advised her to avoid excitement of every description, and he felt satisfied that any sudden excitement would be dangerous to her. The witness said that he saw the prisoner on Wednesday before the fatal occurrence, and from her appearance he was induced then to caution her strongly not to excite herself.

Dr. Forbes Winslow was the next witness.—He said, I have for 15 or 16 years directed my attention principally to diseases of the brain. I have carefully attended to the evidence in this case, and yesterday, also, had a long interview with the prisoner. I have heard the evidence of Mr. Izol, and it is my opinion that the attack of paralysis suffered by the prisoner was the result of a diseased brain. Paralysis may exist in some cases without actual insanity, but it is always symptomatic of a disease in the brain. Bleeding at the nose is a symptom of congested brain, and I am of opinion that even now the prisoner is suffering from a disease of the brain.

After further evidence, and Mr. Bodkin's reply, Mr. Justice

Erle proceeded to sum up the whole case with his usual care and impartiality. In the course of his observations he said he concurred in the statement of the case laid down by the learned counsel for the prosecution, and as it appeared to be admitted that it was by the hand of the prisoner that the whole of these unfortunate children met their deaths, the only question that remained for consideration was, whether at the time the deed was committed, the prisoner was in such a state of mind as rendered her responsible for her acts. He felt called upon to say that he quite agreed with the observations of a learned judge who had preceded him in an inquiry of this description, and which had been quoted by the learned counsel in his reply, that a defence of this character ought to be looked at with great caution and jealousy, and that the jury ought not, where an enormous crime had clearly been committed, to acquit a prisoner upon the ground of insanity, unless there were circumstances surrounding it totally irrespective of the enormity of the crime itself, which left no reasonable doubt that at the time of its commission the party accused was not in a condition of mind to distinguish between right and wrong, or to be aware that he was committing a crime. The learned judge then called the attention of the jury to the evidence for the prisoner, and said that it appeared to be founded upon the supposition that the crime had been committed under the influence of some uncontrollable impulse, and he said he would only observe that this was a most dangerous doctrine, for undoubtedly every crime was committed under some impulse, and the object of the law was to control impulses of that description, and thus prevent crime. His lordship went on to say, that it was impossible to dispute the condition of the human mind with certainty, and the jury, in considering a case of this description, were entitled to look at all the circumstances that surrounded it, with a view to forming their conclusion, and if they thought that, in the present instance, there were grounds for supposing that at the time the prisoner committed the act she was not in a sane state, they would be justified in acquitting her upon that ground. If, on the other hand, they should be of opinion that owing to the unfortunate relation in which she stood with her husband at the time, she was induced to meditate the commission of some act of violence either towards herself or others, and that this created an excited condition, which, operating upon her brain in its diseased condition, drove her to a state of temporary insanity, during which she committed the act with which she was charged, he was bound to tell them that this would not excuse her from the consequences, and it would be their duty to find her guilty of the crime of wilful murder. The jury retired at five o'clock, and at seven they returned into court and gave a verdict of Not Guilty on the ground of insanity. The prisoner, who did not betray the least emotion at any period of the proceedings, was ordered to be detained in safe custody during her Majesty's pleasure.

Police Intelligence.

CLERKENWELL.

ATTEMPT TO MURDER.—William Johnson, a well-known thief, was on final examination charged with having attempted to murder William Baker, police constable No. 81, G. On Monday morning week, at about 2 o'clock, the prosecutor was on duty in Amwell-street, Clerkenwell, when he saw the prisoner with something concealed under his coat. He stopped him, on which he attacked him with a chisel, and inflicted a wound on his eye and several others on his person. He fled profusely, and was taken away for medical aid. The prisoner was lodged in the station-house. He was fully committed for trial.

LAMBETH.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE, THROUGH JEALOUSY.—Sarah Seymour, an exceedingly good-looking young woman, was charged with attempting self-murder, by jumping from on board one of the river steamers into the Thames. William Tisdale, a Thames police constable, No. 8, deposed that on Monday evening, near Westminster-bridge, having heard an alarm that a young woman had just jumped off the Forget-me-not steamer, then starting from the pier on the Surrey side of the Westminster for London-bridge, he pulled to the spot, and ultimately succeeded in picking the prisoner up. He conveyed her in a state of insensibility to the Mitre Tavern, where a medical man was in prompt attendance, and where, after much difficulty, she was restored to consciousness, and ultimately removed to Lambeth workhouse for the night. Mr. Norton.—Did she give any reason for the rash act? Witness.—Yes, Sir; she said that a young man had courted her for some time and promised her marriage, and while on board she saw him come down the steps leading to the pier in company with a young woman, and in her rage and jealousy she, on seeing him, instantly jumped overboard. Mr. Norton.—Prisoner, is this statement of the officer correct? Prisoner (after some hesitation).—Yes, Sir, quite true. Mr. Norton.—When did you see this young man last? Prisoner.—On Friday, Sir. Mr. Norton.—Did any unpleasantness pass between you on that occasion? Prisoner.—No, Sir, not any; we met and parted good friends. Mr. Norton.—Then you acted with great rashness, for from all you know he might have met with the young woman on the pier by perfect accident. Prisoner.—I thought not, Sir; but I am very sorry for what I have done. Ransom, mate of the Forget-me-not, said he was at the wheel, and had just started from the Westminster-bridge pier for the city, when the prisoner, who stood close to the wheel, jumped overboard. He threw her a lifebuoy, but she refused or evaded taking hold of it, and, the tide being half flood, she had a narrow escape from drowning. Mr. Sawyer, the superintendant of the river steamers, said he was near the spot at the time of the occurrence, and went to the Mitre Tavern, where he observed the most humane and kind attention paid to the prisoner by Mr. Wool, the landlord, and his family, as well as by the Thames police constable and the surgeon. The prisoner, who is a servant and has filled several respectable situations, expressed the deepest contrition for the act, and was given up to her friends, after a serious admonition from the magistrate.

WESTMINSTER COUNTY COURT.

NATHAN B. CALDWELL—THE FRENCH AMBASSADOR'S BALL.—This was an action brought by the plaintiff, esquire, of Castle-street, Leicester-square, against the defendant, the Honorable Augustus Calthorpe, son of Lord Calthorpe, to recover the sum of £13 18s. Mr. De la Mare, solicitor, attended on behalf of the plaintiff. The defendant not appearing, and the summons served at his residence being returned, inscribed—in Turkey. Mr. De la Mare having stated that he was in a position to prove that such could not be the fact, was allowed to proceed with the case in the honourable defendant's absence. It appeared from the evidence of the plaintiff and his witnesses that, prior to the ball costume being given by his Excellency the French Ambassador, at Albert-gate, Hyde-park, defendant called upon plaintiff and as one of the intended visitors to that fête, requested to be furnished with a dress, the costume of Oliver Cromwell, for the hire of which for that night only he should give £13, and should not return it within three days should he happy to pay any further demand. It was not returned till some time afterwards, when plaintiff, seeing that it had been nearly "used up," made the claim for which, being refused, the present proceedings were instituted. In answer to Mr. De la Mare, plaintiff said he kept the best London-made Oliver Cromwells, and amongst the aristocracy they were always sought and well paid for. (Laughter.) He himself was a conservative—(increased laughter.) A servant ready to oblige that party or liberals. (Laughter.) A servant in plaintiff's said that, in contradiction of the defendant being in "Turkey," he met him near Pall-mall last Thursday week, before which he must have for some days been in the receipt of a request for his attending that court, which invitation he had not deigned to notice. His Honour gave judgment for plaintiff, with all costs.

FRANCE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, THURSDAY, AUGUST 10.

We are all on the qui vive for news from Sebastopol, whence the first great news is expected—not that any soul looks for any serious impression to be made on those gigantic fortifications, under the most favourable circumstances, in less than two months, but that the great blow is to be struck there is certain. As for the Baltic, Aland, it is understood, is to serve for the present only as a pied-a-terre for the forces hereafter to be sent to that quarter. As for the fleets attacking Cronstadt, upon which some of your London journals are so obliging as to insert so many strange letters—to say the least—it is simply impracticable. But should the war last another year, a high military authority has asserted that the capture of St. Petersburg by the combined army was not beyond the circle of impossibility.

The signal reproof of the Emperor, in a note to the Minister of War this week, to the generals and commanding officers of regiments, for fatiguing their soldiers by long marches in the full heat of the sun, has, it is understood, had the best possible effect, that is, among the privates and subalterns; the superior officers are not, of course, so well satisfied. But this little lecture has long been wanted, and was most excellently timed. His Majesty has also put an end to several other species of martinetism—among them some fantastic regulations introduced some time ago, by which all the military, old and young, were obliged to go through a series of gymnastic exercises, some of them far more suitable for a display at the circus than useful to a soldier, and quite beyond the reach of any human being who had not been trained to it at a very early age. His Majesty expunged all the useless mountebankism of the thing, keeping only what was useful, but directing that only young soldiers should enter on this course of exercises.

The Emperor and his charming consort are winning golden opinions down at Biarritz, where their courteous affability, without detracting one iota from the respect belonging to their exalted station, has given them a real popularity among all ranks, and has, it is said, even shaken the allegiance, not only of certain well-known legitimists, but of that party supposed to be formed of "sterner stuff"—republicans. The personages alluded to, however, are men of family and fortune, and must not be at all confounded with the trading politicians, of whom we have seen so many since 1848, and who are still at their work in various parts of the Continent—witness Madrid and Parma, and probably in France; but the Government here are too prudent to allow anything to be known of their discoveries of these gentlemen's proceedings.

Our weather has settled down into something which the climate of Naples might envy; clear, bright, sunny, and yet tempered by delicious breezes, that breathe the freshness of spring. All doubts respecting the harvest are now at an end; it will be one of the most abundant that has been known for years, and though it is impossible to think without a sigh of the vintage, which was hopelessly destroyed by the untimely frosts and inclemency of June, we are delighted to come off so well. In the meantime, the fine weather is now carrying the last lingerers in Paris far away from town. It is true the fêtes, announced for next week, will bring up a few thousands from the provinces to replace them, but as yet, at least, the number is small, and of strangers the English form the great majority. So far, however, the new comers do not appear to be exactly of the race which, when the world was less wise, made the fortunes of hotel-keepers by their profuse extravagance.

The papers announce the death of the Marquis de St. Hilaire, mother of the marquis of that title, who had attained her hundredth year on the day of her decease. She was the niece of M. de la Chalotais, and was one of the ornaments of the most brilliant circles in Paris at the moment when the revolutionary tempest burst forth and scattered the most brilliant and accomplished aristocracy in Europe over the world in beggary and exile. The deceased lady was, in her youth, as remarkable for her beauty as for her conversational powers. Her son, the present marquis, was a distinguished member of the Chamber of Peers under Louis Philippe.

Some discontent is experienced here, principally among the lower classes, at the determination of the Emperor not to return to Paris for the fete of the 15th, but to honour Bayonne, close to Biarritz, with his presence on the occasion. The municipality of the capital are especially indignant at this slight, and had his majesty's determination been known a little earlier, there is no doubt but what the preparations for the fete would have been on a more economical scale. As it is, with the exception of the "Siege of Silistria," which is to form the subject of "a grand military spectacle," the programme is in every point that of the fete of last year which cost 600,000 francs. This seems a sad waste of money, to say nothing of the cutting up and spoiling the pleasantest promenade of Paris—the Champs Elysees.

The receipts of the Paris theatres and other places of amusement during the past month amount to 53,400 francs (£21,738) being a decrease on the previous month of 388,568 francs.

Here is a tit-bit for your agricultural readers. The fact is related in a letter which was read a day or two ago before the Academie des Sciences. Some grains of wheat which had been taken from an Egyptian sarcophagus, were sown by a member of the Agricultural Society of Compiegne. The stems which have risen from this seed are as large as a reed, the leaves are more than an inch in breadth, and the ears have each a hundred grains of very large size, "so that," adds the correspondent of the Academie, "the seeds have multiplied 2,000 fold." The worthy farmer's historical science is not on a par with his agricultural acquirements, for he gravely terminates his letter by saying that the "seed dates from Sesostris or Cleopatra," who, as you are aware, are set down as having lived somewhere about two thousand years apart.

The Caen races, the most important of the provincial meetings, took place last week, near the ancient capital of Lower Normandy. M. Aumont's stud and training ground are in the vicinity of the town, and that gentleman carried off most of the prizes. The business was unusually dull. The chief feature in the affair was a horse named Masque de Fer, having come into violent collision with Viscount Talon's Gienlyon, the jockey of the latter fell heavily in the ground and sustained severe injuries. The Abbeville races have also just taken place, and though the business was decidedly interesting, the attendance was of the thinnest. A hurdle race of 500 francs, was carried off by Viscount Talon's Pantaloon. A Prix des baras of 2,000 francs was adjudged to Prince de Beauvan, Baroness M. Benson's "Cbulu" won a handicap of 1,800 francs in gallant style, and a steeple chase of 2,300 francs—distance upwards of three miles with 25 fences, was won by M. Delanane's Bedford—an English horse, mounted by Plummer, an English Jockey.

THE LINCOLN MEETING.

MR. EDITOR.—I believe I was one of the last that left the city of Lincoln after its late display. As far as Lincoln is concerned, there is not a shade of complaint; everything was done on the part of the authorities to give celui to the gathering. It is, however, yet to be proved, whether the Great Meeting of 1854 has not left something to be remembered as the greatest of the kind. You are too well acquainted with the indices of the agricultural thermometer to render it necessary for me to go into minutiae. It would be trenching on the province of one of the best "chroniclers of the time" in rural affairs, and therefore, sir, you will not quarrel with my ultimatum. Yes, the little bird was wide awake, sayings and doing were rife, and fell rather thickly on my privileged ear and anxious eye. Shall I say at once that the Meeting of the Royal Society of England this year is the culminating point of its glory; great things it might have achieved—but great achievements require the invocation of great minds; and agriculture has witnessed the enrolment of great names, the patronage of the highest in the land, the accumulation of thousands and thousands of pounds, the untiring exertions of the most worthy amongst the yeomanry of England, have resulted in what? A recapitulation on a small scale of all the sins of past years—an aggregate of the dangerous system of prize dealing, that exhibited itself in Lincoln and impending bankruptcy at Lewes. No one who witnessed the cabal the other day can predict anything but mischief to the Society; "a clear stage and no favour" is frequently insisted on; here was anything but "that," and that wanting indeed. My quarrel, I will say at once, is with the present prize-system. It is both illusive and unjust. You will find that none of the journals unconnected with agriculture as a science—those papers which send forth their miles of absurd expressions in right of their calling—consider the recent meeting a success. Perhaps some authority will be attached to what is styled the "leading" newspaper, and justly too; for I am quite sure their correspondent knew what he was writing about. It is stated that a great deal of rubbish has been cleared away, but that little or no novelty of invention was apparent in the implement-yard. How should it be otherwise, when we see the triumph of twenty years standing tricked out in all the finery of to-day's finish? Where we witness, perhaps, a score of machines for one specific purpose, all literally thrown aside to make way for the old stage, which apparently has purchased the reversion of the "best" prize for the next twenty years! Now, sir, it is quite true that an exhibitor was permitted to place a machine for trial, got up at an expense that would purchase half-a-dozen of the machines which is sold to farmers as the "prize" machine. The "commercial" machine is very like the ordinary chaffing-dish mounted on "coffee-pot" legs, and containing a barrel carrying with it a series of pigeon-holes, in-and-out, like a Berlin-wool pattern, which receive the root somewhat after the manner of sausage-stuffing, and dropping it in bits at the bottom. All very simple, it may be allowed, and coming within the means of the poorer farmer. So it was pretended. It was patented many years ago; it made a large fortune; and the patent ran out. But here it is still; and the winner of the "best" prize in 1854! Lack of invention indeed! Yes, there is the model fly-wheel, polished, bossed, and reeded—bright barrel, nuts and screws turned off to gauge, nice hopper, nice quill, nice everything—I say nothing of the nice price, say £15 or £20! Now heros the last, but not the least, merit, in giving simplicity and efficiency; 2ndly, the lowest price at which a machine can be placed before the purchasing public. The honest exhibitor binds himself to these conditions, and can only furnish good workmanship and material for the stated price. Ingenuity and invention go for nothing, it seems; and the gay and meretricious impostor dazzles the eye and perverts the judgment, taking exactly the position of a swoll-mobman in society, and lulling suspicion by an excessive appearance of superiority externals. How can such a handsome-looking fellow be a rascal? The Jew's razors were made to hand—yes, but they were made to deceive: the "best" machine was made to deceive—but not to sell! "Here's a beautiful thingamajig!" shouted John, "why, you can see your face in it." "The yea," rejoined Will, "but I didn't come to buy a looking-glass!" The trial dodge was worthy of Dulcamara: a few more such will speak to the Royal Society of England in sounds not to be misunderstood. There was a protest—vous verrons. Wrong never can be right; but the hubbub subsided—formerly the drum was beaten to drown the cries of the wounded. I have done: the prize-pelter contented—at least for all the purposes of being there. Of course, the famous prize-engineer hot from the shop of a tinkering engineer in the New Cut, is an honorable exception. Every man capable of judging between what such a meeting should be and what it was, must pronounce the one at Lincoln a melancholy failure. I will conclude by calling your attention to some remarks from a practised pen, and well worth consideration. "At present the council, by its management, exposes itself to the imputation of being a mere staking-horse for the implement-makers, on the one hand, and the breeders on the other. Such a suspicion we believe to be unfounded, but anything calculated to countenance it should be resolutely swept away. It must be borne in mind that the system of prizes, as at present administered, operates very unfairly, unduly exalting the value of one man's property and deprecating that of another, when experienced judges, assisted by dynamometers and other appliances, may have taken hours to determine the true shades of difference between them." As the Spaniards said the other day, "We will have the Queen—but not the camarillo." I am for the Royal Agricultural Society of England—but will not have the addenda!

SNATCHING BARBEL AT LEA-BRIDGE.

SIR.—Permit me, through the medium of your paper, to expose an abuse which, if not at once stopped, will be most likely to spoil barbel-fishing at Mr. Beresford's (Home and Groom) Water for some time. To facilitate some alterations of the waterworks, they have drawn off most of the water between the two Tumbling Bays, leaving all dry excepting one hole about thirty feet in circumference near the mill tail, where the barbel in countless numbers have taken refuge. A certain gentleman was at that hole on Saturday using three triangle hooks, snatching the barbel; he took a great many very fine fish certainly, but, in my opinion, in a very foul manner, and I think if such ways are allowed the worthy proprietor might as well tolerate netting.

Young Mr. Beresford, who professes to be a thorough sportsman, and who, one would suppose, would be an advocate of fair fishing, was with him, and was actually assisting in his foul play. Sorry to have taken up so much of your valuable space, I am, dear Sir, yours respectfully, Irlington.

A LOVER OF FAIR ANGLING.

P.S. The water is all right again, and I feel confident any fair angler will meet with good sport.

ARCHERY.

SIR.—I send you the score and bills, and list of prizes at this ancient meeting. The weather was beautiful, and the place of shooting most picturesque, near to Easby Abbey, on the banks of the River Swale, and within view of the splendid old Castle Keep of Richmond. The attendance of company, though not large, embraced a number of ladies, who seemed to take great interest in the sport—a band of music was in attendance the whole of the day; the day was considered a very successful and pleasant meeting, after which the archers and their friends dined together at the King's Head, when the prizes were awarded to the successful competitors.—Yours truly, JAMES FOX, Hon. Secretary, Leeds Archers.

WANTON MISCHIEF.

SIR.—The following is a case of wanton mischief, perpetrated on the property of B. Looker, Esq., of Kingston—

Police Court, Saturday.—Henry B. Maylar, of Camberwell, and Willam Reading, of Walworth, were charged with wilfully damaging a favourite honeysuckle-tree, the property of B. Looker, Esq., of Kingston Hill. Edward Cox, foreman to Mr. Looker, deposed that on the 17th of July he saw the two prisoners, with several others, jumping up the garden wall, and tearing down the tree in question. He immediately gave information, and sent a mounted constable in pursuit of a pleasure van on the road to London, returning from Hampton Court after a day's pleasure. The van was stopped at the Robin Hood Tavern, Kingston Vale, until the above witness came up, and identified the prisoners as two who were actually engaged in destroying the property, and he gave them in charge. They were accordingly brought back to Kingston until Saturday, when the magistrates found both prisoners guilty, and they were fined £5, with 10s. damages and 8s. costs. The money being paid, the prisoners were set at liberty with a reprimand.

We hear that this tree had been the admiration of thousands for its splendid appearance, being so beautifully covered with bloom; in fact, there was not such a tree within many miles of Kingston. Not long ago a pal-horse coach ran from London to Hampton Court, and used to pull up in front of the house for the purpose of allowing the passengers to view the tree, and the coachman has declared that that tree has been the means of half his custom, it being so much talked of in town and country. But now it is totally destroyed as to appearance.

THE SPUR AND THE WHIP.

SIR.—In my last letter, many weeks ago, I told you that, with your kind permission, I intended to say a few words to your lady-readers upon the use of the whip in riding. Since then I have been very busy that I really have had no time to put pen to paper. I have gained much painful experience in the last six or eight weeks. I have been ridden from morning to night by all sorts of riders. I have been ridden by ladies who ride well, and by ladies who do not ride well. I have been ridden by some who ride with the spur and use it, by some who ride with it but use it little, and by many who do not ride with it at all. I have been ridden by ladies who have whipped me in good earnest, by many who have teased me with their whip, by few who have used it only when necessary. I say that I have had much experience connected with the whip and spur, for regularly in the evening, after carrying ladies almost incessantly throughout the hot day, the lady who rode me last used her whip or spur, or both, without much mercy, to urge my weary limbs to minister to her enjoyment. And, sir, I have learnt from my experience two facts in confirmation of what I last sent you, which are these—firstly, that I have carried those ladies, when I was completely tired, just as well who rode me only with the whip as those who rode me with the spur. And, secondly, that those ladies who used the spur upon me, almost invariably used the whip as much, if not more, than those who did not.

And now, sir, for a few words as possible about the whip. And firstly, what should ladies not use the whip? They should never use it unless it is absolutely necessary—that is, unless their pleasure is to be increased by the pain and annoyance which it inflicts upon the horse. Nothing is more tiresome to the horse than to be continually teased by the whip of his fair rider. It is very likely to render a high-spirited horse unmanageable, and it destroys very much the efficacy of the whip when really needed. If a lady always touches her horse with the whip she will have to whip him, when otherwise a touch would be sufficient. I have no time to dwell more on this, but I do entreat all fair equestrians to remember that the use of the whip is to inflict pain if necessary for the lady's pleasure, and not continually to be annoying the horse when it can in no wise increase the rider's enjoyment. Again, many gentlemen, and almost all ladies, have a custom of whipping the animal that is carrying them for an accidental stumble. This is both foolish and cruel: it is foolish, because the pain of the whipping before the horse has recovered himself frightens him still more, and renders another and a more fatal stumble more than probable; it is also very likely to cause a horse to run away, for any one may see a horse who has been accustomed to be flogged for a trip, give a dart the moment he has stumbled to escape the expected whipping, and many ladies are not on the look-out for this consequence of their use of the whip, and allow the bridle to be carried through their hands.

But, sir, it certainly is cruel for a lady thus to flog her horse for stumbling. No horse would stumble if he could help it, any more than a child or the lady he is carrying would. And it certainly is cruel to punish him for an accident which may befall him in the same manner as human beings. Besides, sir, in 9 cases out of 10 the cause of the stumble is the lady's bad riding, and no lady should use her unlimited power over the horse to punish him for her stupidity. Once more: it is customary for whip horses for shying. It is only the other day that a young lady was riding me past some very terrible looking things, at which, as I had never seen the like before, I was very naturally frightened. Now had my fair rider patted me and spoken kindly to me, I should certainly have been quieted and induced to pass the object of my terror. But instead of this, she began immediately to exercise her powers over me, and to punish me for being frightened; she used both whip and spur, with intense fury; pulling at my mouth and whipping and spurring my sides till my alarm grew a hundred fold. Of course I connected the intense pain I was undergoing with the objects of my fear, and I believe no force under the sun could have induced me to pass along the road my rider wished to go. The result of our conflict was that I got thoroughly tortured with the lady's use of her whip and spur, and that, bruised and bleeding I carried her the way I wished. Now, what did my fair rider gain by her terrible use of the instruments of torture with which she was provided? Her treatment of me was positive cruelty. I wondered if whenever she was frightened—for ladies can be frightened as well as horses—she could approve of being flogged around her legs and shoulders with a heavy whip, and being goaded in her side with a deep-rolled spur. Yet where would be the difference? My conduct proceeded from no obstinacy; I was frightened, as she might have been, and for that she whipped and spurred me. But besides the cruelty, her treatment was useless and worse than useless—useless, because it did not produce the desired result; worse than useless, because it made me more frightened and more resolute. I have already said what would have been the proper course for my rider to have pursued, and I do entreat all ladies who happen to be riding a horse who shies at something, to remember that he is frightened—just the same feeling I have no doubt that ladies feel themselves—and that kindness, and not punishment, is the proper cure for fright in quadrupeds as in bipeds. Indeed, sir, I would impress upon all fair equestrians that they should use the whip as little as possible. A horse has feelings as much as a woman, and the whip hurts a horse as much as it would hurt a lady—a horse, too, values highly kind words and kind pats of the rider's hand, and these often which "Annie" may choose to inflict upon the miserable animals who are subject to them. I wish ladies—those who have a lady's humanity as well as a lady's name—would try kind treatment more generally with their horses, and look upon the infliction of pain as a thing to be used only in the last extremity. Sometimes they must inflict pain if they would enjoy their ride, but I must defer entering upon this at least for another week, as my remarks have already been far too many.

I remain, sir, your very obedient servant,

A BRIGHTON LADY'S RIDING HORSE.

BREAKING HORSES.

SIR.—Seeing an article in "THE FIELD" of the 22nd of July, on breaking horses by Isabelle, in which I have taken a great interest, as I am fond of the practice myself, and it seems to be so good a plan, I am anxious to know some more of the particulars. The first portion of the training is to make the horse carry his head high and perpendicularly. How is that to be done? Your article says, she begins by making the horse carry his head high and perpendicularly, whereby she prevents the weakness caused by the constant bending of the neck, and allows full action to be exercised over the mouth.—Yours,

A SUBSCRIBER.

DARING OF THE SPARROWHAWK.

SIR.—A short time since, I happened to be at the Cottlesmore Kennel, where a canary was hanging in a cage at the groom's door. A sparrowhawk attacked the bird in the cage, while Mrs. Quicktail was talking to the bird. Being driven off, he immediately returned, and again commenced a furious attack whilst the cage and bird were in the hands of Mrs. Q. The canary was nearly stripped of his feathers, and so persevering was the sparrowhawk, that Mrs. Q. had no difficulty in taking him prisoner. He was killed, and has since been preserved for Captain Burrows.

Yours, &c.,

NELLASALS.

NEEDLE RIFLE.

SIR.—Will any of your readers kindly mention the faulty points of the "needle-rifle"? Every gun-maker has his own ideas more or less biased by pecuniary interests, and I am, therefore, driven to seek an unprejudiced opinion. Do you think it would be apt to get out of order by the heat of frequent firing rapidly, swelling the metal of the breech-screw, and thus preventing proper fitting?

Could the Mimi-ball be applied to it, and could an amateur make the cartridges?

For a revolver rifle of 100 to the pound for rook and rabbit shooting, could the Mimi-ball be used with safety and precision? Would there be a chance of the expanding card of the ball, "leading" the junction of the revolving breech with the barrel?

Perhaps "Umbrä" or some of your practical correspondents would favour us with a chapter on these topics, or mention any work containing the information.—Yours &c., CALLEDONIA.

ARCHERY

GRAND ARCHERY FETE AT POWDERHAM.

The Powderham Archery Club, of which Trehewke Kekewich, Esq., is Secretary, had a grand day on Tuesday week. Some excellent shooting took place on the ground of the Club, in the Park attached to Powderham Castle. The occasion was graced by an unusually large attendance of the élite of the neighbourhood.

The prizes were awarded as follows:—

FIRST LADIES' PRIZE.—A Casket; won by Mrs. West.

SECOND LADIES' PRIZE.—An Ornamented Basket; won by Mrs. Young.

FIRST GENTLEMAN'S PRIZE.—A Clock; won by Sir Walter Carew, Bart.

SECOND GENTLEMAN'S PRIZE.—A Statuette; won by C. Kelson, Esq.

A VISITOR'S PRIZE, presented by the Lady Paramount (Lady Northcote), was won by Miss Buller, of Morval.

A dinner subsequently took place, provided by Mr. Pratt, of the New London Inn, Exeter, of which 240 partook, and which gave the greatest satisfaction, as was expressed by the chairman, Sir Stafford Northcote, Esq.

GRAND MEETING OF ALL THE ARCHERY SOCIETIES OF DEVON.

Through the courtesy of William Mackworth Praed, Esq., the annual contest between all the Archery Societies of Devon has again taken place, for the third time, at Teignmouth. Archery has of late years become fashionable; and considering that it is an amusement in which the ladies can take an active and prominent part, it is not surprising that it should be so. There are few outdoor sports in which, according to English custom, the softer sex can with propriety engage; and it is, therefore, only natural that they should display considerable partiality for that particular one in which they have so excellent an opportunity of displaying their strength and skill. It must not also be forgotten that in archery the ladies have the additional advantage of plying beaux as well as bows; and, if they are skillful, of sending their shafts to a destination other than the target. Whatever may be the particular attractions, however, there is not the slightest doubt of the zest with which they engage in it, nor is there any question of their general proficiency. The rapidity with which they run up a "score" surprises even young men fresh from college, who are themselves generally adepts in that art.

The contest between all the Archery Societies of the County commenced on Thursday week, at Ditton House, the seat of W. M. Praed, Esq., which is situated in the immediate vicinity of Teignmouth, and commands a fine view of the estuary of the Teign and the hills of Shaldon. The house was tastefully decorated with evergreens and flags, and presented a gay appearance. The lawn, which is exceedingly well suited for archery, was carefully mown, and everything seemed to have been prepared to secure the comfort and convenience of the archers. The weather during the previous night had been unusually wet, and ruin continued to fall until a somewhat advanced period in the morning. However, as the shooting was not fixed to commence till near mid-day, little inconvenience was felt, the warmth of the atmosphere having dried up the surface of the ground. The sun, it is true, was hidden during the whole of the day, but his absence was more welcome than his presence to the archers, so that no inconvenience whatever was felt from the weather. During the whole of the morning, arrivals poured in from every part, and there was a larger assembly on the grounds than on any previous occasion. Members of most of the principal families in the county were present, including Major and Lady Ibbotson, Lady Louisa and Lady Mary Cathcart, the Hon. W. W. Addington, Sir Harry and Lady Smith, Sir Stafford Northcote, Bart., Sir J. and Lady Buller, Sir John and Lady Duckworth, Sir Walter and Lady Carew, Colonel Bond, Captain Glanville, S. T. Kekewich, Esq., the Rev. Chancellor Martin, W. Carpenter Rowe, Esq., — Porter, Esq., F. Milford, Esq., &c. The Patron was W. M. Praed, Esq., while the Lady Patronesses consisted of the Countess of Mount Edgecumbe, the Hon. Mrs. Adlington, Lady Northcote, Lady Carew, Lady Duckworth, Lady (Harry) Smith, the Hon. Mrs. Lane, Lady F. Davio, Lady Duntze, Lady Yarde Buller, Lady Seale, and Mrs. Praed. The office of Honorary Secretary was most ably filled by Alexander G. West, Esq., while E. A. English, Esq., assiduously performed the duties of Honorary Treasurer.

The following gentlemen attended as representatives of their respective societies, and as such they composed the Committee of Management:—Rev. J. Hall Parlyby, and Francis Glanville, Esq., Secretaries of the Devon and Cornwall Society, Plymouth; Rev. Lynchard Harding, Secretary and Treasurer of the Royal North Devon Archers; Alexander G. West, Esq., Secretary and Treasurer of the Bishopsteign Society; — Madan, Esq., Secretary and Treasurer of the Torquay Society; E. A. English, Esq., Secretary of the Teignmouth Archery Club; Charles Kelson, Esq., Treasurer of ditto; Lewis P. Madden, Esq., Secretary of the Devon Central Archery Club; Rev. N. B. Hole, Treasurer of ditto; Rev. James T. Boles, Secretary of the Exmouth Archery Club; Herbert Barnes, Esq., Treasurer of ditto; Trehewke Kekewich, Esq., Secretary of the Powderham Archery Club; T. M. Snow, Esq., Treasurer of ditto.

Shortly before eleven the gentlemen took up their positions, and commenced firing in the following order:—

FIRST TARGET.—Mr. L. Harding; Mr. Gunning; Major Ibbotson; Capt. West; Sir Walter Carew; Mr. Glanville; Mr. Fothergill; Rev. Mr. Price; Mr. W. Lang; Mr. A. Taylor; Mr. Wyatt; Mr. M. Fife; Mr. A. Northcote.

SECOND TARGET.—Mr. Melhuish; Colonel Bond; Mr. Divett; Col. Taylor; Mr. W. Madan; Mr. Milford; Major Taylor; Mr. Palmer; Mr. Martin; Rev. J. T. Boles; Mr. Barnes; Rev. W. Hole; Rev. N. Goshill.

THIRD TARGET.—Rev. Mr. Parlyby; Rev. Fitz Taylor; Mr. Hole; Mr. Kelson; Mr. Cole; Captain Stodro; Mr. Fortescue; Mr. Vidal; Mr. Guaid; Mr. Tucker; Mr. Porter; Rev. N. B. Hole.

FOURTH TARGET.—Mr. English; Dr. Madan; Mr. Oldham; Mr. Wrey; Mr. Moore; Mr. S. Madan; Mr. H. Taylor; Captain Gardner; Mr. P. Taylor; Mr. Hamlyn; Sir S. Northcote; Mr. Barlow.

The National (York) rounds of six dozen arrows at 100 yards were first shot; after which four dozen were shot at 80 yards; and two dozen at 60 yards.

The gentlemen having kept the targets to themselves till three o'clock, the ladies then commenced and they both fired at the same time, the targets being arranged in such a manner as to prevent any confusion. The distance for the ladies was fixed at 60 and 50 yards, at which four dozen and two dozen arrows respectively were fired. The following ladies took up their positions at the undermentioned targets:—

FIRST TARGET.—Miss Peard; Mrs. West; Miss Hole; Miss Tongue; Miss P. Atkinson; Miss Kelson; Miss Cole; Mrs. Bond; Miss H. Kelson; Miss Baker; Miss Divett.

SECOND TARGET.—Miss Barher; Mrs. Fortescue; Mrs. Morris; Miss Wrey; Miss Carey; Miss Gilbert; Mrs. Walters; Lady Carew; Miss Carey; Miss Martin; Mrs. Barton; Mrs. Parlyby.

FOURTH TARGET.—Miss Buller; Miss Oulson; Miss Fothergill; Miss Thomson; Miss Stupart; Miss Roake; Miss A. Roake; Mrs. C. Radcliffe; Mrs. Young; Mrs. R. C. Price; Miss Rickard; Miss Barton.

The shooting generally speaking was exceedingly good, particularly that of the ladies, who handled the bow with surprising dexterity.

The splendid band of the Royal Marines from Plymouth was present, and played several popular airs during the day.

In the evening a grand ball was held, which was attended by a large proportion of the company.

On Friday the archery was resumed, and the presence of the Royal Marine Band contributed greatly to the pleasure of those assembled. A dinner was laid at the Public Rooms, which was presided over by W. M. Praed, Esq.; and at which the successful competitors for the prizes were announced. The following are the

The announcement of the prize list was received with cheers; and after the usual toasts had been drunk and some excellent speeches made, the company separated.

WATER POISONED

BY LEADEN
PIPES.

The above engraving represents accurately a section of a leaden pipe, which was employed for a short time in conveying water from a well on the grounds of Mr. DICK, of Bonchurch, Isle of Wight. The original section of pipe is 2 1/2 in. long, 2 1/2 in. diameter, and 5-10 in. thick. A great part of the internal surface is corroded by the action of the water; but, as shown in the drawing, four deep excavations have been made, and another is shaded out of view by the manner in which the section of the pipe has been cut. The water has cut these deep pits almost through the pipe, and not only upon the portion which we have illustrated, but has formed similar chasms throughout the entire length.—Expositor.

N.B.—The corrosive water of the Isle of Wight has no effect on Gutta Percha Tubing. See Testimonial below:—

DURABILITY OF GUTTA PERCHA TUBING.

Many inquiries having been made as to the durability of Gutta Percha Tubing, the Gutta Percha Company have pleasure in giving publicity to the following letter from SIR RAYMOND JARVIS, Ventnor, Isle of Wight.

(Second Testimonial.)
"In reply to your letter received this morning, respecting the Gutta Percha Tubing for pump service, I can state, with much satisfaction, it answers perfectly. Many builders and other persons have lately examined it, and there is not the least apparent difference since the first laying down, now several years; and I am informed that it is to be adopted generally in the houses that are being erected here."

TEETH.—By Her Majesty's Royal

Letters Patent.—Newly-invented and Patented application of Chemically-prepared White India-rubber in the construction of Artificial Teeth, Gums, and Palates.—Mr. ERICHAUD MOSER, Surgeon-Dentist, 61, Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, sole Inventor and Patentee. A new, original, and invaluable invention, consisting in the adaptation, with the most absolute perfection and success, of CHEMICALLY-PREPARED WHITE INDIA-RUBBER as a lining to the ordinary gold or bone frame. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted in a few of their most prominent features, as the following:—All sharp edges are avoided; no springs, wires, or fastenings are required; a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied; a natural elasticity, hitherto wholly unattainable, and a fit perforated with the most unerring accuracy, is secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agent employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose, or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums. The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the chemically-prepared White India-rubber, and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may with thorough comfort be imbibed and retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell or taste being at the same time wholly provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation. To be obtained only at

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

AN EXTRAORDINARY CURE OF DROPSY, AFTER SUFFERING FOR EIGHTEEN MONTHS.

Copy of a Letter from Mr. G. Briggs, Chemist, Goote, Dated February 13th, 1853.

To PROFESSOR HOLLOWAY.

Sir,—I have most pleasure in informing you of a most surprising cure of Dropsy, recently effected, by your valuable medicine. Captain Jackson, of this place, was afflicted with Dropsy for upwards of eighteen months, to such an extent that it caused his body and limbs to be much swollen, and water poured as it were from his skin, so that a daily change of apparel became necessary, notwithstanding the various remedies tried, and the different medical men consulted, all ways of no avail, until the commencement of your Pills, which, and a strict attention to the printed directions, he was effectually cured and his health perfectly re-established. If you deem this worthy of publicity, you are at liberty to use it.

I am, Sir, your respectfully,
(Signed) G. Briggs.

Sold at the Establishment of Professor Holloway, 244, Strand, (near Temple-bar,) London, and by all respectable Druggists & Dealers in Medicines throughout the civilised world; at the following prices:—1s. 1/2d., 2s. 6d., 4s. 6d., 11s., 22s., and 33s. each box.

 "This book will be indispensable among commissioned and non-commissioned Military Officers ordered to Turkey, as well as Officers of the British fleet in the Black Sea. The section devoted to provisions will be particularly useful on the coast near Sinope, as well as Varna."
 "From being printed in English letters instead of Arabic characters, this book is as useful to a man before the mast or in the ranks, as to an Admiral or Field-marshal. No soldier or sailor bound to Turkey should be without this pocket vocabulary."

 wonder how it is possible to produce such priceless works at the low figure for which they are announced;
 one glance however will satisfy the most sceptical, that they are not only the cheapest, but the best editions extant." &c.—Vide Port of Portsmouth

DR. DE JONGH'S

LIGHT BROWN COD LIVER OIL.

PREPARED FOR MEDICINAL USE IN THE LOPPODEN ISLES, NORWAY, AND PUT TO THE TEST OF CHEMICAL ANALYSIS.

THE MOST EFFECTUAL REMEDY FOR CONSUMPTION, BRONCHITIS, ASTHMA, GOUT, CHRONIC RHEUMATISM,
 AND ALL SCROFULOUS DISEASES.

Approved of and recommended by BENZELIUS, LIENIG, WOELLER, JONATHAN PEREIRA, FOUQUIER, and numerous other distinguished scientific chemists in Europe.
 Prescribed by the most eminent Physicians, and supplied to the leading Hospitals of Europe.
 Specially rewarded with medals by the Governments of Belgium and the Netherlands.
 Has almost entirely superseded all other kinds on the Continent, in consequence of its proved superior power and efficacy—effecting a cure much more rapidly.
 Contains iodine, phosphate of chalk, volatile acid, and the elements of the bile—in short, all its most active and essential principles—in larger quantities than the pale oils manufactured in England and Newfoundland, deprived mainly of these by their mode of preparation.

EXTRACTS FROM OPINIONS OF THE MEDICAL JOURNALS.

"THE LANCET," July 20, 1854.

"IN THE PREFERENCE OF THE LIGHT BROWN over the PALE OIL, we fully concur. We have carefully tested a specimen of the light brown cod-liver oil, prepared for medical use under the direction of Dr. de Jongh, and obtained from the wholesale agents, Messrs. ARSAR, HANFORD, and Co., 77, Strand. We find it to be genuine, and rich in iodine and the elements of bile."

"THE MEDICAL CIRCULAR," May 10, 1854.

"The utmost reliance may be placed upon the experimental researches of Dr. de Jongh, who is one of the most eminent of European chemists; the oil prepared by him enjoys also the additional sanction of the opinion of Baron Liebig and the late Dr. Pereira, in favour of its genuineness and efficacy. OUR OWN EXPERIENCE PRACTICALLY CONFIRMS THEIR JUDGMENT, AND WE UNHESITATINGLY RECOMMEND THE LIGHT BROWN OIL AS THE BEST FOR MEDICINAL PURPOSES, AND WELL DESERVING THE CONFIDENCE OF THE PRO-FESSOR."

"THE MEDICAL TIMES," August 5, 1854.

"We believe that the profession are much indebted to Dr. de Jongh for his laborious researches into the composition and properties of this Oil; and we have the high authority of Baron Liebig and the late Dr.
 Pereira in testimony of the value of those labours."

THE FIELD OF WAR.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM DROWNING OF THE GRAND DUKE CONSTANTINE.

HAMBURG, AUGUST 7.

A small vessel carrying the Grand Duke Constantine, who was making an inspection excursion round the fortifications of Cronstadt, was capsized. The Grand Duke was picked up by a boat, the sailors seizing him by the hair.

Prince Galitzin and four sailors were drowned.

OUR WOODEN WALLS.

THE BALTIC FLEET.

LED SUND, AUGUST 2.

A few days back, Captain Sullivan, of the Lightning, landed at Dagerby, to buy provisions from the inhabitants, who are always glad to sell, when they were stopped by the sheriff of the district, who came down to the beach in his uniform and would not allow them to traffic. He had done this before, making himself obnoxious. He seemed to be no favourite with the people, for one of the women whispered to Captain Sullivan, "Take him away with you; take him away;" so Captain Sullivan placed his hand on the fellow's shoulder—a signal well understood by his boat's crew—and, in an instant, he was carried kicking down into the boat; and he is now a prisoner on board the Duke of Wellington. On the 27th Admiral Deschenes and Sir Charles Napier went up to Bomarsund in separate steamers, and, after examining the forts and lands surrounding them, they returned in the evening about 6. The Valorons has come down to Led Sund; she is very much injured, and makes five feet of water per hour. By the aid of diving apparatus (which was borrowed from a Frenchman) 13 of her planks have been found started, and pieces five feet long have been brought up. A sail has been passed under her bottom, over the hole, and hopes are entertained that it will be so filled up as to enable her to come home for repairs. The Rajah arrived, after very nearly running on shore; the Lightning had to be sent to show her the way in. On the 28th the Holyrood arrived. So far is your correspondent, who signs himself "A Land-lubber," in the wrong, concerning the freshness of the Baltic water and tanks not being wanted, that it has been proposed to turn this useful into a tank for the use of the fleet; she is admirably adapted for it, being divided into compartments. On the 29th the Rajah was sent on to Admiral Martin's squadron with stores, &c.; and the Driver up to Bomarsund, with stores and water for the ships up there. Ships are continually passing between the two divisions of the fleet, keeping up a constant communication. On the 30th, at daylight, the ships carrying the French troops came in sight, and the Lightning was sent out to meet them. At noon they came in, in the following order:—The Hannibal was first; she saluted with 17 guns, which Sir Charles returned with seven; she then saluted the French admiral with 15, which he returned with the same number. In passing through the fleet all the ships manned the rigging, and gave our now and welcome arrivals three hearty cheers, exchanging flags as usual, and each country's bands playing the other country's National Anthem; then came the Algiers, Royal William, Gladiator, St. Vincent, and Sphinx. Soon after they had anchored the Stromboli transport, Chieftain, and Nicolai I. arrived with the mails from Dantsic. Yesterday, General D'Hilliers arrived in the Emperor's yacht; he was received with every mark of naval honour by both fleets; the yards were manned and salutes fired; he immediately paid a visit to the French admiral, and then to Sir Charles Napier. Three Russians, who have deserted from the forts, were taken on board the Duke to-day. They state that the five forts have 3,000 men in them, including 500 riflemen; they state that the garrison is very discontented, and many would run if they could. They are quite healthy.

August 2.—This morning the three Commanders-in-Chief have gone up to Bomarsund in the yacht to arrange the plan of attack, which I think will take place on Thursday or Friday, for everything is prepared.

It has been determined to land the troops and at once to invest the forts. Some of the guns of her Majesty's ship Cumberland will be landed for siege operations. Two battalions of marines are formed, consisting each of 900 men. Captain Heriot will take command of one battalion. These gallant men will again establish their motto, "Per mare, per terram." A few of our steamships have barricaded the bridge between the paddleboxes to protect the officers from the Russian rifle balls, and the French also have fitted barbed work of hammocks and sailcloth in their tops.

Captain Munday will join the Nile, and Admiral Martin removes his flag to the Neptune, and takes command of the following fleet detached for service in the Gulf of Finland:—Neptune, St. George, Monarch, Prince Regent, and the screw line-of-battle ships Cesar, Nile, Cressy, and Royal George.

OUR FRENCH ALLIES.

MALTA.—On the 28th ult., the French steam-frigate Labrador arrived from Alexandretta. She had on board 16 Arab entire horses, each of the value of 25,000fr., equal to £1,000 English, selected with the utmost care with regard to symmetrical proportions and other points of beauty. They were destined for France, to improve the breed of racehorses in that country.

SAILING OF TROOPS.

MALTA.—On the 26th the Simla arrived, having on board 299 troopers of the 4th Light Dragoons, 312 horses and 10 servants, 12 men of the Ambulance Corps, and the following officers of Dragoons:—Lieutenant-Colonel Lord George Paget; Majors Halkott and Low; Captains Brown, Portal, Hutton, and George (Paymaster); Lieutenants Adlington, Sparke, Ellis (Adjutant), Jolliffe, and the Hon. C. J. Keith; Cornets Martin, King, Hunt, and Booth; Surgeon Hunter; Assistant-Surgeon Crighton; Veterinary-Surgeon Byrne; and Quartermaster Hill.

On the same day, by the Colombo, arrived 961 rank and file, 12 horses of the 20th Regiment, and the following officers:—Colonel Horn, Lieutenant-Colonel Crattan, Major Eveleigh, Brevet-Majors Sharpe and Bismore; Captains Lye, Stevens, Radcliffe, Wood, Butler, and Anstey; Lieutenants James, Hay, Chapman, Leet, Bennett, M'Neill, Peard, Padfield (Adjutant), Rotherham, and Parkinson; Ensigns Dowling, Vaughan, Parr, Lewis, and Kekewich; Paymaster Mosley; Quartermaster Blham; Surgeon Howard; Assistant-Surgeon Wright, together with the Rev. Mr. Coffe.

On the 27th, by the Medora, there left for the East the Hon. Captain Yelverton, with 120 men of the Royal Artillery; Captain Craigie, Lieutenant Ravenhill, and Lieutenant Murray, Royal Engineers; with 80 rank and file, and No. 4 company, Royal Sappers and Miners.

TROOPS ON THE MARCH, OR UNDER ORDERS FOR FOREIGN SERVICE.

THE 21st.—The 1st division of the 21st Regiment (Royal North British Fusiliers) have arrived at Cork from Dublin; the second division arrived on Friday, and the third division followed on Saturday. They await transports for conveyance to the East. The depot will be stationed with the provisional battalion at Fermoy.

ENCAMPMENT OF FRENCH TROOPS AT ADRIANOPLE.—JUNE 22, 1854.

WOOLWICH, Tuesday.—One hundred men of the Royal Artillery proceeded from Woolwich garrison at 4 a.m., yesterday, in the Royal Arsenal to assist in loading the Australia transport steamer with large guns and warlike stores for service in the East; they were relieved at 1 o'clock p.m. by an equal number of men, as it is desirable that she should be able to embark Major Young's company, 2nd company of the 12th battalion, and Captain Irving's 3rd company, 12th battalion, to-day, these companies being under orders to proceed with the siege guns for service in Turkey.

SOLDIERS' WIVES AND FAMILIES.

IMPORTANT TO WIVES AND SWEETHEARTS.—A letter from Varna, dated July 21, says:—"It is delightful to praise any branch of our administration, and it must be said the home Post-office has conferred a great benefit on the service by organising the British army post-office, and sending out two such intelligent, active, and able officers as Mr. Smith and Mr. Angell to superintend it. The former is at Constantinople and the latter at Varna. Our letters now are delivered regularly, and conveyed with safety and economy, and the men are delighted with the boon of cheap and speedy postage. The mails are made up in London on the evenings of the 3rd, 8th, 13th, 18th, 23rd, and 28th of each month, and are delivered at Varna on or about the 3rd, 5th, 13th, 15th, 23rd, and 25th of each month. The mails are made up at Varna for England on the 4th, 9th, 14th, 19th, 24th, and 29th of each month. Postage both ways, three penny stamps under a quarter of an ounce, and so in proportion. Letters may be paid or not, at the option of the sender."

THE TURKS AND RUSSIANS.

The cholera has appeared among the troops at Varna, but the English forces are as yet tolerably free from it. Sixteen French soldiers have died from this terrible scourge out of 25 who were attacked by it. A good deal of sickness prevails among the Turkish and Egyptian troops. There has been some mortality among the cavalry at Devno also, and the chaplain performed six funeral services among the two cavalry brigades this week. A sergeant of the 8th Hussars, who had been suffering for some time from an affection of the head, committed suicide by drowning. The poor fellow, who was one of the best non-commissioned officers in the regiment, is greatly regretted. Several officers are invalided, and will be sent home by the first opportunity, among them Messrs. Bal'our and Alexander of the Rifle Brigade. Lord Dapplin, who has been seriously ill, is now much better, but it is said that he also will be obliged to go to England. Dr. Macdonald who has been sent in, to the general hospital, is also somewhat better. Three officers of the Guards are unwell, but not seriously so. Diarrhoea is only too prevalent. Nearly every one has it in his turn. The quantity of apricots ("Kill Johns") and hard crude fruit, which are devoured by the men, may in some degree account for the prevalence of this debilitating malady.

Captain Gordon, R.E., has returned to Varna in the Vahan from the Circassian coast. It is reported that the Russians are employed night and day in strengthening the defences of Anapa, and in fortifying some small redoubts south of it. Their vessels often take a peep out of Sebastopol and run in again.

OMAR PASHA'S PROCLAMATION TO THE WALLACHIANS.—A letter from Bucharest says:—"The Russians appear to dread an insurrection at Bucharest on the approach of the Turks. They conjecture this from a passage in Omar Pasha's proclamation of the 15th ult., which has been plentifully distributed here during the last week, in spite of all the vigilance of their police. There are copies of it in French and Roumanian; the text, which is very concise, is as follows:—"Roumanen.—When the Russian troops before Silistria learned that I was marching against them at the head of 80,000 men, they retired. I am now going to cross the Danube, and hope by God's help to drive back our and your enemy to Bessarabia. Be united one with another. Your situation will shortly improve.—OMAR."

ARRIVAL OF THE TURKS AT BUCHAREST.

BUCHAREST, August 7.

The Turkish vanguard, under Skender Beg, has just entered the city.

The rearguard of the Russians, consisting of seven regiments of Hussars and Cossacks, is only two miles distant.

Authentic information says that Moldavia will also be evacuated.

Russian regiments are already retreating across the Pruth.

THE WAR IN ASIA.

BATOUN.

The Russians, since the time of Catherine, have coveted Batoun. We give an illustration of that port in "THE FIELD" of to-day, page 733. Batoun is the best place eastward of Trebizond for the trade with Persia. It is destined to become a great place, and but for the allied fleet, another Sinope massacre would ere this have been enacted there by the Muscovites, those "misbegotten knaves in Kendal Green." We have news from Suchoun Kule, and from Redout Kalé. Nurb Effendi, one of the companions of Shamy, had arrived at Vardou, and had had a conference with the English officers relative to sending 10,000 Circassians to Batoun, and their incorporation with the Turkish army. Nurb Effendi appears doing everything to succeed in this, but does not conceal the difficulties there will be in persuading the Circassians to join the army of Selim Pasha. The news from Erzeroum comes down to the 6th ult. The Russian army of Alexandropol, 25,000 strong, and having 80 pieces of cannon, had crossed the Arpatchai, and were within six leagues of Kora. The Turkish army, 80,000 strong in regular troops, 15,000 Bashli-Bazouks, and with 100 pieces of cannon, was pursued by only a few leagues distance. A battle was expected every day. A letter from Trebizond states that Nafiz Pasha, who had commanded the Turkish army at the battle of Nezib, has been named Governor of Trebizond. Three Turkish steam-frigates, having on board Admiral Ashmet Pasha, had arrived in that port with 3,000 regulars from Varna, 45 pieces of cannon, and a certain number of horses. These troops were to set out immediately for Batoun. A glance at a map of the Black Sea will show the importance of Batoun as a port and entrepôt.

NAVAL OPERATIONS IN THE BLACK SEA.

EREKLI.—Admiral Dundas is again permitting the Russians to have their own way in the Black Sea. The telegraph announces that the Russian war steamer, Vladimir, was chasing her Majesty's steamer, Cyclops, near the Bosphorus, just at the time our admiral fondly thought that every Russian ship was cooped up in Sebastopol. The Cyclops escaped, and so her adventure ended. It was otherwise with three Turkish merchantmen, whose fate the Constantinople correspondent of the Independence, of Brussels, thus describes:—"An occurrence which has just taken place in the Black Sea, only a few miles off the mouth of the Bosphorus, has caused the profoundest sensation. Three Turkish vessels, while at their moorings in the harbour of Heraclea (Ereklî), have been burned by a Russian steam-frigate that came from Sebastopol and was able to cross the whole of the Black Sea without being seen by the Anglo-French cruisers! The ships destroyed were laden, one with Indian corn, a second with wood, and the third with coal extracted from the mines at Heraclea, and intended for the allied squadrons. Their captives have been carried off prisoners to Sebastopol, the crews being put into a boat and turned adrift in the roadstead. The very day before this bold deed was performed, the French advice corvette, the Mouette left the port in question in order to return to Therapia. This little incident shows how well the Russians are served by their scouts. How will it be now, when the Greek vessels are again permitted to revisit the harbours in the Black Sea."

ODESSA.—H.M.S.—, July 19.—Furious and Terrible have succeeded in destroying Tiger's cylinders and driving the field-pieces from their position. Furious had one shot which passed through both funnels, and one man slightly wounded. Tiger's ship's company have been drafted to the following ships—Britannia, Albion, Vengeance, Trafalgar, Bellerophon, Retribution, Niger, Inflexible, Sampson, and Fury—all ships likely to return to England the full of this year, the steamers all being done up. The purser's steward of Tiger (considered the Jouas), who was wrecked in Thunderbolt and Birkenhead before the Tiger, was sent to Agamemnon, which ship appears to be unfortunate with her stewards, having had some five or six under her new paymaster.

VARNA, July 30.—Sir George Brown has returned in the Fury, in which vessel he entered the harbour at Sebastopol in the night and remained till dawn. The Fury was fired at both with shot and shell, but she suffered no damage. Vessels from Varna are subjected to a quarantine of five days at Constantinople.

Naval.

THE BALTIC.

(From our own Correspondent.)

FARO SOUND, ISLAND OF GOTLAND, 31st July.—All are longing for the attack on Boomerang, which it is expected will take place either on the 2nd or 3rd of August. The Tormentor has on board 360 men of the Chasseurs de Vincennes, and towed two English transports, the "Columbo" with the 51 de Ligne 300 in number, and the Julia with 307 of the 3 de Ligne, and 80 English Sappers and Miners, in all, 1047 men.

The best understanding, good feeling, and unity prevailed among the English sailors and French soldiers, the latter ever cheerful, willing away long evenings by making the Swedish shores, echo their song of love or glory; the enclosed song was composed by a private of the 12th Chasseurs.—[The song will appear next week.—Ed.]

A LOST PRIZE.—A large merchant brig under the Russian flag arrived in the Elbe on Sunday, from Sitka, on the north-west coast of North America. Why was the Tartarus or some other British cruiser not off Heligoland? The brig is the Nanny, of Brashetad. We hear she is to be sold at Hamburg, and that the captain and crew will return to Russia by land.

FRENCH NAVY AND MERCHANT SERVICE.

MARSEILLES, August 5.—A portion of the guns of the 17th Regiment of artillery has been shipped on board three transports, which have sailed for Varna. The remainder will quickly follow. The embarkation of provisions and military stores for the army of the East continues without intermission. There are between 40 and 50 vessels in the port of the Joliette waiting to receive their cargoes for the Black Sea.

A letter from Tonkin states that there are at present in that port eight steam-frigates, three corvettes, and three cutters. Other ships of war are expected. These are sufficient to convey 10,000 men, which, it is believed, will be shortly embarked. The screw line-of-battle ships Fleurus, Navarin, and Souverain are nearly ready for sea.

A correspondent from Malta, writing on the 2nd of August, says:—

"The most important intelligence received yesterday by the French steamer Sinai, from the Levant, consists in the departure from Bulschick and Varna of a large portion of the troops, in 14 ships of the line, towed by as many steamers, besides transports, both sailing and steam. The total number of troops embarked is reckoned at 40,000, but whether their destination be the Crimea or Odessa does not seem to be accurately known."

Seven French and four English vessels alone remain at Bulschick.

General Brown is mentioned as being on board the Agamemnon, flag of Sir Edmund Lyons; and General Carrobert on board the Napoleon.

STEAMERS.

LIVERTON, Sunday, Aug. 6.—The Asia arrived this morning with the mails from New York of the 26th of July. She has brought 120 passengers. The Senate had ratified a treaty with Russia, securing the neutrality of the United States in the European War, and acknowledging the principle that the neutral flag protects vessel and cargo. The New York Herald makes the positive announcement that despatches from the Russian Government arrived in the Pacific on the 25th of July, offering to the United States the whole of the Russian territory in North America.

HAMBURG, Aug. 7.—Two English steamers, after having destroyed the Russian convents on the shores of the White Sea, have entered the Gulf of Onegskain, near Archangel.

CAPTURES FROM THE RUSSIANS.

A REMOVED CAPTURE.—By the last advices the Russian frigate Aurora had left the port of Callao for the Sandwich Islands, and the allied ships Forte, President, Eurydice, Obligato, and Virago were then about to leave the same port (Callao), their destination being unknown. There is a rumour the Muscovite has been caught.

CONDEMNED PRIZES.—The Carl Magnus, the John, the Industrie, the Emilie, the Carolina, and the Gebroeders, Russian ships captured by Her Majesty's cruisers, have all been condemned as lawful prizes by the High Court of Admiralty.

SICKNESS.—The Devonshire, receiving-ship for Russian prisoners of war, is increasing her medical stores, &c., anticipating in a short time an arrival of prisoners and wounded from the Baltic. She is being fitted with every possible convenience for them, as suggested by her commander, Lieutenant J. H. Lloyd, and approved by the Commander-in-Chief.

BEARDS.—An order was issued a few days ago allowing the troops in the East to wear the moustache, and the beard also, if they please.—Daily News.

The following circular has been issued in Portsmouth garrison:—

"CIRCULAR MEMORANDUM."

"A large part of the army being employed in Turkey, where it has been found beneficial to keep the upper lip unshaven, and allow the moustache to grow, the General Commanding-in-Chief is pleased to authorize that practice in the army generally, subject to the following regulations, which are to be strictly obeyed in home and colonial service:—

"A clear space of two inches must be left between the corner of the mouth and the whisker, when whiskers are grown; the chin, the under lip, and at least two inches of the upper part of the throat must be clean shaven, so that no hair can be seen above the stock in that place.

"The wearing of the moustache is to be optional with all ranks.

"The troops serving in the East will be allowed such further latitude in respect to shaving their beards and whiskers as the general officer commanding that army may deem it expedient to sanction during the continuance of that service."

Medical.

THE BALTIC FLEET.—The cholera, I am happy to say, is fast disappearing. The Austerlitz, at one period, had 150 cases on board. The Majestic went to sea to recruit the health of the crew. A very singular feature regarding the disease is, that the crew ships only have been attacked by the epidemic, the sailing vessels enjoying perfect immunity. Diluted sulphuric acid and camphor mixture is a favorite remedy. The better ventilation of the engine-rooms becomes a serious consideration, and should enforce itself upon the attention of scientific men. To keep engineers and stokers in an atmosphere the temperature of which is 123 deg. is nothing but a lingering process of parboiling, and how they stand it so well passes comprehension.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF SURGEONS.—The following gentlemen, having undergone the necessary examinations for the diploma, were admitted members of the college at the meeting of the Court of Examiners, on the 21st ult.:—Messrs. THE ROYAL FREE HOSPITAL.—Mr. Weedon Cooke has resigned his post as one of the surgeons of the Royal Free Hospital, to which he was appointed a month or two since. The intentions of his colleague, Mr. Wakley, jun., are not yet announced.

DUCKERSBURG.—A death from cholera is reported in the case of a man named Saline, residing in Duckersburg, who was carried off in a few hours after the commencement of the attack. Should the isolated cases, which are manifesting themselves in various quarters, be exchanged for a general prevalence of this fearful visitation, the officials of the metropolitan hospitals, we are glad to say, will be found quite prepared, extra wards having been fitted up, and the means of remedial treatment abundantly provided.

University and Clerical.

ERON COLLEGE.—An express arrived at the Provost's Lodge late on Saturday evening last, from King's College, Cambridge, bearing a scholarship for Mr. Evans, captain of the college. The vacancy at King's was caused by the resignation of the Rev. Herbert James, M.A., Fellow of the College. Mr. Evans is the second son of Chancellor Evans, of Norwich, and succeeded Mr. A. H. A. Morton, as captain of the school, on the 4th of the present month. Mr. Woodhouse is now captain of the college. Mr. Evans being engaged to deliver two speeches in the upper school on Election Saturday, will not leave Eton before the vacation.

MELANCHOLY AND FATAL ACCIDENT FROM DROWNING.—On Monday last Mr. Francis Thomas Yates Molyneux, an undergraduate of St. John's College, Cambridge, was unfortunately drowned whilst bathing in the river Severn, near Pottor's Load. The deceased had been reading during the long vacation with the Rev. Mr. Considine, vicar of Alvely, and had been in the habit of bathing in the Severn nearly every day during the last three weeks. He was advised not to bathe, as he was subject to cramp.—Cardiff Journal.

DUBLIN.—Dr. Leslie, Lord Bishop of Kilmore, died at Cavan, on Saturday, in his 82nd year. The income of his successor will be on a reduced scale, and a large sum will fall to the Ecclesiastical Fund. GOLD FIELDS.

The subjoined are from three of the English Californian mining companies:—

NOUVEAU MONDE.

The Nouveau Monde Gold Mining Company have received advices from Mr. J. Arthur Phillips, dated Mount Ophir, June 23. The usual monthly report from Captain Michell on the mines' has also been received. Both these documents are open for the perusal of shareholders.

AGUA FRIA.

The Agua Fria Company have received advices to the 1st of July, per Asia, of the remittance of 127 ounces of gold, the produce of the last 14 days' stamping. From various causes the mill had still been employed, principally on pay dirt, but the superintendent states that the following week they would commence crushing the veinstone. He does not, however, anticipate large results until he is able to reach the vein below water level. It is satisfactory to observe that notwithstanding the numerous drawbacks, the result of the crushing for the month of May showed a profit of 3,000 dollars.

QUARTZ ROCK.

The Quartz Rock Mariposa Gold Mining Company have received a letter from their agent at San Francisco, dated the 1st of July, in which he says, "I yesterday received a bar of about 50oz. of gold, the result of a few days' crushing of ore unselected."

Foreign Intelligence.

DENMARK has joined the Austro-Prussian alliance. AUSTRIA AND PRUSSIA will soon—perhaps in 48 hours—propose to the Diet that the Federal contingents shall be placed on a war footing. It is said that Bavarian troops will, in case of need, occupy the two Austrian provinces in Italy. In a very few days the Prussian army will be made mobile.

DESPATCHES DATED MADRID, August 4, announce that as soon as the ministry is completely formed the Cabinet will decide upon the elections; and that the Cortes will be constituted in conformity with the law of 1837, or that of 1845. On the night of the 3rd arrangements were made for the departure of Queen Christina and her family. Everything was ready. General San Miguel was to have escorted her with a detachment of Dragoons, and Espartero went to the palace to superintend the preparations for her departure. Armed groups, however, assembled round the palace in order to oppose the departure of the Queen, and it was found necessary to abandon the idea, in order to prevent a collision.

The Bank of San Fernando has advanced 15,000,000 reals to the Treasury.

FROM THE BLACK SEA we learn that on the 30th of July the whole allied fleet appeared before Sebastopol, with a great number of transport vessels. On the 16th a conspiracy for setting the Russian fleet on fire as it lay in port was discovered at Sebastopol.

DESTRUCTION OF GREYTOWN BY THE AMERICANS.

(From the New York Tribune.)

Greytown consisted of about 80 houses, nearly all of them built of wood. One of these, Lyon's Hotel, cost 15,000 dollars. The population of Greytown consisted of about 500 persons altogether, of which number 10 or 12 were from the United States, about 25 were Englishmen, and 12 Frenchmen and Germans. The remainder of the population were Jamaica negroes and natives. The Americans, English, French, and Dutch were engaged in hotel-keeping and trade. The houses occupied by the natives and negroes were principally frame buildings, with roofs of thatched palm leaf. When the Cyano appeared before Greytown and demanded satisfaction to the amount of 24,000 dollars, threatening bombardment if not complied with at a given hour, it was not believed by the inhabitants that the town was to be demolished, pillaged, and burnt. They expected that a few shots would be fired into the town, that a few houses would be perforated, and then hostilities would cease. Most of the English, however, went for protection on board the British war schooner Bermuda, Captain Jolly, lying in the harbour. Mr. Fabens, United States' agent, together with six or seven of the Americans, sought protection under the flag of the United States on board the Cyano, and the remainder of the inhabitants of Greytown, including all of the French and natives, together with a few English and Americans, left the place during the night and morning preceding its destruction. They all camped together on the shore in the woods about a mile distant. Not anticipating the entire demolition of the town by bombshells and torches, they took but little of their effects with them. All the property left was destroyed. Consequently the houseless inhabitants were in great suffering from the want of food, and of clothing and protection from the weather when our informants left. They had stretched up sheets for tents, and many were obliged to sleep in the open air without the least shelter, and were half famished for the want of food. A brig laden with provisions, which had just arrived as the bombardment commenced, has probably supplied them. The terms of Captain Hollins not being complied with, he opened his fire promptly at the appointed time, nearly every shot doing execution. He fired about 200 shots, but, not burning up the town as he desired, he sent ashore a launch with a lieutenant and about 25 men, who proceeded to set on fire all that remained of Greytown. Before finishing this work they were pretty thoroughly intoxicated with wines and liquors, and were constantly cheering. The amount of property destroyed by this bombardment is stated to be 500,000 dollars. San Juan, or Greytown, on the 13th, was entirely destroyed; one or two small buildings in the suburbs remain to mark the spot. No lives were lost. While the Cyano was cannonading a note was received by Captain Hollins from the captain of the British schooner Bermuda, stating that he regretted that he had not a British vessel of war there of the size of the Cyano—he would compel him to desist. Captain Hollins in reply to the note, regretted that Captain Jolly had not two just such, as he believed that the United States could get possession of them on the same terms as they got the Cyano.

(From the New York Courier.)

It is with pain and mortification that we are compelled to comment upon this act of savage cruelty, committed under the deliberate instructions of the United States' Government, upon a helpless, isolated village. Nothing but extreme necessity could justify such a violent measure against any community, even in time of war; but, on a careful review of all the circumstances attending and preceding this transaction, we cannot fail, as given by the witnesses most favourable to our side, a shadow of excuse for hostilities of any kind, at least at the present time. We forbear to anticipate, since we cannot deprecate, the horror and indignant scorn with which the news of this sweeping and barbarian vengeance will be received by the civilised world. The Nicaragua Transit Company employs a dozen small steamers on the San Juan river, to transport passengers from and to their New York steamers. The refusal of the company to recognise the Government of Greytown has kept it in continual difficulties with the authorities and people from the first, and a mutually bitter feeling exists, which finds vent in numerous annoyances and reprisals. According to the statement of a passenger who witnessed the affair, Captain Smith, of the Routh, one of these small steamers, in attempting to make a landing some 10 or 12 miles above Greytown, came in contact with a bongo, and a difficulty ensued with the native proprietor of the craft, who levelled his gun at Captain Smith, but did not fire. The steamer passed on, but was soon after carried back by the current towards the bongo. Captain Smith in the meantime had got his rifle ready, and when near enough, shot the native captain of the bongo dead. Another passenger says, that the steamer returned towards the bongo after the accident, on the suggestion of an influential person on board, in order to flag the native for his impudence; but that, instead of doing this, Captain Smith called for his rifle, and with deliberation shot him through the heart. On arriving at Greytown, Captain Smith went on board the ocean steamer, where the authorities attempted to arrest him, but were prevented from so doing by his resistance, assisted by the crew, and by the interference of Mr. Borland, our Minister to Central America, then on his way home, who ordered them off and enforced his order with the aid of a rifle, on the ground that the United States recognised no authority at Greytown as competent to arrest and try an American citizen. In the evening Mr. Borland went on shore, to the house of our commercial agent, Mr. Fabens, which was soon surrounded by a crowd, who threatened to arrest him. The mob soon after dispersed, after some one had thrown a fragment of a bottle which struck Mr. Borland in the face, and Mr. Borland was not further molested, but all boats from the ships were kept off the shore by the excited inhabitants till the next morning. This is the length and breadth of the "outrage upon Mr. Borland," which amounted only to threats and insults from a nocturnal mob, in which the Government of the place had no share, but for which the defenceless inhabitants were held responsible, to the utter destruction of their village, their homes, and all their property, by the authority of the United States' Government. What the demand of 24,000 dollars indemnity to the Transit Company may mean we are unable to conjecture, unless it relates to the old contest in which the company were worsted some years ago, with loss of sundry buildings which they had erected on land claimed by the city.

COLONIAL INTELLIGENCE.

CANADA.—The elections are proceeding in Canada. No contests have come off at the latest dates, but eleven members had been returned without opposition, four of them members of the Government. It was supposed that all the members of the Administration would be returned, and that they would have a majority in the House, but that the new Parliament would last but one session. After the 1st of January next there will be some 100,000 new voters, who will have a right to be heard in the selection of the lawmakers at the earliest moment. The farmers of Upper Canada are in the midst of the wheat harvest. On the whole, the crop is deemed below the average, but the breadth of land growing wheat is unusually large. Cholera has prevailed to a greater or less extent in the principal towns and cities of Canada for nearly a month. In Montreal the pestilence has raged fiercely, some fifty deaths having taken place a day in a population of 60,000 during part of the time. For some days past there had been a general abatement of the disease.

FOREIGN MISCELLANY.

PRIVATERRING.—A member of Congress had communicated to the Washington Union a project, which was to fit out a privateer with a view to attacking the Speculo House at Chagres, and carrying off specie intended for England, and also for capturing Californian and Australian gold vessels. The parties to the project are two naturalised Irishmen, who have agents in London.

ESTABLISHMENT OF DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS WITH THE POPE.—A correspondent of the Dublin Weekly Telegraph writes from Rome:—"I hear from Florence that it is expected Lord Normandy, who has been long residing in a beautiful villa near that capital, will shortly be appointed to succeed Sir Henry Bulwer, as English minister for Tuscany, and that the sequel to that nomination will be the accrediting of our representative at Rome. How and after what preliminaries such arrangement is to be effected between the English cabinet and the Vatican I have no authority for reporting. Lord Normandy, it is asserted, may be in Rome, thus officially recognised, as early as the ensuing winter."

PICTURE GALLERY.—M. Van der Haap, a great Dutch capitalist, recently deceased, left by will his valuable picture gallery to the municipality of Amsterdam, on condition that it would pay the duty, exceeding £5,000, on the legacy. A public subscription was opened, and that sum has been raised.

THE TWO SICILIES.—A correspondent writes: Naples, July:—"From a conversation I have just held with a gentleman who has just come from Messina, provided with credentials to the government inspector, that a suspicion has long been entertained that the correspondence of private individuals has been tampered with, now they find that not only are private letters opened, but they have dared to open the official letters addressed to the embassy both of the English and American nations, although the seals of the French is respected."

EARTHQUAKE IN FRANCE.—A letter from Burdès, published by the Moniteur, says:—"On the morning of 20th ult., at a quarter to three o'clock, an oscillation of the houses and a rumbling noise very like that produced by a wagon loaded with iron bars in a narrow road, frightened all the inhabitants of Burdès from their propriety, and worked several miracles. It was an earthquake. Three shocks, at intervals of about five minutes, shook the whole chain of the Pyrenees, which seemed for an instant ready to topple down. It was a fearful spectacle. At the Military Hospital, the buves of bread laid out on the shelves rolled off, and the muskets fell out of their stands. The walls of this establishment (very old, by the way) were completely split up on the inside, and it is said the house is dangerous in consequence. Our correspondent adds, that awakened by the first shock, he saw his books, lamp, and light articles of furniture dancing grotesquely about his room. The streets were speedily crowded with sick instantaneously restored to health. Paralytic person, who had come to the waters to recover the elasticity of their limbs, ran as hard as if nothing was the matter with them. Several residents hastened to leave the town, carrying a few necessities on their backs. All is now tranquil."

ACCIDENT DURING THE FRENCH EMBARKATION.—During the recent embarkation of the French troops at Calais Mr. Charles Christopher, architect, brother of First-Lieut. Christopher, of the Lizuel, was killed alongside the Algiers, in consequence of a collision between the two vessels.—South Eastern Gazette.

SCOTLAND.

RIOT AT AIRDRIE.—Airdrie races, which began on Thursday, and terminated on Friday night, have been attended by a serious riot, which resulted in the loss of one life, and the infliction of permanent injuries on various individuals. The riot began at three o'clock on Friday morning, the opposing parties being orangemen and ribbonmen. Not content with the warfare of sticks and stones, pistols were brought into requisition. Information of the outbreak having been brought to Glasgow, a detachment of fifty soldiers proceeded to Airdrie, and secured the peace, which had been thus violently outraged. Seventeen of the rioters have been apprehended in a public-house at Rawyards.—Glasgow Commonwealth.

The world would be more happy if persons gave up more time to an intercourse of friendship. But money engrosses all their attention, and they scarce enjoy a social hour, because they think it unjustly taken from the main business of life.

SPAIN.

INDICTMENT AGAINST QUEEN CHRISTINA.—Dona Maria Christina de Bourbon is debtor to the State—twenty-four millions, which she received unlawfully as Reina Gobernadora, from 1834 to 1840, having married a second time shortly after the death of her first husband; twelve millions which were paid to her on her return from France for the three years which she passed out of the country; and thirty-five millions, the difference between the money of Spain and America, for the 10 years that she has drawn her pension on the treasury of Cuba; making a total of seventy-one millions of reals. With the sweat of the people the Riansares family raised their palace of the Calle de las Rejas; founded estates at Tarazona; acquired the coal-mines of Langreo; made its own a great part of the Gijon railroad; took many shares in the canalisation of the Ebro; took a great number in the company of La Espana Industrial (a joint-stock manufacturing company); entered with Senor Salamanca in the participation of various lines of railroad; and established at Havana engine, and other speculations.—Madrid Tribune.

THE BLACK SEA.

THE EXPEDITIONARY ARMY TO THE CRIMEA.—It is confidently asserted in Paris that accounts have been received of the landing of the expeditionary troops at Perekop, on the isthmus which unites the Crimea to Taurida, the southern mainland of Russia.

IMPORTANT FROM EGYPT.

MARSEILLES, FRIDAY.

ALEXANDRIA, Aug. 2.—The new Viceroy, Saiti Pacha, has appointed an Englishman (Green) to be director of the overland transit, an important State appointment; and a Frenchman (Koenig, his former French master) to be his chief secretary. The Government shows reforming activity, and has already abolished the duty on the exportation of cereals. This will exonerate the Fellahs from the impost on pasture and the wheat harvest. The quantity of produce thus thrown open to unrestricted commerce is estimated at 500,000 ardebas.

Foreign officers will again be employed for the training of the army.

The debt is to be liquidated by the sale of the dépôt of merchandise.

Cairo has been illuminated for three days.

THE CIVIL SERVICE.—Mr. Tom Taylor of the Inner Temple, barrister-at-law, has been appointed secretary to the New Board of Health, £1,000 per annum.

ROYAL ARCH MASONRY AT OXFORD.—On Wednesday last the members of the Oxford Royal Arch, Chapter No. 425, assembled at the Masonic Hall for the transaction of sundry business. Two candidates were exalted, after which the three Principals for the ensuing year, Comp. Rev. E. Moore, M.A., of Brasenose College, first Principal; Comp. W. B. Beach, of Christchurch second Principal, and Comp. J. Martin, third Principal, were installed. Previous to closing the Chapter the first Principal presented in the name of the Chapter an elegant jewel to Comp. F. Thomas, first Principal of the past year in token of his assiduity, faithful discharge of the duties of his office, and his general zeal for masonry. The Chapter then adjourned until 5 o'clock in the afternoon, when a sumptuous banquet provided by Compe. Furley and Walker Post, first Principals, was done justice to by about 30 Companions, including the first Principal Comp. Rev. E. Moore, who presided; the Dep. Prov. G.M., for Oxfordshire; Capt. Bowyer, the Mayor of Oxford; R. J. Spiers, Esq., W. B. Beach, Esq.; W.M. of the Apollo Lodge; Alderman Dudley, late Mayor; F. Symonds, Esq., E. Hansard, Esq., J. Tanton, Esq., E. C. In the course of the evening, a silver-tee service distinguished alike for elegant design and exquisite workmanship, supplied by Br. Sheard, silversmith, of this city, was presented by Br. J. Tanton, Esq., in the names of a few private friends, members of the Province, to Br. F. Thomas, P.M. of the Alfred Lodge, as a token of their regard and a recognition of his assiduous efforts to promote the advancement of masonry, and the interests of the craft in general. The festivities were kept up in the most agreeable and social manner until a late hour, when the brethren separated with grateful recollections of a happy and gratifying meeting.

STRIKE OF THE ENGINE-DRIVERS ON THE LONDON AND NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY.

BIRMINGHAM, SATURDAY, 10 A.M.

The engine-drivers on the London and North-Western Railway struck work last night; and one of the first consequences is, that the express, which ought to have left at half-past seven, only started at ten p.m. The men who were to have driven the engines declined to do so. The strike appears to be general between London and Birmingham. Great inconvenience and confusion must be the result.

NAVAL AND MILITARY.

TROOPS FOR TURKEY.—The Golden Fleece left Southampton on Friday for Cork, to take in the 57th Regiment, to be conveyed to the seat of war in the East. The Golden Fleece has an immense quantity of stores on board, amongst which are shot, shells, and light field-pieces, suitable for flying artillery, with an immense quantity of horse-shoes and saddlery for Circassia. Also about 150 tons of bread and peas, and nearly 100 bales of sheeting. The Harbinger left Southampton on Thursday morning with Sir George Cathcart and staff. She carried out a heavy mail for the army and fleet in the East. Six more regiments of infantry and two of cavalry are about to be sent out to Turkey.

SWIVELS.—A circular of the French Minister of War to the principal officers in the navy notifies that the Council of Admiralty has decided unanimously on the suppression of swivel guns, the aim of which is very uncertain, but retains the blunderbuss, as calculated to render useful services in warfare, particularly in close combat.

FETE AT BALTHIC.—The Patrie says:—Lord George Paulet, one of the superior officers of the English fleet in the Black Sea, gave a splendid fête on board his ship, on July 28th. A sumptuous banquet, to which a number of French officers sat down, was followed by a dramatic entertainment, consisting of a comedy of Sheridan's and a Visit to Bedlam. This magnificent fête will leave souvenirs of the most unforgotten cordiality among the Anglo-French staff.

EVACUATION OF THE PRINCIPALITIES.

The Moniteur publishes the following:—The Russian envoy has announced to the cabinet of Vienna, that the Emperor Nicholas has just ordered the complete evacuation of the Principalities of Wallachia and of Moldavia. Notwithstanding this declaration, Count Buol exchanged notes with Baron Bourqueuey and Lord Westmoreland on the 8th inst., from which it results that Austria agrees with England as to the guarantees to be required from Russia, in order to preclude the return of the complications which have troubled the repose of Europe, and engages not to treat with Russia, unless she obtains these guarantees, until the re-establishment of general peace.

FATAL ACCIDENT TO THE KING OF SAXONY.

Munich, Thursday.

There is great excitement here. The carriage in which the King of Saxony was travelling from Munich to Dresden was upset near Brunnbrucherl, and the King killed on the spot. One of the horses is said to have kicked the King fatally.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

THURSDAY.—LONDON.—The Royal Assent was given by commission to various bills, among which were the Bribery Bill and the Common Law Procedure Bill.

The Russian Government Securities Bill, and several measures relating to the militia, were severally read a third time and passed.

Lord Campbell having referred to the difficulties which were thrown in the way of erecting a monument to the poet Campbell in Westminster Abbey, owing to the heavy fee (200l.) demanded by the Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral.

The Earl of Aberdeen suggested that it would be more advisable to try and raise the money by private subscription, rather than seek to obtain it by a public grant.

The Marquis of Clanricarde wished for some further information regarding the progress of the war, and the alliances and confederacies which had been entered into among the European powers in relation thereto.

He pointed out the neglect or incompetence of the functionaries intrusted with the management of different departments, or of the government generally. Among them he dwelt upon the inefficiency of the commissariat; the incompleteness of the dockyards in the White and Black Seas; and the want of gun-boats, of whose paramount importance in the operations in the Baltic he expressed his decided conviction.

Passing on to the diplomatic branch of the subject, Lord Clanricarde insisted on the propriety of laying before parliament the text of the treaty, concluded between Austria and Turkey. He inquired what guarantees existed that Austria would re-evacuate the Principalities which she was permitted to occupy; and pointed out that the Austrian army would be interposed between the belligerents, and able to retain a position of armed neutrality with the power, which it was much to be feared would be ultimately exercised, of changing that attitude for one of armed intervention.

The Earl of Clarendon explained that the delay in producing the Austro-Turkish treaty arose from some technical omission, which would shortly be repaired. Respecting the conduct of Austria, he felt assured now, as he has times past, that her hearty co-operation was secured to the Western Powers alike by her honour, her dignity, and her interest.

The anticipation of movement on her part had already occasioned the Russian armies to retreat, and the British ministry had learnt only two days previously that Prince Gortschakoff had received orders from the Czar to evacuate both the principalities. Austria had, no doubt, taken her own time, but the interests at stake on her part were very extensive, and the organization of her existing army of 300,000 men had presented gigantic difficulties. The Western Powers, on their side, had proceeded in perfect independence of the Vienna cabinet, and had not incurred an hour's delay in any military undertaking by waiting for Austria to settle or declare her course of action.

Lord Clarendon added that from notes lately interchanged between the British and Austrian governments, it appeared that the latter were equally determined with ourselves not to accept peace on the basis of the status quo ante. No peace would be considered honourable which did not secure the dignity and independence of the Ottoman Empire.

After a reply from the Marquis of Clanricarde the subject dropped. Their lordships adjourned at 10 minutes to 8.

COMMONS.—The Lord's amendments to several bills were considered and agreed to.

Some other business having been got through, the House adjourned at a quarter past six until three p.m. on Friday.

FRIDAY.—LONDON.—The Royal Assent was given to the following bills:—The Metropolitan Sewers; Literary and Scientific Institutions; Real Estate charges; Militia (Scotland); Prisoners' Removal; Episcopal and Capitular Estates Management, 1854; Militia, No. 2; Militia, Ireland; Militia Ballots Suspension; Militia Pay; Incumbered Estates West Indies; Bankruptcy; Schoolmasters' Scotland; Medical Graduates of London (University of London); Mayo County Advances; Legislative Council of Canada; and the Merchant Shipping Acts Repeal.

The Royal Commissioners were the Lord Chancellor, the Duke of Argyll, and the Marquis of Westminster.

The Lords then proceeded to wind up the mere routine of the session.

COMMONS.—A new writ was ordered to issue for the borough of Marylebone, in the room of Sir B. Hall, who had accepted office.

Several notices of motion were given for next session. Among others, Mr. T. Chambers declared his intention to introduce the subject of convicts and nunneries; Sir J. Pakington promised a motion respecting education; and Mr. Hume one for the quarterly payment of salaries in government offices.

The Lords' amendments to the Common Law Procedure Bill and the Russian Government Securities Bill were considered and agreed to.

The issue of the election writs for the five boroughs so long kept without representatives, on account of bribery and corrupt practices at the last general election, was moved seriatim by Sir W. Jolliffe.

The writ for Canterbury having been proposed.

Mr. T. Duncombe moved an amendment that provision should be made for enabling the electors to give their votes by ballot.

The amendment was negatived on division by 40 votes to 33; and the original motion for issuing the writ adopted on a second division by 45 votes to 32.

The writ for Cambridge was ordered to issue by a majority of 46 against 31; that for Maldon by 47 against 31; and that for Barnstaple also by 47 to 31.

The motion relative to the last borough, Kingston-upon-Hull, being proposed.

Mr. Hume asked whether, in the event of the Bribery Bill failing, Lord John Russell would promise to try the ballot.

Lord J. Russell declined to give any such undertaking. He promised, however, to renew next session his attempt to amend the law relating to corruptly elected electors.

The writ for Canterbury having been proposed, Sir F. Kelly gave notice for next session of his intention to bring forward a bill enabling electors to vote by means of written declarations.

A last division was taken, and the writ for Hull ordered by a majority of 50 to 39—20.

The House adjourned at twenty minutes to eight.

COVENTRY.—Late on Thursday evening a coroners' jury returned a verdict of wilful murder against Alice Livrick for the murder of a baby.

ADE'S REGISTERED CRICKET BELT.—This belt, which is advertised in "THE FIELD" of to-day, is highly spoken of by our leading cricketers. The plate, which certainly adorns it, bears the figures of a batsman and a bowler. Not only will veterans find the belt useful, but it is just suited for a prize for boys, even an emblem of distinction at school, when wickets are in the way.

THE BEER ACT.—On Sunday, the 13th inst., the new Act for Further Regulating the Sale of Beer and other Liquors on the Lord's-day (17th and 18th of Victoria, c. 79) will be enforced. By this act licensed victuallers, &c., are prohibited from opening their houses for the sale of beer, &c., between half-past 2 and 6 o'clock, and after 10 o'clock on Sunday. Christmas-day, Good Friday, and on a public fast or thanksgiving. Such places must not be open before 4 o'clock on the morning following. Houses of public resort are prohibited from being open for the sale of beer or spirits within the same hours. A penalty for every offence, and every repeated sale to be deemed an offence, is not to exceed 5l.

ROYAL NORTHERN YACHT CLUB.—A ballot for the under-noted candidates, will be held at 3, Moore Place, on Thursday the 17th current, at one o'clock:—Charles Tennant Dunlop, Esq., James F. Jamieson, Esq., William Stirling, Esq., William Bruce, Esq., and Jos. Henry Holdsworth, Esq., Glasgow.

RACING.

"On the green, green turf"

MR. EDITOR,—To-morrow, the 12th of August, will witness the opening of the season on the moors, and the closing of the session at Westminster. Fear of the younger members are ever expected to keep close to their parliamentary duty when once the course are fairly up; and we may soon hear of as much slaughter among the hinds as are have lately beheld of the bills nearer home. But as my business is with racing and not shooting—though the change of sport just now is especially tempting—I must turn towards the tents of the thorough-breds. We have had a multiplicity of races throughout the week, and there are as many, or more, to come during the next. All these minor affairs, however, serve as so many whets to the appetite for the feast preparing at York.

Your readers can have no reason to complain of the number of winners I selected for you. Long Barn, His Piper, St. Clair, Miami filly, Kemyside Hero, and Clitella are all on the right side. The seconds, too, muster about an equal quantity. But for the clever trick of Brother to Grey Tommy in the Berkshire Stakes, I should have anticipated the return list with Mischap first and Vingt-un second. I have no inclination, however, to go over all ground, and endeavour to explain why I ought to have been right, and how I appeared to be wrong; so let us turn towards Wolverhampton, and see what may be the upshot there. The three days' races are, as usual, ushered in by a Trial Stakes. This handicap has an entry of thirteen, Kolinnor heading the list with 8st 7lb. Should he show, he ought to win; but I doubt that he will run. Prime Minister, if in anything like his old form, must, at 8st, be truly dangerous. I am inclined, however, to place more confidence in last year's winner, Colot. Gileowat and Luby in Waking handy at the finish.

THE PRODUCE STAKES will, doubtless, go to St. Clair.

WOLVERHAMPTON STAKES.—Twenty-one acceptances. Ratuplan with 9st 4lb. His appearance at the post seems questionable. Of the top weights my preference is towards Julian Warrior and the half-bred Bourton. Old Alp can't growl at 6st 10lb. Knight Errant, I believe, has not been out this season; he is well in at 6st; but the distance may be too far for him. Of the young ones Newbold, Caliph, and Gamelad, perhaps, deserve more consideration. The race, I fancy, runs between Bourton, Alp, Newbold, and Gamelad; and I shall go for the steeple-chase.

COMMITTEE STAKES, with selling allowances. This little affair may be placed to the credit of Rose or Clitella.

TUESDAY, PATHHILL HANDICAP.—We are likely to have a smart field for this race. To my notion the lot from which the winner may spring is Robin Hood, Alonzo, Battery, and New Warrior.

CHILLINGTON STAKES, for two-year-olds; seventeen subscribers. This lot of youngsters, I suspect, will be found far inferior to that of last year. Mary, if not the actual winner, ought to be well up.

CLEVELAND CUP.—Defiance or Goorkah.

THE FREE HANDICAP.—Kemyside Hero or Liberty.

WEDNESDAY.—THE FOAL STAKES I must leave to Wire and Melale.

HOLYOAKE STAKES.—If Alonzo and Larloy cannot manage this between them, let me look to Pyrois or Silletto to furnish the winner.

STEWARDS' CUP.—A handicap of 3 sovs. each, with 25 added, by W. T. Copeland, Esq. Adelaide and the Game Chicken strike me as being well in. The Field-Marshal's victory may, however, keep the pony in the worthy donor's pocket.

EGGAM presents itself to notice on Tuesday and Wednesday.

KING JOHN STAKES.—This two-year-old race has an entry of sixteen; and it is just possible that Sancebox, Brother to Twinkle, and Woodon Wall may be the three first horses.

SURREY AND MIDDLESEX STAKES.—A poor acceptance of half a dozen; ten having paid forfeit. Sleeping Partner must rouse up, or the Muser will be certain to overtake him.

RENNYMEDE STAKES.—I am without the declarations of forfeit, and shall offer no opinion as to the result.

THE MAGNA CHARTA STAKES ought to be something like a certainty for Sancebox.

BARONS' STAKES.—The Despled or Brother to Twinkle.

Yours, TOBY PEERS.

Friday, 11th August, 1854.

IMPORTANT SALES OF BLOOD STOCK AT YORK.—During the York meeting, on Wednesday the 23rd, Messrs. Tattersall will bring to the hammer, the whole of the Easby Abbey (Mr. Jacques's) stud, numbering 41 lots, namely, ten yearlings, 12 fillies, and 19 brood mares, the latter covered by Birdcatcher, Mildew, Gameby and Loughbow. On Thursday, the second, annual sale of yearlings, bred by the Rawcliffe Joint Stock Stud Farm Company, will take place at the Padlocks, near York; there are 28 lots by the Flying Dutchman, Pyrrhus the First, Chanticleer, Melbourne, and other well-known stallions. On Friday a large portion of Mr. Meekam's racing stud will be offered for competition, including Sicily, Peggy, Evadne, and several others.

Hall's, c by Paragon out of Sner, 2 yrs.

BARNLEY RACES.—Owing to unavoidable circumstances, the races will not take place on the 21st and 22nd instants, as previously announced. Due notice will be given when the arrangements are complete.

ERRATUM.—The Stewards' Cup at Derwent Pool was won by Lieut. Duff, not Goldfinger, as reported in our last.

MIDDLEHAM.—Erycia left Spigot Lodge last week, to be put to the stud. A two-year-old colt by Faugh-a-Ballagh, out of Sister to Black Doctor's dam, and Glen Lee, a yearling colt by The Flying Dutchman, out of Fantastic (Hippolytus's dam), arrived there on Wednesday last.

The only English horses entered for the Emperor's Prize of 10,000 francs, at Chantilly, are Orestes and Ratanaplan. The remainder includes all the "cracks" of the French Turf.

Lord Goswag has purchased a yearling colt, The Prairie Birdcatcher (brother to Bird on the Wing), of Mr. Wright, of Richmond. The price is stated to be 500 sovs, with contingencies.

The correspondent who, last week, informed us of the change of quarters of Mr. J. Hewitt's horses, was in error as to their having gone into Win. Day's stables.

Humboldt and Border Chief were struck out of their engagements at Egham on Wednesday last, at 4 p.m.

Frank Butler is so far recovered in health that it is expected he will be able to reappear in the saddle at the approaching York Meeting.

Lord A. G. Lennox, Capt. H. Botham, and W. W. Burrell, Esq., have accepted the stewardship of Shoreham Races.

Mr. W. Lancaster has sold a chestnut gelding, by Perion, to the Emperor Napoleon.

Mr. C. Fenning has sold Michaelmas Maid to Mr. Mare, for 350 us.

MR. GREVILLE.—We are informed that it is the intention of Mr. Greville to give up his racing establishment, and to confine himself solely to breeding for the Turf. There will be an annual sale of the produce of his stud.

SPORTING MISCELLANEOUS.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA, July 1.—An extraordinary pedestrian feat was performed in San Francisco the other day. An Englishman of the name of Hughes walked 80 consecutive hours without resting one moment, on a plank 15 feet long by 3 feet wide, in a saloon. He completed the task on Sunday evening at 10 o'clock, and was dreadfully knocked up, but is now recovered. It was quite a disgusting sight to look at him towards the end of the task, swollen and stupefied as he was.

EXTRAORDINARY FEAT.—Mr. Coates, the London pedestrian, commenced on Thursday evening at the George Hotel, Tavistock-road, near Plymouth, to walk 1,000 quarter miles in 1,000 successive quarter hours. The match was made at the above house by a party of sporting gentlemen for £150, and as there is much interest and many bets pending the result, great particularity in appointing umpires has been attended to. Six gentlemen, concerned, have offered their services on that occasion, and that there may be no dispute hereafter, if accomplished, the grounds are thrown open to the public, free of admission, at all hours. This feat is considered more difficult than the great Barclay match, the pedestrian in this case having at one time but 15 minutes for rest, whereas Captain Barclay could obtain 1 hour and 30 minutes. Still, Coates feels confident, and has backed himself freely; but declares this to be his last public performance, being now in his 50th year, having followed this profession 21 years, during which time he has been honoured with the patronage of royalty both in England and France. To accomplish this feat, 10 days and 10 hours will be occupied day and night, he having to start by the ringing of a bell every 15 minutes in succession for the whole time.

SORE BACKS.—A correspondent at a distance writes as follows, which may prove serviceable to some of our readers:—"If your horse is troubled with a sore or galled back, rub white lead, softened to a paste with linseed oil, on the injured part, till the sore is completely covered. Some recommend for this purpose a solution of vitriol in water; but the former remedy is far preferable, and, on the whole, more certain to effect a cure. I have known bad galls entirely healed and cured by it in a few days. Wounds on any part of the animal, if not deep and of a serious character, are generally eased, and disposed to heal rapidly, by this application.—Northern Farmer.

CHARGE OF THE BEAR.—The mighty hunters and sportsmen of the plains may talk of the charge of a tiger or of a wild boar, and I dare say laugh at me for placing such a clumsy brute in comparison with them, and yet he beats them hollow in the quickness of his charge, and many people who have stood it will, doubtless, agree with me in thinking so. It must, however, be borne in mind that a man may shoot bears for years and never see a real downright charge. They will often make a rush at their pursuer, rising, as they close, upon their hind legs, and stretching out their fore paws to seize hold, but at times they will come as if shot out of a cannon; you see a mass of black fur, and before you can even turn it is upon you.—Himalayan Adventures.

PIGEON STORY.—Mr. Rood, of Buffalo, New York, says he threw a stick at a flock of pigeons flying over his head, and cut off a wing of one of them. The bird flew away with his other wing, and, for aught Mr. R. knows, is flying yet.

An experiment has just been successfully made of employing swallows to carry letters, as pigeons were used some years back. Six swallows, taken in their nests at Paris, were conveyed by railway to Vienna, and there let go with a small roll of paper, containing 1,510 words, under the wing of each. They were let go at a quarter after seven in the morning; two arrived at Paris a few minutes before one, one at a quarter-past two, one at four o'clock, and the other two did not make their appearance at all.

TURFIANA.

RIFLEMAN.—At the recent meeting at Brighton, Mr. Isaac Day was commissioned by Mr. Bond to offer 2,000 guineas and large contingencies for this very promising two-year-old, but the offer was refused.

IRISH TURFIANA.

Kilcock and Tuam are the two principal race meetings in Ireland during the ensuing week. The former takes place on Monday and Tuesday, and the latter on Wednesday and Thursday.

The Jenkinstown, Parka (County, Kilkenny) Races will come off on Tuesday and Wednesday, the 19th and 20th of September, under the stewardship of Arthur Kavanagh and George Bryan, Esqrs. Eight events, to which £300 will be added, form the bill of fare.

The Cahirciveen Races are advertised for the 26th and 27th of September. Over £100 of public money will be given away. A Regatta will take place on the Friday following.

The entire of the racing stud of the Earl of Caledon was sold in Armagh, on Thursday, the 10th inst., being the second day of the cattle show. The stud consisted of sixteen animals, including the well-known sire, Simoom, the Ugly Buck, Crescent, the Queen, Verbeba, &c. Prices and purchasers' names in our next.

CLAIMS OF THE REPRESENTATIVES OF THE PRESS AT RACE MEETINGS.—The Dublin Daily Express of Monday last, after quoting a strongly-worded complaint of Bell's Life against the committee of the Brighton Races for want of accommodation for the reporters, adds the following:—"A similar complaint might be also made by the members of the 'fourth estate' in this country, who, even on the Curragh, are unprovided with any kind of accommodation whatever. The representatives of the three Dublin morning journals, and the Irish correspondents of Bell's Life, the Sunday Times, the Field, &c., are up to the present without the slightest convenience for the transaction of their business at the first race-course in the kingdom, notwithstanding that to the press may be in a great measure attributed the fame and popularity which the meetings of the Curragh enjoy."

The marks appended to the above list denote an unusual circumstance, occasioned by the awkwardness of the young men and their game. The two first-named led close together at the Committee's-barge. Weedon's nose was level with his opponent's outrigger, and in the next dozen strokes they were so level as to make "a dead heat." Weedon, we learn, at the end, fainted.

RAILWAYS AND TELEGRAPHS.

SHREWSBURY AND BIRMINGHAM RAILWAY.—Traffic for week ending July 23, 1854, £923 1s. 10d.; corresponding period last year, £870 10s. 8d.

The Aquarian: an Unveiling of the Wonders of the Deep Sea. By PHILIP HENRY GOSSE, A.L.S., &c. London: John Van Nostrand.

The author of this pleasant book, who has already introduced himself to the public, through the medium of his "Rambles on the Devonshire Coast," presented to the Royal Zoological Society, in December, 1852, the result of his rambles, in the shape of a small collection of zoophytes and molluscs. These were placed in one of the tanks in the new fish-house, and formed the nucleus of the marine aquarium now exhibited in the gardens of the society. Mr. Gosse subsequently entered into an arrangement with the society to supply with marine inhabitants the other tanks which it was proposed to devote to this object, and, in the spring of last year, repaired to the coast of Dorset in fulfilment of his intention. He remained upon the coast during the months of May, June, and July; and in the course of that period upwards of 5,000 specimens of animals and plants passed through his hands. He has carefully noted and described the economy and habits of the curious creatures that came within his reach, and his work supplies many important facts and much information upon this peculiar branch of natural history, which have not been touched upon by preceding writers. The volume also contains an arranged chapter of directions for the construction, preparation, stocking, and maintenance of a marine aquarium. The plates, which are very beautiful specimens of art, are printed in colours from stone, by Messrs. Hanhart, and the book also contains some spirited engravings of scenery on the coast of Dorset, by Messrs. Whymper.

AMATEUR FISHING EXTRAORDINARY.—On Wednesday morning last, as three young gentlemen of this town, Messrs. Stevens, Pinwell, and Muckey, were enjoying a cruise under Plymouth Hoe, they were rather surprised to observe a large shoal of herrings resign their comparatively boundless liberty, by entering a pool on the west side of the public bathing-place. Appliances for their capture were immediately procured by Mr. Stevens, and their return being prevented, 32,000 very fine fish were taken in the short space of an hour and a half. The capture was attended with some slight personal inconvenience, which was amply compensated for by the sport occasioned.—Plymouth Mail.

Bits and Spurs.

THE MOUSTACHE.—We hear that all branches of the service are delighted with the new moustache memorandum; even the old pensioners of Chelsea College are taking the most energetic measures to get up their faded bristles.—United Service Gazette.

ROYAL CONDOLENCES.—Her Majesty wrote a letter of condolence to Prince El Khani Pasha previous to his leaving England, on the death of his father, the late Viceroy of Egypt.

THE HERO OF SILISTRIA.—He takes his last rest in the Christian burial-ground of Silistria. Colonel Grach has enclosed his grave with a railing, and marked it with a cross, and an inscription stating that Mr. Butler fought for and died in the defence of Silistria.

NEW YORK.—Some idea of the nature of the population of New York may be gathered from the circumstance that of the persons who died there in the third week in July—915 in number (183 of them by cholera)—only 572 were natives of the United States; 215 came from Ireland.

WHERE SPINNERS MOST ABUNDANT.—In the coal and iron districts of the country the spinners are proportionally few; in London they are numerous, as there is a demand for their services. Bath, Cheltenham, Brighton, and (in London) the districts of Kensington, St. George, Hanover-square, St. James, Westminster, Hampstead, Highbury, and the City of London, contain generally a great excess (40 per cent.) of spinners, who for various reasons and purposes are congregated in these localities. Bath and Cheltenham, two watering-places, are the only districts in England that have so many as 41 spinners in every 100 women, while this proportion is quite common in many counties of Scotland.—Census Report.

DOGS IN TRUCKS.—There has just been printed an act of parliament, under which dogs are not to draw trucks, carts, &c., in any part of the United Kingdom, after the 1st January next. The provisions now in force in the metropolitan district are extended.

THE NEW STAMP DUTIES.—The penny receipt stamps for bills and notes will not come into operation till the 10th October. It will be 1d. under 5l., and 2d. under 10l. and so on progressively.

A MODERATE LETTER.—The following letter is a perfect model in its way. We certainly hope it is an unique specimen:—"Dear Brother,—I've got one of the loquacious farms in the State, and have it nearly paid for. Crops are good, and prices never were better. We have had a glorious revival of religion in our church, and both our children (the Lord be praised) are converted. Father got to be rather an inebriate, and last week I took him to the poor-house.—Your affectionate brother."—New York Daily Times.

MARRIAGE IN THE ARMY AND NAVY.—The proportions in the service who are returned as married in every 100 of each class are 25 officers and 15 men in the army; 59 officers in the navy, and 21 seamen; while two officers in 100 and one man in 100 are widowers in the army, and one officer and one man in the navy. The proportion of bachelors in civil life is 31 in every 100 persons of the age of 20 and upwards. Among the officers of the age of 20 and upwards serving in the army, 71 in 100; among the men, 82 in 100; among the officers in the Royal Navy, 64 in 100; among the seamen, 69 in 100 are returned as bachelors.—Census Report.

A PRIEST'S PUNISH.—A priest of Padua has been imprisoned for exhorting his hearers from the pulpit to pray for the extinction of the three great curses of the country: the King's new ministry, the army of occupation, and the rain disease.

A reflective man will see in his very pathway illustrations, opportunities, and phenomena, for which it might once have seemed necessary to go far and to search widely. It is a fault in life, as great as obvious, that we are not, or feel not, how principles that we profess to obey, may be and are applied or violated in our common conduct. He who meditates a life of shining within him, as central suns, certain great fixed principles. In their light will he see the things of his life and of the world; his whole being will almost unconsciously become orderly and vivid, angelic and glorious, under the influence of those suns.

SECOND EDITION.

PROROGATION OF PARLIAMENT,

SATURDAY, AUGUST 12,

BY HER MAJESTY IN PERSON.

THE ROYAL SPEECH.

The Queen prorogued Parliament to-day in person, when the usual ceremonial both inside and outside of the Houses of Parliament was gone through. The following is the speech delivered by her Majesty:

MY LORDS AND GENTLEMEN,
I am enabled by the state of public business, to release you from a longer attendance in Parliament.

GENTLEMEN OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS,
In closing the session, it affords me great pleasure to express my sense of the zeal and energy you have shown in providing means for the vigorous prosecution of the war in which, notwithstanding my efforts to avert it, we are now engaged. This liberality in granting the supplies for the public service, demands my warmest thanks; and although I lament the increased burthens of my people, I fully recognise your wisdom in sacrificing considerations of present convenience, and in providing for the immediate exigencies of the war, without an addition being made to the permanent debt of the country.

MY LORDS AND GENTLEMEN,
In cordial co-operation with the Emperor of the French, my efforts will be directed to the effectual repression of that ambitious and aggressive spirit on the part of Russia, which has compelled us to take up arms in defence of an ally, and to secure the future tranquillity of Europe.

You will join with me in admiration of the courage and perseverance manifested by the troops of the Sultan in their defence of Silistria, and in the various military operations on the Danube.

The engrossing interest of matters connected with the progress of the war has prevented the due consideration of some of those subjects which, at the opening of the session, I had recommended to your attention; but I am happy to acknowledge the labour and diligence with which you have perfected various important measures, well calculated to prove of great public utility.

You have not only passed an Act for opening the Coasting Trade of the United Kingdom, and for removing the last legislative restriction upon the use of Foreign Vessels, but you have also revised and consolidated the whole statute law relating to Merchant Shipping.

The Act for establishing the direct control of the House of Commons over the charges incurred in the collection of the revenue, will give more complete effect to an important principle of the constitution, and will promote simplicity and regularity in our system of public account.

I rejoice to perceive that amendments in the administration of the law have continued to occupy your attention, and I anticipate great benefit from the improvements you have made in the forms of procedure in the superior courts of common law.

The means you have adopted for the better government of the University of Oxford, and the improvement of its constitution, I trust will tend greatly to increase the usefulness and to extend the renown of this great seminary of learning.

I have willingly given my assent to the measure you have passed for the prevention of bribery and of corrupt practices at elections; and I hope that it may prove effectual in the correction of an evil which, if unchecked, threatens to fix a deep stain upon our representative system.

It is my earnest desire that, on returning to your respective countries, you may preserve a spirit of union and concord. Deprived of the blessings of peace abroad, it is more than ever necessary that we should endeavour to confirm and increase the advantage of our internal situation; and it is with the greatest satisfaction that I regard the progress of active industry, and the general prosperity which happily prevails throughout the country.

Deeply sensible of these advantages, it is my humble prayer that we may continue to enjoy the favour of the Almighty; and that under his gracious protection we may be enabled to bring the present contest to a just and honourable termination.

AGRICULTURE.

PROSPECTS OF THE COMING HARVEST.—A weekly contemporary—the Gardener's Chronicle—publishes in its impression of Saturday last tabulated reports from its own correspondents in every county in England, as well as various parts of Ireland, Scotland, and Wales, of the prospects of the harvest in their respective districts. The following are the results of our own analysis of reports from 134 correspondents, spread over the forty English counties:—Wheat: Very good, excellent, average, 31; good, full average, full crop, &c., 49; average, pretty good, &c., 32; near average, 4; under average, thin, &c., 12; middling, doubtful, or various, 6. Totals—Favourable, 112; unfavourable, 12; neuter, 10. Barley: 127 reports resolve themselves into—Very good, over average, abundant, &c., 33; good, full average, full crop, &c., 40; average, pretty good, &c., 30; short, light, indifferent, &c., 12; various, irregular, &c., 12. Totals—Favourable, 103; unfavourable, 12; neuter, 12. Oats: 128 reports give—Excellent, over average, very good, &c., 25; good, full average, &c., 46; average, fair, pretty good, &c., 33; near average, tolerable, middling, various, &c., 11; under average, short, light, &c., 13. Totals—Favourable, 104; unfavourable, 13; neuter, 11. Partial inquiries made in the Irish, Scotch, and Welsh counties give similar favourable results.

COMMERCE.

THE TEA TRADE, Aug. 7.—The deliveries in London made up for the week are 573,225lb., being a decrease as compared with those of the previous week.

WARRA, July 23.—Where are our British merchants and our English enterprise? We have lately paid 3s. 6d. a pound for ham, 2s. a pound for bacon, 12. sterling for a flannel shirt, poisonous brandy for 6s. a bottle; bad wine for the same price; preserved meats double the London prices; a water bottle, 10s.; a white felt cap, 15s.; German saddles, 5l. (worth 25s.); bridles, 2l. (not worth 12s.); and so on. However money is plenty—neither officers nor men know what to do with it.

MARKETS.

MONEY MARKET.

MONDAY.—The English funds were firm, and, notwithstanding a fresh recovery in the corn market, closed at a slight improvement upon the advanced prices of Saturday. Consols for money opened at 92½ to 93, and there were afterwards buyers at 93. The final prices, however, were 92½ to 93 for money, and 93 to 93½ for the account. Bank Stock left off at 209 to 211; Reduced, 93½ to 94; Three-and-a-Quarter per Cents., 93½ to 94; Long Annuities, 4½; India Stock, 222 to 225; India Bonds, par to 4s. premium; Exchequer Bills, 1s. discount to 2s. premium; and Exchequer Bonds, 98½ to 99.

TUESDAY.—Consols for money opened at the quotation of Monday evening—namely, 92½ to 93; and after having ranged between 93 and 92½, they closed at 92½ to 93. For the account the final price was 92½. Bank Stock left off at 209½ to 211; Reduced, 92½ to 93; Three-and-a-Quarter per Cents., 93½ to 94; Long Annuities, 4½; India Stock, 223 to 225; India Bonds, par to 4s. prem.

WEDNESDAY.—The English funds opened at the quotations of Tuesday, but experienced a decline, from the continuance of an active demand for money. Consols were first quoted 92½ to 93, and the market being well supplied with stock, they receded to 92½, from which there was a partial reaction, the final prices being 92½ to 93 for money, and 92½ to 93 for the account. Bank Stock left off at 209 to 211; Reduced, 92½ to 93; Three-and-a-Quarter per Cents., 93½ to 94; India Stock, 224 to 228; India Bonds, par to 4s. premium; Exchequer Bills, 1s. discount to 2s. premium; and Exchequer Bonds, 98½ to 99.

THURSDAY.—Consols for money opened at 92½ to 93, and gradually improved to 93½ to 94, the final quotation. The next account is fixed for the 13th of September, and the last price for that period was 93½ to 94. Bank Stock closed at 208 to 210; Reduced, 93½ to 94; Three-and-a-Quarter per Cents., 93½ to 94; India Stock, 224 to 228; India Bonds, par to 4s. premium; Exchequer Bills, 1s. discount to 2s. premium; and Exchequer Bonds, 98½ to 99.

FRIDAY.—Consols for money, which left off Thursday evening at 93½ to 94, were first quoted 93½ to 94, and remained at that price, with the exception of a period when there were sellers at 93½, upon the close of business. For the account on the 13th of September the last official quotation was 93½, but after regular hours some transacted took place at a decline of an eighth. The announcement of a large arrival of Australian gold had likewise a favourable influence. Bank Stock closed at 209 to 210; Reduced, 93½ to 94; Three-and-a-Quarter per Cents., 93½ to 94; India Stock, 224 to 228; India Bonds, par to 4s. premium; Exchequer Bills, 1s. discount to 2s. premium; and Exchequer Bonds, 98½ to 99.

SATURDAY.—Consols, opened at 93½ to 94, went to 93½, dropped 93½ to 94. At noon, 93½ to 94.

SMITHFIELD.

FRIDAY.—We have an increased supply of beasts and a depressed trade at the deal markets; consequently the demand is not so active here to-day, and lower prices are submitted to. The supply of sheep and lambs is about as usual, but there are not so many wanted. Trade is very heavy, and it is only in few instances that late quotations are maintained. Calves are lower. From Germany and Holland there are 363 beasts, 900 sheep, and 550 calves; Spain, 39 beasts, 100 sheep; 350 beasts from the Northern and Midland, and 95 milch cows from the Home Counties. Per stone of 8lbs: Best Scots, Herefords, 4s. 8d. to 5s.; Best Short-horns, 4s. 6d. to 4s. 10d.; Second quality Beasts, 3s. to 4s. 2d.; Calves, 3s. 4d. to 4s. 8d.; Pigs, 3s. 4d. to 4s. 6d.; Best Durs. and Half-breeds, 4s. 8d. to 5s.; Best Long-shorn, 4s. 6d. to 1s. 8d.; Ewes and Shorn, 3s. 6d. to 4s.; Lambs, 4s. 10d. to 5s. 6d.—Beasts at market, 1,081; sheep and lambs, 13,350; calves, 754; pigs, 280.

COUNTRY CATTLE.

DONCASTER AUGUST FAIR.—This fair was much busier than usual. The number of horses exhibited was larger than has been seen at the corresponding fairs for many years past, but the number of superior animals for sale was very limited. There was a large attendance of dealers, and a considerable number of horses changed hands at advanced prices. The show of beasts and sheep was large, but the trade was slow, sellers demanding more than buyers were willing to give.

MARK LANE.

FRIDAY, Aug. 11.—There was scarcely any English wheat on sale this morning, and its value must be noted nominally the same as on Monday last. A retail sale was experienced for foreign wheat at that day's currency. Barley was in increased supply, and barely maintained former prices. Oats were in fair request, and unchanged in value. Beans and peas sold on much the same terms as earlier in the week. Arrivals into London from Aug. 7 to Aug. 11—English Wheat, 830 qrs.; Foreign ditto, 16,840 qrs.; English Barley, 50 qrs.; Irish ditto, 170 qrs.; Foreign ditto, 8,890 qrs.; English Oats, 840 qrs.; Irish ditto, 1,350 qrs.; Foreign ditto, 10,350 qrs.; English Malt, 250 qrs. Flour, 2,130 sacks, and 5,990 barrels. London Averages—Wheat, 65s.; Barley, 35s. 6d.; Oats, 27s. 5d.; Beans, 45s. 7d.; Peas, 45s. 11d.

COUNTRY GRAIN.

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 8.—Flour wheat and flour, owing to their extreme scarcity, brought the full rates of Tuesday last, being an advance of 4d. to 6d. per 70lbs. on the former, and 1s. to 1s. 6d. per barrel and sack on the latter article; middling land inferior descriptions, however, being more plentiful and not so much wanted, lost a portion of the late advance, and cannot be quoted above 2d. to 3d. per 70lbs. and 6d. to 1s. per barrel dearer. Oats and oatmeal, with a slow sale, barely supported the prices of Tuesday last, Barley, beans, and peas were quite neglected, and 2d. per 60lbs. and 2s. per quarter lower. Indian corn was in moderate request, at 1s. per quarter more money, 35s. per quarter being obtainable for prime yellow or white. We quote prime white wheals from 10s. to 10s. 3d. up to 10s. 6d. to 10s. 9d. per 70lbs. for extra; mixed and red, 9s. 3d. to 9s. 6d.; smutty Canadian, 8s. 9d. to 9s. 3d. per 70lbs.; Baltimore and Philadelphia flour, 32s. 6d. to 33s.; Western Canal, 31s. 6d. to 32s.; Ohio, 31s. 6d. to 35s. 6d. per barrel.

IRSWICK, Aug. 8.—As was to be expected, there was but little wheat at market. The millers showed more eagerness to take red qualities; that a much freer sale resulted, and prices must be called 4s. to 5s. per qr. higher than last week. Many reports of the growing crop having suffered, especially since the rain, from a light or mildew, were mentioned on the market, and samples exhibited, strongly indicating some disease to have more or less affected the quality of the grain. No spring corn at market. Red wheat, 58s. to 63s. per qr.; white ditto, 67s. to 70s.; barley, 35s.; beans, 46s.; peas, 46s. Averages for week ending Aug. 8, 1854:—Wheat, 374 qrs. and 5 bush, at 57s. 2d.; peas, 17 qrs. and 4 bush, at 45s. 7d.

HAY AND STRAW.

SMITHFIELD, Monday.—Meadow hay, 2l. 10s. to 4l. 15s.; clover hay, 3l. to 5l. 15s.; straw, 1l. 10s. to 2l. per load. There is a dull market.

WHITEHALL, Monday.—Meadow hay, 2l. 12s. to 4l. 15s.; clover hay, 3l. to 5l. 15s.; straw, 1l. 10s. to 2l. per load. The market is heavy.

PORTLAND, Monday.—Meadow hay, 2l. 15s. to 4l. 10s.; clover hay, 3l. to 5l. 15s.; straw, 1l. 10s. to 2l. 2s. per load. Market depressed.

New meadow hay, 70s. to 90s.; and new clover, 70s. to 95s.

HOP INTELLIGENCE.

BOROUGH, Aug. 7.—The accounts received from the hop plantations this morning, on the whole, are considered to be rather more favourable, and the duty is estimated at 55,000l.; still the plant is in a very precarious state, and, with unfavourable weather for the next six weeks, it is thought, may not produce half that amount. The market is firm, and foreign hops in bond bring from 25s. to 30s. per cwt. advanced on late prices.—Daily News.

TURF TALK.

"The chosen sport of a great and a free people."
OUR SAILOR KING.

THE hard-working and stalwart inhabitants of Wolverhampton and its subterraneous districts have had their annual holiday in the shape of three days' racing. The meeting may be pronounced as fairly up to the average mark, while no reasonable cause of complaint can be advanced against the quantity or quality of the sport. The Trial Stakes brought out more than a moiety of the nominations, a proof of the estimation in which the handicap was held, and afforded Gnicowar the opportunity of making a clever win by half a length. Michaelmas Maid, with the odds, and little Wells to boot, on her, finished an indifferent third. The winner started at 7 to 1. Prime Minister, no longer the same horse as of yore, brought up the extreme rear. No Minister ever suffered a more inglorious defeat. His resignation of the turf should at once be tendered, or his owner persuaded to find him a new name. The success of Newbold in the Wolverhampton Stakes proved a lift for Heapy in the approaching Great Ebor Handicap. Bounton sadly disappointed his friends; his running nowise justified the extensive support he received. The remembrance of Newbold's place for the Queen's guineas at Chester, where Bounton ran second to Rataplan, turned out a complete ignis fatuus for the backers of the steeplechaser. The Patchull Handicap brought out a good field, and the victory of Amalgamation was a slight turn of fortune in favour of the Tuppill stable. In the Chillington Stakes, several young ones made their first show; none of whom, however, are likely to create much stir in the racing world. The winner, Cossey, furnishes another instance of the general excellence of the Mellonius blood. The arch deceiver, Peggy, who has so often betrayed her admirers, and left them in the quagmire of despair, achieved a conquest when least expected, and won the Cleveland Cup at the odds of 6 to 1 against her in a field of four. Rataplan is evidently taking it easy till his "good time" shall come. Kennysido Hero added another little item to his recent gains by making free with the handicap that bore that name, and for which some hundred or two horses were originally weighted, though the issue was left to be decided by seven only Bessie must have lost much of her spring form, or she would never have allowed the Polo Star to be in the ascendant for the "Wrottesley," 5 to 1 was betted against the winner, while there were layers of 2 to 1 on the favourite. The victors, Amalgamation and Newbold, were bowled out by Lurley for the Holyoke Stakes, the filly receiving 11lb from one, and 14lb from the other. Sensible as was the difference of weight it enabled her only just to pull through. Amalgamation was subsequently backed for the "Ebor" at 12 to 1. On the whole Wolverhampton may be said to have terminated to the satisfaction of most parties; certainly to that of the fiddlers, who had a tolerably rosy time of it.

Egham was hardly itself this year, though the sport and attendance on Wednesday evinced a considerable improvement on the first day. Sleeping Partner was sufficiently wide-awake to keep his brace of opponents at a respectful distance, for the Surrey and Middlesex Stakes. Saucebox, weary, perhaps, of running second and third, contrived to score a couple of creditable successes to his owner's account. The Miami filly carried out the confidence of her backers, by bearing away the Barons' Stakes in a style that showed her superiority. She has achieved distinction, and is now certainly worthy of a name. Her dam's was that of the heroine in a still popular drama; and the nomenclature of the daughter might, without any violation of good taste, proceed from the same source. The Black Swan, running third for the Town Plate, won the Queen's guineas, an hour afterwards, with consummate ease—Winkfield and Banstead the only horses backed. This same Swan must be the veritable rara avis that we encountered in the Eton grammar during our schoolboy days.

The mystery of the St. Leger, instead of clearing off, appears to thicken. King Tom, long on the totter, has suddenly slipped into the shade, though we trust not irrevocably. But rumour will have it that the "leg" will not admit of his training. Acrobat, having been unceremoniously sent to 33 to 1 last week, is now in force at 12 to 1. Dervish remains much as before; and, if his friends be not over-warm, his opponents are certainly rather faint-hearted. Champagne is moving up from the outside division. It could hardly be expected that the great discrepancy in the market between him and his head-and-head antagonist, Scythian, should continue. So many horses about the same figure is a remarkable event. It looks, at the present moment, marvelously like 10 to 1 on the field. But, the mist may be dispelled in the coming week.

All attention is now directed to the York Meeting. The unusual dullness of speculation is exemplified by the fact that, though upwards of fifteen hundred sovereigns, public money, are added to the races, no event has been touched, save the Ebor Handicap. And even for this, but few horses have been backed. Heavy stands pre-eminence in public favour; and, looking to the Goodwood running, must, if recent, be very near winning. Tros, but half prepared for Sussex, may prove after all his most formidable opponent. Hermit is a good horse and much fancied, but it may be questionable whether he can concede 23lb to Lord Zetland's nag over a two-mile course.

John Scott will, in all probability, sweep off some of the best things of the week—the great Yorkshire Stakes being one of the most likely. Dervish and Acrobat are in the race, but we fancy the latter will be the champion of the stable. Both are also engaged in the North and South of England Biennial Stakes. This valuable prize was carried off last year by Marsyas, at Goodwood, who beat Dervish by three parts of a length; King Tom finishing a head from the latter. That Marsyas should again prove the victor is more than problematical. Genucius Esuriens is among the large entry of 108 for the Convivial Stakes, but his appearance, so eagerly looked for, may still be delayed. Should he, however, join the issue with Dirk Hatteraick, the contest will be watched with no little anxiety.

The different items of the attractive list proffered at this famous gathering will be noticed by our correspondent, Toby Peeps, and, in his endeavour to point out the winners, we trust that his usual success will attend him.

The other places that hold out promise of sport during the week, though York must unavoidably throw them into the shade, are Barnsley, Bridgewater, Ongar, Yarmouth, Hereford, and Canterbury—the fine old city being unusually gay at the present time.

A FAST HORSE.—Uncle Peter B., who flourished a few years ago among the mountains of Vermont, as an inveterate horse-dealer, was one day called upon by an amateur of the "equine" in search of "something fast." The result is told as follows in the Northern Gazette:—"There," said Uncle P., pointing to an animal in a meadow below the house, "there, sir, there is a mare yonder, who would trot her mile in two minutes and twenty seconds, were it not for one thing." "Indeed!" cried his companion. "Yes," continued Uncle Peter, "she is four years old this spring, is in good condition, looks well, and is a first-rate mare; and can go a mile in 2.20, were it not for one thing!" "Well, what is it?" was the query. "That mare," resumed the jockey, "is in every way a good piece of property. She has a heavy mane, switch tail, trots square and fair, and yet there is one thing only why she can't go a mile in 2.20." "What in the Old Harry is it then?" cried the amateur impatiently. "The distance is too great for the time," was the old wag's reply.

THE PRAIRIE ON FIRE.—Oh, how sublime, how awfully sublime this spectacle on which we rivet our fascinated eyes, while our hearts leap to our throats and our lips are compressed with an indescribable fear! Now listen to these apparently unearthly sounds. The prairie is alive with millions of voices, which fancy would give to the fiery tongues of this rushing monster, as the cheering song of his death-dealing advance, but which stern reality tells us are the frantic cries of droves and herds of wild animals of all species, mad with affright, all pressing forward together, pell-mell, to escape one common but over-conquering enemy. Look yonder, there goes a stampede of buffalo; yonder—another of wild horses. How they tear a-head, with foaming mouths, expanded nostrils, dilated eyes, and a tread that makes the very earth tremble beneath them. Look closer, nearer, how they come; above us, before us, behind us, beneath us, on all and every side, birds, beasts, reptiles, and insects. How they dart past us now, with lolling tongues, and fiery eyes, half starting from their sockets, entangling the very legs of our horses, and causing them to rear, and plunge, and snort, and shriek with appalling terror. Here come the wolves, and rabbits, and boars, and deer, and all the rest of the prairie fauna, all pressing forward together, pell-mell, to escape one common but over-conquering enemy. TATTERSALL'S.—MONDAY.

Several members having left town for Wolverhampton races, not a few for the moors and forests in Scotland, and some to pursue holiday recreations on the Continent, the attendance this afternoon was very scanty, and only a limited amount of business was transacted. Sufficient, however, was done to deprive King Tom of the lead for the St. Leger, and to place Dervish and the Trapper first and second; 6 to 1 was taken about each of the two, and 7 to 1 laid against the King—700 to 100 and 350 to 50 were the last bets booked against him. Even money to £200 was laid between the Trapper and Dervish. The investments outright in favour of Dervish exceeded £150; those on the Trapper were to a comparatively small sum. Scythian was backed for upwards of £100 at 10 to 1, and 16 and 15 to 1 were taken in ponies and tens about The Knight of St. George. Acrobat took a turn, and was again in force—2,000 to 120 was booked in one bet; other transactions at 15 and 16 to 1 were also jotted down.

Great Ebor Handicap.—In the early part of the afternoon 7 to 1 was laid agst Heapy to £135, but after it was made known that Newbold had won the Wolverhampton Stakes, comparisons were instituted with regard to the running for the Goodwood Stakes, and Heapy, in the course of a few minutes, rose amazingly in estimation; towards the conclusion of business 5 to 2 was taken in hundreds.

Nothing else occurred worthy of particular comment.

At first 5 to 2 was offered on the field; 100 to 35 was then tried, and for a short time it succeeded. The next "strike" was for 100 to 30. At last 4 to 1 was laid in ponies, fillies, and hundreds; some of the takers, however, being desirous of "going on" to a heavy amount, a stand was made, and the layers in turn fell back. Meanwhile, various sums were invested on the Grand Inquisitor, at prices ranging from 500 to 20 to 13 to 1. 10 to 1 would have been taken to some money about Tros, and 12 to 1 in ponies was booked quietly about Kingdon.

MANCHESTER.—TUESDAY.

A very thin attendance at the room this morning, the principal part having gone to Wolverhampton, being a favourite resort for them from this quarter. The only change of importance since our last being the advancement of Heapy for the Ebor Handicap from 7 to 1 to 5 to 2; for the St. Leger we have no change worthy of notice.

SPORTING MISCELLANEOUS.

The Devon and Somerset Stag Hounds will meet on Tuesday, the 22nd, at Simonsbath, and on Friday, the 25th, at Whitestones, each day at half-past ten o'clock.

SPORTING AT THE PRESENT PERIOD.—At the present period the number of fox-hunting establishments kept up in England and Wales amounts to ninety-six; there may be a few more, but they are unimportant ones. To show the increase, in 1830, sixty-eight packs of hounds were compounded for; in 1850, eighty-four, according to the returns of assessed taxes. Some of these are maintained with princely magnificence, at an expense not under £3,500 or £4,000 per annum.

The average may be estimated at £1,400 a year, which makes a total of £126,000 circulated through the medium of hounds and horses.

FATAL ACCIDENT AT THE NORTH STAFFORDSHIRE RACES.—A lamentable accident occurred on the course on Tuesday. At one of the booths a stand was erected, which was elevated about nine feet at the front, and rising to something like fourteen feet at the back. As the horses were preparing to run for the first stake, a number of persons—it is said more than in any other stand excepting the grand stand—had taken their places, when a slight vibration was felt, and in a moment the gallery and its occupants fell in mass into the compartments below, where a number of persons were drinking. The scene was instantly one of indescribable confusion, and screams and groans rent the air. It was soon apparent that the casualty was a very serious one, a man and a woman being taken out of the ruins quite dead, and a number of other persons who were more or less injured were got from amongst the debris as speedily as possible. — Staffordshire Advertiser.

Said Pasha, to mark his advent to the Government of Egypt, has abolished the town or octroi duties on wheat and flour; but this measure would be much improved were the duty taken off all eatables entering the town, such as vegetables, fruit, &c., as thus far a duty of about a third of their value has been levied on all these articles, and this weighs very heavily on the poorer classes. The late Abbas Pasha's property will be divided between his son and daughter, and, besides the large tracts of land and the numerous palaces he has left to them, there are 1,200 horses, some of the purest Arab breed, and about 600 dogs, collected from all parts of the world, many of them at an enormous cost.

GROUSE SHOOTING.—We are informed that the Bradfield and the Derbyshire moors are quite alive with grouse, and excellent sport is anticipated. Sheffield can boast of some as good shots as any there are in this part of the country, and we expect to hear of their making enormous bags. — Sheffield Economist.

THE MOORS.—We learn that the weather, on the 12th of August, was very unfavourable for sportsmen, and the only good bag that has at present reached us was Mr. Wynne Williams' and the Hon. Mr. Mostyn's, M.P., who killed upwards of 90 brace on the Glen Tulchemoors. The Duke of Athol's other hounds had some excellent sport last week on the Spey, near Grantown. The Dunfermline Courier, speaking of the 12th, says, "In consequence of the rain some sportsmen never went upon the ground at all, and the more ardent, who threaded the moors in defiance of the elements, met with but slight reward in exchange for a thorough wetting. In one or two instances we have heard of seven or eight brace having been bagged, but a single brace or a single bird were more common."

WESTBURY.—On the 5th inst., the keeper of H. G. G. Ludlow, Esq., rose a fine woodcock in the preserves near Heywood House, a most singular circumstance at this period of the year. This cock was also seen about a week before by another party.

CAPTURED AT LAST.—In 1851 an account was published of the whale-ship Ann Alexander, Captain Debois, of New Bedford, being attacked and stove by a sperm whale. The whale was coming at the rate of fifteen miles an hour and the ship going about five at the time of the collision. The whale came with full force against the ship's bow, and stove in several feet square, almost instantly sinking the vessel, and hardly giving those on board an opportunity to escape. The Honolulu Friend, of May 8, states that about five months subsequent to the catastrophe the same whale was taken by the Rebecca Sims, of New Bedford. Two harpoons were discovered in him, marked "Ann Alexander." The whale's head was found seriously injured, and contained pieces of the ship's timbers. He had lost his wildness and ferocity, being much diseased; but, upon being taken, yielded seventy or eighty barrels of oil.

THE TWELFTH OF AUGUST.

THE MOORS AND THE GROUSE.

[From the Bunfesshire Journal.]

Saturday last, the 12th of August, opened auspiciously. At midnight there had been a heavy fall of rain, but before dawn a slight breeze sprung up, and in most cases the day continued fine throughout. All accounts agree in reporting the game as plentiful, though in many cases wild and strong. As will be seen from the following reports, our sportsmen have had fair success. We arrange in counties the reports we have from our correspondents in the various districts of the north:—

BANFFSHIRE.

At the Glenfiddich and Blackwater shootings in this county, belonging to the Duke of Richmond, his grace and party had excellent sport. At Glenfiddich, the noble duke, who was only out a couple of hours, had ten and a half brace grouse. The Earl of March killed with his own gun sixty brace. Lord Hill and Lord George Gordon Lennox bagged between them ninety-three brace. At the Blackwater shootings, General Sir E. Rowater had twenty-nine and a half brace; Colonel Jeld, who was only out two hours, had nine brace grouse and one plover; and Mr. Cox bagged fifty-one brace.

On the Aultmore shootings, in the western district of the county, Captain Fendall and party were very successful, killing thirty-seven brace of grouse and three pair hares. On the Fife-Keith shootings, Charles Wharmston, Esq., and party were not out till a late period of the day, when they killed twelve and a half brace grouse, and two leverets.

On the Benrinnes-hills, in the upper district of the county, the Messrs. Grant and party (consisting of Mr. Warren, London, and Mr. Grant, Shenval) bagged to four guns fifty-one brace and two hares in about four hours' shooting. This is one brace more than what was killed same day last year. William Grant, Esq., of Curran, accompanied by Captain Leitch, bagged to two guns thirty-one and a half brace in about four hours' shooting. This sportswoman (Mr. Grant) succeeded the same day in capturing a splendid salmon. This is also similar to his successful day last year, which was "sixteen brace in about three-and-a-half hours to one gun." On the Mortlach-hills, Upton Slack, Esq., bagged to two guns forty-five brace in about five hours. At Wester Kliehes, Mr. Parks killed thirty brace. Our correspondent adds, "The birds are all healthy, and well grown, and not a 'cheeper' to be seen. A high wind which prevailed during the greater part of the day, placed the sportsmen at some disadvantage."

On the Glenrivers-moors, Mr. Smith, Minmore, and party had also excellent sport, killing thirty brace before twelve o'clock noon—the birds being reported strong and wild, but quite healthy.

On the Glenmarkie-moors, the gentlemen shooting there, W. T. Riley, Esq., Dr. McWilliam, J. C. Lymon, and Edward Lewis, found the birds very numerous and strong, more so than for several years past—being fully a fortnight earlier than usual for the 12th. The coverts were large, and in many instances packed, and owing to these circumstances, and the previous night's rain and high winds, the sport was not so good as anticipated. The sportsmen, however, had little ground for complaint, for, in the course of not a long beating of the hills, they bagged 132½ brace grouse, five hares, two brace snipe, and three plovers.

On the Blairfinny shooting in Glenlivet, the Messrs. Callwell had excellent sport. Mr. W. Callwell killed, in six hours, forty-one brace and one hare—nineteen brace being brought down in the first hour. Mr. Henry Callwell, in seven hours, killed sixty-two brace and three hares. The party at Ballindalloch were out on the Morange-hill in the afternoon, and in a few hours killed thirty-five brace to one gun. The day is described as pleasant, and the birds plentiful, but very strong.

Nor were the Strathavon sportsmen less fortunate. The Langanahill shootings are about the best in the country, and this year they did not belie their character. The weather there was, however, somewhat unfavourable. "The morning," says our correspondent, "opened rather unfavourably, and in the early part of the day there were several heavy showers. Towards forenoon, however, the weather cleared up, and throughout the remainder of the day it was dry, but rather windy." In spite of these disadvantages, the party made good bags, some of them the heaviest we have to record. Lord Henry Bentinck had eighty brace grouse the Rev John King had seventy-five brace; and James Hall, Esq., fifty-eight and a half brace. Mr. Walker, at Delnabodge, in Strathavon, had also good sport, killing not less than seventy brace. The whole of the gentlemen in this quarter would have had larger bags, but for the somewhat unfavourable character of the day.

ABERDEENSHIRE.

In the upper districts of the Dee and Don, the weather had been for some days unsettled and rainy, but the 12th opened clear and pretty calm. As in other districts, the birds are reported as strong, and in general pretty numerous, but congregating in rather large flocks for the opening of the season. In some quarters disease, from the drought of the early part of the season, has in a slight degree thinned the birds a little, but still there is in general every appearance of good sport and plenty of game for the season.

At the Bleack shootings, Lord Cochran, who, however, was only out in the latter part of the day, bagged ten and a half brace. On the Skellater shootings, Mr. Grant, of Monymusk, killed forty and a half brace; Mr. A. Grant had thirty-eight brace, and Mr. L. Iveson thirty-three brace. At the Forbes-lodge shootings, George Forbes, Esq., bagged forty-five and a half brace grouse, two hares, and one rabbit. Sir Charles Forbes, Bart., of Newe, not having arrived from London, his gamekeeper was out in the afternoon, and bagged twelve brace of grouse and three hares.

His Grace the Duke of Buckingham, at Glenbucket-lodge, Captain Brooks, at Candernagh-house, and Sir Alexander Leith, at Glenkindy, and party, had all good sport. Sir Joseph Radcliffe, who has the shootings of Edinburg, in Strathdon, and other gentlemen, have not yet arrived in the north.

MORAY AND INVERNESS.

In the upper districts some good sport was enjoyed. In the district of Advie some heavy bags were made, for on Saturday five, and on Sunday twenty-six, boxes of grouse were sent south per mail from Advie.

In Abernethy and Badenoch the morning of the 12th dawned very auspiciously, with a heavy sky and a pretty fresh breeze of wind; but, towards noon, the sky became very cloudy, and several heavy showers of rain fell during the afternoon. Late in the afternoon (says our correspondent) the wind rose to a pitch that on high ground prevented the success from being what otherwise might have been expected. The birds were universally wild and strong on the wing, and in many instances several coveys had joined together, and flocks numbering forty and fifty birds might occasionally be seen. The following is the result of the day's operations on the several moors in this district:—At the Doune of Rothiemurchus, Lord Francis Russell shot fifteen brace of grouse and four mountain hares. R. M. O. Massey, Esq., Kilmara, killed twelve brace; Mr. Sheriff, twenty-six brace; and Mr. Alexander, twenty-eight brace. On the Avimore-moor, A. K. George, Esq., between twelve o'clock and six p.m., killed upwards of twenty brace, and another gentleman, on the same moor, eighteen and a half brace. On the Carr Bridge-moor excellent sport was got. Sir H. Wilnot, Bart., bagged forty-two brace, one snipe, and three hares; Mr. T. Bass, Esq., M.P., thirty-one and a half brace grouse, two snipes, one woodcock, and three hares; L. Hall, Esq., thirty-five and a half brace grouse, one woodcock, and four hares. L. W. Hurrell, Esq., had eighty-one brace grouse and five hares; and Mr. Philip, forty-eight and a half brace.

From Inverness our correspondent writes:—"Inverness has been very gay during the last week with the numerous parties passing through en route for shooting quarters. The shooting season has opened very auspiciously. The 12th was all that the sportsman could desire as regards the weather; and although we cannot give particulars of the success of individuals, the general report from all directions is, that the birds were in capital condition, and the sport abundant. During the day the dealers in game in town were well supplied, and towards evening great numbers of boxes poured in to be despatched to distant quarters."

ROSS-SHIRE.

From Ross-shire, our correspondent writes late on Saturday night as follows:—"The moors in this county this year, give every encouragement to sportsmen, with the exception that the birds are rather too strong. The young birds are at least ten days earlier than last year, and, after a few days' rain, they will try even some of the crack shots to fill the bag. But there is an uncommonly fine show of birds. The coveys are not so large as might have been expected with so favourable a season; but we have not seen as much as one barren bird, and no appearance of disease whatever throughout the whole season. A far greater number of sportsmen have come north this year than usual, a circumstance no doubt owing to the favourable proceedings of last season. So far as we can learn, there is not a single moor that has not been let, and at advanced rents, while more shootings are eagerly sought for.

Not a few very good bags were made on the 12th. C. Rentin, Esq., in Glengorrie, bagged fifty-eight brace grouse, two snipes, five hares. Mr. Fisher killed twenty brace grouse and two hares. Wm. Carr, Esq., Cannon-house, had by one o'clock brought down twenty-five brace grouse and four hares. Mr. Batson, Castle Leod, had thirty-five brace grouse and seven hares. The Master of Lovat and Sir Piers Moystyn, on the Beaufort shootings, bagged sixty brace grouse, besides other game. It is reported that the Marquis of Bath and party have had extraordinary good sport in Strathconnon forest. We may add that the marquis pays the handsome sum of £1,200 for the shootings of Strathconnon, the property of Mr. Balfour.

AN ALPINE BEAR.—The Gazette de Savoie relates the following somewhat singular adventure, which is said to have taken place in the commune of Villard (Upper Savoy):—"Two shepherds, who had charge of a drove of heifers, had just laid out their provisions on the ground in order to take their meal, when they were suddenly pounced upon by a large bear, who, after having devoured all the provender he found, threw himself on one of the shepherds and began to tear his clothes to pieces. While the bear was thus occupied, the heifers, eighty in number, formed into a semi-circle, and making a regular charge upon the intruder drove him from the ground and released their keeper from certain death. The other man had taken to flight at the first appearance of Bruin, and having climbed a tree, witnessed the whole affair in safety."

COST OF THE CENSUS.—The expense incurred in taking the Census of Great Britain in 1851 was £125,457, or not quite 1½d. per head.

ROYAL YACHT SQUADRON REGATTA.

COWES, Tuesday.—The Royal Yacht Squadron regatta commenced this morning. The town up to nine o'clock was very fine, but shortly afterwards the sun became obscured, dark clouds were visible around, soon to be accompanied by copious showers of rain and gusts of wind. At fifty-seven minutes past nine the preparatory gun was fired for the vessels intending to start for his Royal Highness Prince Albert's Cup, of 100 guineas, for cutters and yawls belonging to the Royal Yacht Squadron. The following were entered:—

Yachts.	Tons.	Owners.
Arrow	102	Mr. T. Chamberlayne.
Julia	111	Mr. W. Peareth.
Osprey	59	Lieut.-Col. Huey.
Aurora	60	Mr. LeMarchant Thomas.

The course was what is commonly known here as the Queen's Cup Course, viz., from a vessel moored off West Cowes Castle, proceeding thence round the Nab Light back to Cowes, and then to the westward to a boat bearing Dutch colours moored off Yarmouth, and back to the starting point at Cowes, being a course of about forty-five miles in extent. At 10h. 2m., all being in readiness, the starting gun was fired, when Arrow was the first to get away, followed closely by Julia, and in her wake Osprey, Aurora being astern. The wind at starting was blowing fresh from the W.S.W., squally, and with rain.

On the way down to the Nab Light, Osprey obtained the lead, and rounded it slightly in advance of Arrow, but on the return, in consequence of Osprey going about and making a tack towards Appleby, she lost the advantage and took the second place and on arriving off the No-man buoy the yachts were timed as under:—

Yachts.	Time.
Arrow	11 48 0
Osprey	11 48 50
Julia	11 51 0
Aurora	11 53 0

After having passed this point, Osprey seemed to have lost her position, for soon she was compelled to give up her second place to Julia, that was close on her quarter, which was the order in which they passed Cowes Castle. From the Nab Light, the course was dead against the wind, but the "old Arrow" still maintained the leading place, gaining upon Julia throughout, and of coming abreast of West Cowes Castle, they were timed as follows:—

Yachts.	Time.
Arrow	12 52 0
Julia	1 1 0
Osprey	1 3 0
Aurora	1 15 45

The course from this point was to Yarmouth, direct in the wind's eye. The Arrow was the first to round the mark-boat at this extreme point of the course, leading the Julia by but two minutes only; but scarcely had the Osprey rounded when an accident of a most melancholy nature happened, the knowledge of which in Cowes has tended to throw a gloom over the whole proceedings. As soon as the Osprey had got round the boat, preparations were immediately made for setting her gaff topsail, as her course was then direct before the wind; but in consequence of a difficulty in setting it, a man was sent aloft to "shake out the wrinkles," when, by some mistake, he let go his hold, and was precipitated head foremost into the sea. As may be supposed, a general alarm prevailed, the vessel was immediately put about, and Aurora, that was near at the time, also rendered assistance, and as the man could not swim, no time was lost in getting out the boats; but unhappily they could not reach him until he had sunk to rise no more. The utmost endeavours were made to find him, but without effect, and both vessels returned to Cowes at a late hour. The poor fellow's fate is deeply lamented, for although unmarried and without family, it is stated that he was the sole support of an aged mother at Southampton. The course by the "Arrow" was performed on the return to Cowes in a most rapid manner, arriving at the winning-post as under:—

Yachts.	Time.
Julia	3 50

The others were not timed. From this statement, it will be seen that the entire run was made by the Arrow in little more than five hours, over a course of nearly fifty miles. Thus the Arrow has once more proved the victor, having carried off three cups within the short space of a week—namely, at Southampton, Ryde, and Cowes. As a cutter yacht she stands without a rival, and most truly does Mr. Chamberlayne deserve the honours conferred upon him, not only as a member of the Royal Yacht Squadron, but from the steady support he gives to yachting amusements in all parts of the kingdom. Her victory over the America schooner, too, is not the least distinguishing feature in the career of the Arrow, and although she is commonly known as the "old one," yet she is still a match for all comers. On Thursday her Majesty's Cup was contended for by schooners of the squadron, of 140 tons and upwards, the course being the same as that for his Royal Highness Prince Albert's Cup. The following vessels entered for it:—

Yachts.	Tons.	Owners.
Alarm	248	Joseph Weld.
Shark	150	William Curbing.
Titania	181	Robert Stephenson.
Guevera	142	Sir Percy B. Shelley.

LONDON MODEL YACHT CLUB.

Third Class Sailing Match on the Serpentine River, Monday, August 21st, 1854, at Two o'clock p.m.

SAILING DIRECTIONS. Indicated by the flags used in Marryat's Code, and in Acker's.—A Red Flag (swallow-tail) will be hoisted in the umpire's boat at a quarter before two o'clock, when each yacht for the first heat must be at her station, and also her sailing-master, or the heat will be sailed without her. Yachts for the second and third heats at the same time to be drawn out of the water. The flag will be "dipped" as signal for starting. A Square Red Flag hoisted denotes a "foul," when all possible despatch must be used to get again to the stations. A White and Red Flag for second heat must be attended to in the same manner as the one above stated for first heat. Yachts not engaged in the heat to be taken out of the water. A plain red flag for "fouling" as before. A Red, White, and Blue Flag for third heat, must be attended to as quickly as possible. Yachts not engaged in the heat to be drawn out of the water. A plain red flag for "fouling." A Chequered Flag (Blue and White) for the fourth heat, must be attended to as quickly as possible. Yachts not engaged in the heat to be drawn out of the water. A Quarter Yellow and Blue Flag for the fourth heat. All other yachts to be now out of the water. The plain red flag for "fouling." First yacht in of the fourth heat to sail in grand heat. A board over and back will now be allowed to the competing yachts only for the grand heat, when it is particularly requested that no other yacht may be started to give the chance of fouling, and consequently depriving any one yacht of the benefit of such board. A quarter of an hour's rest, if demanded by a majority of the grand heat competitors. The chequered flag (blue and white) will be hoisted for grand heat, when, should a "foul" occur, the flag for the final start will be hoisted again in a few minutes, no intermediate sailing being permitted.

The two prizes offered on the 4th were a gold seal for models not exceeding three feet in length, and a silver cup for the longer ones. be entered with the secretary, on board the club yacht, Orion, at latest by seven o'clock the evening before the race for which they enter takes place.

PENZANCE REGATTA.—This nautical affair, says the Cornwall Gazette, came off on Wednesday. The weather was fine, and it attracted in the course of the day a vast number of persons. There was a gentle breeze, but not sufficient for the lug-sail fishing-boats, which sail best and are seen to best advantage when there is half a gale of wind. It was a pleasing sight to see a good number of these larked-sail boats setting out from the sea, approaching the esplanade on the Western-green, just opposite the bathing establishment. The committee ship was moored there, so that there were three divisions of spectators, many on the Quay, others on the battery rocks, and the rest on the esplanade. Early in the afternoon the quay and battery were almost deserted, and the esplanade became the scene of attraction. The coast from Laviggan-bridge to Sandy-bank was crowded like a fair, there being bands of music, show-booths, firing-tables, fruit-sellers, and all the accoutrements of a fair. The secretary and committee, with their friends, met at a late dinner at the Dolphin tavern, on the quay, and spent a pleasant evening. The following were the awards of prizes:—Fishing boats, not exceeding 30 feet keel: 1st, Why-not, James Bond, Newlyn; 2nd, Kate, Nicholas James, Newlyn; 3rd, Nonpareil, Thomas James, Newlyn. 15-foot sailing boats, amateurs: 1st, Electric Flush; 2nd, Fly, Thomas Edmonds. 6-oared gigs, amateurs, (no skiffs) one prize: Ranger, Mr. W. D. Matthews. 19-foot sailing boats: 1st, Ocean Queen, Mr. W. Nicholas; 2nd and 3rd withheld. 4-oared gigs (youths under seventeen years of age): not contended for. 16-foot sailing boats: 1st, Wasp, Edward Nicholls; 2nd, Lion, — Thomas; 3rd, Fly, Thomas Edmonds. 2-oared boats, amateurs: not contended for. 4-oared gigs, amateurs, one prize: Wave, Mr. John Nicholas. 6-oared gigs (free for all England): 1st, Fly, Thomas Ford; 2nd, not given, only one boat starting. Punts, one prize: Topsy, Mr. Frederick Curnow. Gig and punt chase: Fly, Thomas Ford. 4-oared skiffs, amateurs: not contended for; only two entered.

POOLE REGATTA.—The subscriptions received during the past week towards the annual regatta have exceeded the expectations of its best friends, and the committee have fixed the sport for two days, viz., the 29th and 30th inst. On the latter day a sailing-match for schooner-yachts will take place outside the harbour; the first day the sport will be confined within its limits.

MEDWAY YACHT CLUB.—The first regatta under the auspices of this club is announced to take place on Monday, the 4th September. The classes, we understand, will be eight to fifteen tons for yachts, with time for tonnage, and open to all clubs. The Julia, Prince of Wales, Ides, and a dozen other yachts of the P. W. Y. C., will certainly be present. The Commodore, with his usual liberality, subscribes ten guineas. Thomas Bartlett, Esq., of Holly-hill, Erith, and several other yachtsmen, have also expressed their intention of supporting the regatta, and we feel well-assured that the inhabitants of Rochester and Chatham will require no persuasion to come forward liberally on the occasion. The yachts already entered are Albatross, Julia, Prince of Wales, Mosquito, Gnat, Blue-eyed Maid, and Alicia.—The regatta will be reported in THE FIELD.

THE LILLEY CLUB.—A very interesting meeting took place at the Nell Gwynne, on Wednesday evening, when the new book-case presented by the respected president was found in its allotted place in the club-room, and several volumes were presented by members, chiefly of a naval nature. It was carried unanimously that the return visit to the president take place at Limehouse, on Tuesday week, the 29th inst., at the Artichoke, if that evening prove convenient to the chairman. Members intending to be present will be so good as to leave their names at THE FIELD Office, that all may travel thither together.

"We shall feel obliged by the Secretaries of "Rowing Clubs," and others, forwarding their Appointments of Matches or Notices of Meetings to come, at their early convenience."

PISCATORIAL PROLUSIONS.

BY THE HAMPSTEAD FLY-FISHER.

FISH-PRESERVING

I was fishing some ten days back near Alford, by the permission of a kind friend, to whom I can never be sufficiently grateful, and found my sport very much embarrassed by the quantity of weeds with which the river was overgrown; and not only so, but the fish themselves seemed very backward in comparison with the advanced state of the season. And this was particularly evident in those spots where the weeds were thickest. The object of encouraging the growth of these water-plants was, I understood, to protect the fish from marauding poachers. I question, however, whether, to use a French phrase, "Le jeu vaut la chandelle," or rather, indeed, whether any advantage gained in this respect is not more than counterbalanced by other and inseparable inconveniences. It is true, indeed, that the use of drag-nets is thereby rendered almost impracticable. But they would not afford the same security against hoop-nets or shoe-nets, which, I believe, are the most commonly used by poachers, while, on the other hand, they afford facilities to the still more destructive ticklers. At all events, if it be desirable to guard against the use of drag-nets by these natural protectors, the purpose would be equally served by leaving the weeds uncut in parts, and cleansing the channel in other places, and thus giving the fish the opportunity of gaining that brightness of colour and firmness of flesh which indicate their perfect condition, and which can only be had in perfection in clear and open water. While making these observations, I was led into thought on the complaint so generally made of the decrease of fish in England generally. I speak not indeed now so much of the salmon as of trout. That wretched spirit of envidia which destroys the goose for the sake of the golden egg has indeed so persecuted the monarch of English rivers with weirs, canals, and all sorts of engines of destruction, that the only wonder is that so many yet survive. But with trout it would seem to be otherwise, and yet it is notorious to every fisherman that the produce of the rivers in England has for some years past gradually diminished, and that too in despite of strenuous, but I fear, in many instances, ill-directed endeavours to check the growing evil. Some streams, indeed, which used to be famous for their trout, have become almost barren. Thus, the little river Hemore, in Derbyshire, which, in the days of Cotton attracted the attention of the stranger as a pretty river, having in it both trout and grayling, is now, according to Ephraim Ede, in a note to his late edition of "The Complete Angler," a mere brook, called Shoe Brook, without a trout or grayling in it—a mere ditch of running water, in which the little boys of Ashbourne commence their angling career by fishing for minnows. In an early number, too, of "THE FIELD" (Feb. 26, 1853), a correspondent, "D. G.," pathetically laments the state of Dollice Brook, some forty years back a favourite resort of London anglers. The Brent, too, has experienced a similar fate; and, in fact, there is scarcely any brother of the anglo who has seen thirty summers pass over his head, but can recall some spot, the scene of his boyish amusements, the waters of which have become tenanted, if they have not ceased to exist. Now, no doubt a great deal of this is to be attributed to other causes than the ravages of poachers. It is a sad truth, that the works of man are strangely destructive of the nobler works of God; and civilization, with its train of manufactures, arts, and sciences, has wrought more evil on the natural and beautiful than the tempest, the flood, or the earthquake. Paper-mills, gas-works, calico-factories, have poisoned the bright waters of Lancashire and Shropshire, and polluted the lochs and burns of Northumberland and Scotland. Sewers and steam-boats, and the ten thousand abominations which pollute the silver Thames, have depopulated her waters, till the existence thereof of the salmon and sturgeon has become a mere myth. Roach, and dace, and darters have sought the purer stream nearer the fountain-head. And who shall say, with the march of science progressing as it does day by day, how long these may remain untainted? To a lover of nature, and still more to a follower of the gentle craft, these are gloomy anticipations. But this is neither time nor place to indulge in them, still less to enter into the oft-disputed question of the relative good or evil resulting from the advancement of modern science. The great object which I have in view is to see if something may not be done which may be advantageous both to the utilitarian and to the naturalist; if our beautiful streams may not still be preserved, without at all interfering with the progress and cultivation of arts and manufactures. Independently, too, of the foreign substances which have been and daily are thrown into our rivers from towns, manufactures, and mills, I believe that the decrease of trout in many waters is attributable to the drainage of lands. About four years back I was staying in Ireland, on the coast of Roscommon, and had a day's fishing on Lough Ki, on the Shannon. We caught nothing but some perch and jack, though we heard of burgo trout, but the season was too far advanced to do anything with them. I made inquiries about salmon. The whole world knows that the Shannon is famous for them, and this was formerly one of the most favoured spots; but since the construction of the enormous drains for the reclamation of the bog lands, the old fishermen told me that they had all deserted their ancient haunts, and gone upwards many miles to Lanesborough, where formerly they were comparatively unknown. Again, I believe, too, it has been found by experience that few things have a greater effect on fish than the sudden rising and lowering of water. The stopping the flow of water, indeed, has the effect of instantaneously putting a stop to their feeding, while what is called a resh, especially after a long drought, has the contrary effect, and seems to give a wonderful stimulus to their appetites. I will mention an instance of each which occurred to myself. I was fishing on the Itchen one evening this summer below Winchester, with a friend, and in that part of the river where the navigation runs into the old river through a sort of sluice. The fish were rising rapidly in the rough water, the hatch being open. I had hooked a large fish about two feet and a half in the navigation, and he made his rush for the hatch, no doubt with the intention of dashing through, and of necessity smashing me, for nothing could hold him if he had once got there. Fortunately I had a man with me who shot the hatch down, and I succeeded in landing my prize. But the effect on the fish below was extraordinary. In an instant they ceased to rise, as if by magic, and nothing would tempt them. Whether, if the hatch had been re-opened, they would have recommenced feeding, is a problem I cannot solve, though I am strongly inclined to think they would; but we had not the means of doing so. The other instance occurred to me in the Thames, near Staines. I had been barbel-fishing with Fletcher, the well-known fisherman, in the month of August, for several days without success. The weather was intensely hot and the water very low, and the very gudgeons refused to bite. Patience, hope, and a cigar, were our only remedy. About five o'clock in the evening there came what is technically called a flash of water, and while it lasted we caught on the ledger line five perch, which weighed in the aggregate eleven pounds and a half. The largest was an ounce under three pounds; the smallest, a pound and a quarter. Such a basket had not been seen for many a long day. The flash passed away and everything became, and continued to be, as dull and inert as it previously had been. Now, it is not difficult to conceive that any oft-repeated change of this kind would have the effect of driving fish away in search of spots where they may remain in comparative quiet. And hence I attribute no little importance to the effect produced by the irrigation of lands, artificial dams and sluices, and such like.

SIR RICHARD SUTTON returned to Aberdeen on Sunday last from fishing in Norway.

Silistria, were uttered by her Majesty with much emphasis. The Speaker of the House of Commons (in summing up the deeds of that assembly), conscious, perhaps, that he had but a lame story to tell, told it lamely, and, as a contemporary observes "several times appearing to lose the thread of his oration, and not unfrequently hesitating over words, and trying two or three before he could please himself. Mr. Shaw Lefevre generally addresses the Sovereign with such perfect self-possession, fluency, and impressiveness that any alteration in his manner is the more remarkable." Lord John Russell, Mr. Cardwell, and Mr. Wilson, were the ministerial attendants of the right hon. gentleman. The distinguished figure of Lord Palmerston, who usually takes his place at the bar on such occasions, was looked for in vain. A sudden and most melancholy affliction which had befallen the family of the Home Secretary, and which was not then generally known, explained his absence—we allude, of course, to the death of Lord Jocelyn. The ceremonial of the day was not so well attended as usual, many of the leading nobility having already left town. There were not sixteen peers, spiritual and temporal, exclusive of those present by virtue of their offices of state. So terminates the session which found us at peace and left us at war.

Recent news from Vienna confirms the statement that a grand attack was to be made upon the Crimea, and operations have in all probability commenced. Fresh reconnoissances of Sebastopol have been made, and various devices tried to induce the Russians to come out, but in vain. In the last of these attempts a quantity of shot and shell was fired into the place. The fire was returned with much precision, but without material injury to the assailants. Marshal St. Arnaud has been to Constantinople on a visit to the Sultan, and Madame St. Arnaud has been indulged by Abdul Medjid with admission to his harem—as a visitor, of course. The Russians were rapidly retreating from the Principalities, and the occupation by Austria was expected to take place from the 20th to the 24th of the present month. All else of reliable information in regard to the war in the East is, that the Russians appear to have obtained a somewhat important success at Bajazid, and the disorganised and demoralised condition of the Turkish forces there, makes it singular that we do not hear of many more disasters. From the Baltic we hourly expect to hear that Bomarsund has been assaulted. Up to the 14th we do not hear that anything of consequence had occurred at the Aland Isles. So much, told "in little," for the war.

The French news is almost exclusively confined to details of the magnificent celebration of the fête of the Emperor. The description of the various displays in Paris is quite bewildering. His Majesty himself is at Bayonne, and in acknowledging a congratulatory speech by the bishop of that diocese, Louis Napoleon piously remarks that, "in presence of this general manifestation, and of the prayers which are addressed to heaven throughout the whole of France, it is the duty of the Sovereign, in his turn, to examine himself internally, to ascertain if he has done all that depended upon him to deserve these wishes and prayers. It is especially his duty to come to the foot of the altar to ask from heaven, through the intermediation of its holy ministers, blessings upon his efforts to enlighten his conscience, and to give him incessantly the strength of doing the good and avoiding the evil." The bishop himself, or any bishop whoever said nolo episcopari, could not have enunciated more proper sentiments. Eight millions of francs have been decreed for carrying out certain unfulfilled dispositions of the will of Napoleon the Great.

The interest of the Spanish drama flags a little, notwithstanding an incidental murder of a secretary, and the clamorous outcries of the Queen, who is enraged at the sweeping away of the corrupt and debauched officials of the palace. But the fall of Queen Christina may be a terrible one. The nation has determined to put this evil old woman on her trial, and although we hardly anticipate that she will but know too well how to use her great and ill-gotten gains, to allow herself to incur personal suffering, there is no saying what may be done in the present excited condition of Spain. To Christina's training of her child Spain attributes—not without cause—most of the vices of Isabella. Espartero has declared that the Queen-Mother shall not leave the capital, openly or secretly, until the Cortes, which is summoned, shall have assigned her a place of residence.

Among the domestic occurrences of the week have been the elections for the boroughs whose writs have been so long suspended for bribery, but who, on the last day of the session, were restored to their constitutional rights (despite protracted resistance, in each case, by Mr. Thomas Duncombe), with an awful warning that there was now a Bribery Bill which could work swift vengeance, and that, if this failed, there was a doom like that of Sudbury and St. Alban's in store for offending towns. The head of the new Board of Health, Sir Benjamin Hall, has been re-elected for Marylebone, not without having been compelled to hear some disagreeable things about his allying himself with an "incapable and expiring Ministry." As regards its incapacity, we are not called upon to pronounce sentence; but, as regards its tenure of existence, we may interpolate our belief that changes

THE FETE OF ST. GERMAIN.—THE GAME OF TOURNIQUET.

The feat to be performed is, to pass from one post to the other along the revolving bar which connects them; and he who does so without losing his position wins the prize. The person making the attempt sits on the uppermost of the three ropes, and places his feet on the two below. The best plan is to lie along the uppermost rope; but on the slightest deviation to the right or left, a fall is the result.

are meditated; that the Earl of Aberdeen will withdraw from the cabinet, and the head of the condition will be the present leader of the House of Commons. Probably Lord Palmerston will be made President of the Council, in the room of Lord John Russell.

The cholera is ravaging the metropolis, and between 600 and 700 deaths are returned for the last week. As usual, the disease is most terrible where filth invites its presence, and the hideous details of the condition in which our fellow-creatures are content, or compelled to live, are almost too sickening for reproduction; yet they ought to be forced again and again upon every one who has a particle of influence in urging sanitary reform. Yet, in the face of such evidence, a fellow appears before Mr. A'Beckett, and growls at being fined, on the third warning, for keeping on his premises a pestilential heap of animal and vegetable foulness. "He only kept them till a barge-load was ready." There is ample work cut out for the new Board of Health, and the magistrates will, we trust, assist it by showing no mercy whatever in any case where an attempt is made to evade obedience to the directions of the local authorities.

A sad accident on the North London Railway, several disastrous fires, and two cruel murders, the one of a child by its mother, in England; the other of a fine young Tipperary peasant, by an organised gang of assassins, in Ireland, are included in the records of the week. The Perry inquiry is still pending; but until the whole case is closed we shall reserve any remark on her Majesty's Forty-Sixth Bashi-Bazouks.

THE CHOLERA—A SHADOW OF A THEORY.

(From the Times.)

Str.—I am one of those who are still of opinion that there is much yet to be learnt of the real nature and origin of that awful epidemic, cholera.

Let me invite those who are interested in the matter to the following simple experiment:—There are few large towns in which some one or more persons have not microscopes of modern construction, with objective powers up to 500 linear. Where cholera has broken out in any locality I suggest this test:—Get a few sheets of glass six inches square, thin, but as level as can be obtained; let a glazier run his diamond in parallel lines one inch apart from top to bottom of these pieces of glass, so as to make it easy to break off, when wanted, slides of six inches long by one inch. Place these sheets of glass so ruled, some in rooms where there are cholera patients, others in the cleft of sticks, projecting into the air outside the windows of houses in infected localities. Take a broad camel-hair pencil and lightly wash over these glasses with a solution of glycerine and distilled water, one part of the former to three of the latter; leave them for twelve hours; now remove them, break the said glasses up where ruled with the diamond, and submit the slides to the best microscopic investigation; let it be seen whether in any given number there is, amid the dust, insects, &c., easily to be recognised, anything of peculiar character—anything, however minute, of a fungoid appearance. If so, let some of the ejecta and disjecta from choleraic patients be submitted to the same ocular test, and ascertain whether anything of the like character can be found in these. If this be the case, I say you have gained a step, and a step on which I would have men of real science take their first stand in the endeavour to trace out the actual something productive of choleraic symptoms. Let any one take a piece of glass or two prepared as above, and, by means of cleft sticks, put them up in gardens and in fields, only for a few hours, even on a still day, and I think the result will surprise him, for it reveals secrets in the air few suspect. I have on a very small scale discovered the fungi of several well-known blights, some of which I know must have come from some distance. There will be for ever also found in certain conditions of the atmosphere and locality many of those ciliated bodies, some of which are known, small as they are, to have actually puzzled one of the first astronomers of the age by their appearance in the field of a celebrated telescope.

It requires no great practical knowledge to be able to discern between the fungi of the potato, bean, grape, and other at this time known blighted vegetation. Each has a very distinctive character. I cannot but think in a cholera-tainted neighbourhood, though these may be found in the air, some new fungus may be found with them; or it may be that, while one of these is found in the air and in the secretions of the patient, none of the others will be. To make the experiment satisfactorily the glasses must be very clean, the water and glycerine also well examined previous to use; the instrument used to test the slides of a high order. I have of late known the air reveal such objects of wonder that, though I am not sanguine, I have some hope that this or some analogous course of experiment may yet tend to tell us something more than we know about those opprobria to modern science, epidemics. I would have the experiment made by night as well as by day; we have yet much to learn of the effect of night air in the propagation of corrupting influences. I think the moon has had much laid to its charge which with justice it should have shared with smaller lights, at least with the time both most reign.

INVESTIGATOR.

THE ALAND ISLES.

(From the Daily News.)

To seek and destroy the Russian fleet is the problem proposed to the united Baltic fleets, and there is no reason why it should not be done, for there is no excuse about where it is; the ocean has not to be searched to find it; a boy from the must-head can count it. The question of loss is relative; for it is whether England, a great naval power, shall risk a few ships, or Russia, a second-rate naval power, shall preserve intact her navy. England could replace the loss of a fleet. Russia would succumb as a naval power with the destruction of a squadron. What is the use of the expedition to Bomarsund? Can any one define the value of its consequent, if successful, or count on the ridicule it will involve, if it fails. The group of the Aland Isles forms a series of intricate channels—a kind of marine labyrinth, in whose passage Hango and Bomarsund are built. As commanding the entrance to the spacious Långar Bay, they are important, if the Russian fleet were there, but it has flown, and the Aland Isles are a barren conquest, which a few steamers could effect, and do not require a fleet to attempt. It will also be remembered that Sweden lost these isles during a severe winter; that Russia crossed the ice and took them, a feat which could be renewed, if necessary. Yet Sweden had her armies and her magazines geographically placed so as to retain them. If Sweden was unable, how can England and France do so in the depth of a Baltic winter? The idea that Sweden will, if they are taken, declare herself an ally, is a chimera, because Sweden has pledged herself to neutrality. She has no ostensible cause of war against Russia, and she must still feel might but tranquil, while she is told that Cronstadt is impregnable in the summer, and that her very capital is only a few days' march across the ice of the Gulf of Finland during the winter. The people must demand a nobler enterprise of Sir Charles Napier than that, for never went a fleet to sea under higher auspices—a Queen led it into the deep—an assembled senate bade it farewell—a nation prayed for its success—veteran valour, skilful seamanship, unerring gunnery manned it—and shall it cease to strike terror to its foes, or extort admiration from its friends? These long days have damped the enthusiasm of the crews, enabled the enemy to recover from his amazement, relaxed the vigilance of its watch, aroused suspicion amidst the smaller neutral states, wasted the summer, allowed the winter to steal on. The respect for England will be changed to ridicule if it is found that she is impotent in the Baltic, and that high-sounding orders for actions have ended in inexplicable signals for retreat. The same services that pronounce Cronstadt impregnable declared Silistria was untenable. Are we to conclude that the Turk is more valiant, enduring, and intelligent, than the Briton; that his eye sees victory where ours can only recognise defeat? Cronstadt must fall. If ships and seamen decline the task, reduce the fleet and send more men, artillery, and ammunition to the Baltic; change the scheme of operations; adapt the means to the end, for it is no longer a question between Turkey and Russia—that is settled in favour of Turkey; it is a strife for existence between Russia and England, and we must succeed or fall. As yet we have not succeeded. Cronstadt and Sebastopol are the whole of Russia, as far as England is concerned. They are the teeth and claws of the bear—draw them, and he will dance to your pipe. If Cronstadt is taken the Aland Isles give up through sheer terror; Helsingfors and Swaborg will be hors de combat. But if petty enterprise—the old war of shreds and patches—is carried on, it is no wonder that, as a mark of contempt, the small King of Denmark suppresses the constitution in the rear of our fleets, as he is probably prepared to stop the Sound if you are unsuccessful. Cronstadt must fall; it is the menace to Portsmouth if it does not succumb.

TURKISH EXHIBITION, HYDE-PARK.—His Highness the Nawab of Surat visited and greatly admired this interesting exhibition on Tuesday.

METROPOLIS.

THE TOWER OF LONDON.—Several fatal cases of Asiatic cholera have occurred in the Tower of London among the military. One case took place on Monday, and the deceased, who belonged to the Essex Rifles, was buried in the Victoria Cemetery, Victoria Park, Bethnal-green.

THE ROYAL MINT, TOWER-HILL.—On Tuesday morning much curiosity was manifested by the public on Tower-hill by the appearance of a body of police-constables of the H division, who arrived from the station in Lemon-street, White-chapel, under the direction of Mr. Superintendent Stead, to take charge of the Royal Mint, in place of the military, who have for several years performed duty at this establishment. It appears that the Essex Rifles left town for Canterbury on Tuesday morning, and in future the police authorities of the district will have the care of the royal property.

WESTMINSTER BRIDGE.—The proposed plan for the erection of a temporary wooden bridge at Westminster during the building of the permanent structure has been abandoned. It is now intended to construct one side, or one half of the bridge, from shore to shore, in the first instance, next the Houses of Parliament. The breadth of this will be about fifty feet four inches, the width of the present bridge. On its completion that will be opened for traffic, and the demolition of the old bridge commenced, to complete the remaining half of the new bridge. By this arrangement considerable expense will be saved, and no interruption occasioned to public traffic.

THE CHOLERA.—On Monday a long inquiry was gone into before Mr. Bedford, at the Millbank prison, respecting the deaths of five convicts from the effects of Asiatic cholera, altogether making sixteen deaths from the same frightful disease in the prison since it broke out on the 3rd of August. A verdict of death from Asiatic cholera was returned in each case.

MARYLEBONE.—Sir B. Hall, who had resigned his seat for the borough of Marylebone on his appointment as President of the Board of Health, was re-elected on Wednesday.

FIRE AT THE MESSRS. COBBITS', AT PINJICO.—The most extensive conflagration that has occurred in the metropolis for several years past, happened on Thursday morning, soon indeed after midnight. The flames rose so high as to illuminate the principal portion of the city. The disaster commenced in a range of premises nearly 200 feet long, which were adjoined by another building upwards of 200 feet square, used as the joiners' houses. The last-named buildings being in such close proximity to sundry other buildings, it soon became apparent that unless the flames could be subdued in their commencement, that a terrible loss of property must unquestionably ensue. The watchman employed on the premises, and as many hands as he could collect together, at once set about endeavouring to confine the conflagration to that part of the well-known and extensive works in which they commenced. For some time their labours appeared to be crowned with success, but all of a sudden the fire, as if fed by some inflammable liquid, rushed forth in four or five directions, igniting in rapid succession everything in the tremendous range of premises in which the disaster commenced, and extending from thence to a lofty row of workshops, used as the joiners' houses. The property contained in these buildings, at a moderate computation, must have been worth several thousand pounds; and, as the fire rushed forth from more than a hundred windows, and through the roof, it brought the Penitentiary, the Archbishop of Canterbury's palace, and many of the City churches and other lofty buildings out in bold relief, while at the same time the river Thames looked like a sea of burnished gold. Men, women, and children were running about in a state approximating to insanity, as no one could tell how far the fearful element would extend. The firemen of the several stations, attracted by the glare, hurried their engines to the spot, and found the whole of the carpenters' shops in a blaze. By half-past one the fire was at its height, for the water, of which at first only a scanty supply could be obtained, was thrown in volumes upon the burning mass. As yet no estimate of the loss can be made.

FIVE MORE DEATHS IN MILLBANK.—REMOVAL OF SEVEN HUNDRED PRISONERS.—The mortality amongst the convicts in Millbank prison has assumed a character so alarming that the prison authorities, under the direction of the Home-office, have resolved to remove the prisoners to Dorchester.

The first division of prisoners who are at present in good health, to the number of three hundred, were on Monday conveyed in a number of omnibuses to the Great Western Railway, where a special train was in readiness to convey them to Dorchester gaol (to be followed by other divisions as soon as they can possibly be got away). The above measures were considerably accelerated by the fact of three more deaths having occurred on Saturday last, one on Sunday morning, and the fifth while the jury were sitting on the bodies of the other four on Monday afternoon. At first it was thought that the Thames water, which had hitherto been used, was the principal source of the disease, but the river supply had been abandoned, and the prison was now served with water from the artesian wells which supply the fountains at Charing-cross, and yet there was no diminution whatever of the disease. It was stated during the inquest that when the wind blew from the direction of the bone-factory at Lambeth and the adjoining gas-works the smell was intolerable, and the sickness was sure to increase throughout the whole prison.

DEATH.—We regret to announce the decease of F. H. Lindsay, Esq., who for a period of nearly fifty years held an appointment in the Commander-in-Chief's office, a considerable part thereof in the very laborious and responsible situation of first assistant to the military secretary. He suffered a severe and lingering illness.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—Return of admissions for six days ending Saturday, August 12:—Numbers, including season tickets, 61,594; received for admissions, £3,444. 19s. 6d.—G. GROVE, Secretary.

Our Opera-Glass.

ON THE DEATH OF MADAME SONTAG.

Composure of Rossi, Composure of Luenstein.

If tears that flowed from beauty's eyes,
If manly bosom's heaving sighs,
Could cause her form to reappear,
She then would know all loved her here.
Seraphs have borne her soul away,
Where harmony is night and day,
But in that grand celestial sphere,
There is no voice so sweet and clear;
The angels wished her by their side,
So Heaven prayed and Sontag died.

WARWICK HEBE TONKIN.

SURREY THEATRE.—The introduction at this theatre of an anglicised version of Meyerbeer's elaborate opera, Le Prophète, has been attended with the greatest success. The manner in which this arduous task has been achieved reflects the highest credit upon Miss Romer's taste, judgment, and energy as a manageress. Her impersonation of the character of Fides, the mother of the prophet, adds another triumph to the long list she has already obtained as one of our most accomplished vocalists. The part of Fides, after the first act, allows the artiste no moment for repose; her sorrow is deep, lasting, and almost amounts to wild despair when, in the cathedral of Munster, she is disowned by her son Jean. This scene is undoubtedly the most trying one in the opera, but Miss Romer's vocal and histrionic talents are equal to the emergency, and she carries the act to a triumphant finale. Mr. Augustus Braham is the prophet, Jean de Leyden, a character to which he gives a due amount of effect, though occasionally his singing is uneven and lacks tone, but then it must be allowed that the part is replete with difficulties, and those of a nature not easily surmounted by English vocalists. Miss Rebecca Isaacs deserves a laudatory word for her Bertha, into which she infuses a spirit that serves to heighten the more simple portions of the character. The mise en scene is complete in every department, and we may conclude by confidently recommending a visit to the Surrey for the purpose of hearing Le Prophète.

POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—The first of a series of lectures to the industrial classes was delivered in the large theatre of this institution, on Monday evening, by the Rev. Bath Power. A large and very attentive audience, among whom were many eminent scientific men, assembled on the occasion. Mr Power, in the course of a very eloquent and pertinent lecture, forcibly showed the importance of scientific knowledge to the industrial classes as individuals, and for the sake of scientific progress generally. He conceives that the basis of all true science was a knowledge of physical facts, imparted so as to promote a spirit of investigation and accurate generalisation. Such an education would inevitably give a great impetus to the social elevation of the working-classes themselves, as well as contribute to national progress and prosperity. The lecturer proceeded to show, by a series of apt illustrations, the value of a knowledge of physical facts, in the ordinary business of life. For instance, a few years ago some hundred thousand pounds or so had been thrown away in sinking a shaft in search of coal, at Bexhill, near Hastings; whereas the slightest knowledge of geology would have shown that it was utterly impossible coal could be found in the Hastings land. About seventeen years ago, Sir Charles Lemon, deeply impressed with the value of such a training school in connection with mining, offered a large sum of money for the establishment of such an institution, on condition that the county of Cornwall would make it permanent, by the proceeds of half a farthing per ton on all the ore raised in the county. The offer was declined; but so strongly impressed was Sir Charles with the idea, that he started a school of his own, in which seventeen boys received education for two years. At the end of that time it was broken up, but subsequent investigation had traced the fact that every one of these boys had risen in life and held honourable and lucrative positions in society. In course of the lecture, a series of chemical experiments were introduced, under the superintendence of Professor Pepper. One was the "modern Greek fire." By dashing a small bottle of sulphuric ether with a few particles of metal potassium into a flat cistern, a bright flame was produced, which illuminated the whole theatre. The two experiments, however, which excited the greatest attention, were, one in which Professor Pepper, after wetting his fingers in ammonia, dipped them into a crucible of melted lead, and let the metal run off in the shape of bullets into the shallow cistern of water; and the other was the laying of four pieces of red-hot iron on four bricks, and the passage over these by one of the attendants bare-footed, without the slightest injury. The chair on the occasion was occupied by Dr. Sayer. The Polytechnic has recently come under an entirely new management, represented by Professor Pepper, and it has been resolved, in addition to other improvements, to throw it open on Monday evenings to the industrial classes of all workshops and factories and their families, on a payment of sixpence, provided they produce a ticket signed by the foreman or superintendent of the works to which they belong. We trust this praiseworthy object may meet with the success it deserves.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Mr. Coppin, the Australian comedian, and Mr. Cowle are engaged for the present week, ending the 19th. Of the former gentleman report speaks very highly; the latter has long been an established favourite in this town. On Monday night the pieces selected for the performance were "The Black Doctor," in which Mr. Cowle appeared; and "The Turnpike Gate" and "The Wandering Minstrel," in each of which Mr. Coppin sustained the principal character. On Friday Mr. Coppin took his benefit.—Aris's Birmingham Gazette.

NEW THEATRE.—Mr. Brooke completes his farewell engagement this week by a round of his favourite characters. On Monday he appeared as "Othello." On Tuesday Miss Fanny Cathcart took her benefit, when "The Wife" and "Black-eyed Susan" were represented, Mr. Brooke sustaining the characters of Julian St. Pierre and William. On Wednesday "Richelieu" was presented; and on Thursday morning "The Hunchback" followed, the same evening, by "The Stranger." Friday evening was set apart for Mr. Brooke's benefit. Saturday, the last night of the engagement, is devoted to Mr. Brooke's grandest impersonation, Sir Giles Overreach. Next week the Drury-lane Company will perform Coventry and Leamington, under distinguished county patronage.—Aris's Birmingham Gazette.

OPENING OF ST. GEORGE'S HALL.—It is now arranged that St. George's Hall shall be opened on the 19th of September, but the belief is that the Queen will not be present. The wish of her Majesty, however, is to be sounded through the medium of the Earl of Sefton, and, in the event of the Queen expressing a desire to inaugurate the building, any day about the specified time which may suit her Majesty better, will be fixed. The chances, nevertheless, are at present against the Royal Family being in attendance, and it is possible that the stir which was made in the House of Lords a fortnight back by Lord Campbell, at the instigation of the members of the Northern Bar, may have decided the point. Her Majesty's punctuality is notorious, and, if she had felt a wish to be present, her desire would have been known ere this. The arrangements, therefore, will proceed on the supposition that we shall not be honoured by the face of royalty, notwithstanding Prince Albert's exclamation to the Sovereign three years ago, as he was leaving the hall for the railway opposite, "Let us take another view of this beautiful building." It has been decided, so far, that there shall be two performances—one in the morning, and another in the evening—the first to consist of the Hallelujah Chorus, the Coronation Anthem, and other musical pieces; and the second of an oratorio. Miss Clara Novello, whose success in the first-named piece at the opening of the Sydenham Palace astonished and delighted every one, will be the prima donna on the occasion, while Sir Henry Bishop will wield the baton, and Dr. Wesley will guide the organ—an instrument so vast that it requires the aid of steam to bring out its volume in perfection. A chorus of 200 performers will swell the enormous mass of sound. We see it stated that all the admissions are to be paid for, the price half-a-guinea per head, and that the members of the corporation are to have no advantage over the public beyond the selection of the seats which they and their families may desire to occupy before the general ballot for seats takes place. As the proceeds, after the payment of expenses, are to be handed over to the charities, this is the regular course to pursue.—Liverpool Chronicle.

TEMPERANCE FETE AT THE SURREY GARDENS.—The entire south side of the Thames was in a commotion on Monday, in consequence of an imposing invasion by the whole of the temperance league, headed by Mr. G. Craikshank, Mr. Gough, and the other leaders of the movement. The procession was upwards of a mile in length, and included every variety of vehicle, from the smart harouche and four to the humble market cart. Bands of music, banners, &c., were present in abundance, and the destination of the whole was the Surrey Gardens, where the annual fete was to take place. On the arrival of the procession at the gardens the members were addressed at some length by Mr. Gough, the principal topic being the new Temperance Crystal Palace, the prospectus of which has just been issued. Mr. Gough eloquently impressed upon his hearers the expediency of taking shares in the new undertaking, and augured for its success an immense accession of strength to the temperance cause. At the conclusion of the address, which was tremendously cheered, the company, which by this time numbered nearly 20,000 persons, separated to enjoy the other amusements of the place, which went off with great clat, especially the pyrotechnic pièce de circonstance which had been specially got up for the occasion.

SURREY ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS, FIRST AND LAST FLOWER-SHOW.—The first hollyhock and miscellaneous flower show ever held in August, will take place at the Surrey Zoological Gardens on Tuesday next, the 22nd inst., and from the number of eminent growers who have entered their names as exhibitors, it will eclipse all former shows. The London Temperance League having arranged for the gardens after this season, this will in all probability be the last show but one that will ever take place in these gardens. The band of the 2nd Life Guards will attend, and we have no doubt the show will be attractive beyond all former precedent.

GALLERY OF ILLUSTRATION, WATERLOO PLACE, REGENT-STREET.—The admirable panoramic views of the seat of war by the well-practised pencils of Messrs. Griere and Tolbin have, during the week, met with even increased success. The critical state of affairs in the Baltic has at last created in the public a feverish anxiety for news of a victory; and though this is probably en route, the public impatience can only solace itself by frequently inspecting these able representations of the fortresses the fleets are believed this very week to have attacked. The lecture given is also very interesting, but the pictures themselves are inimitable.

TURKISH MUSEUM, HYDE PARK.—Although grouse-shooting has just attracted very many of our fashionables to the north, and the Isle of Wight regattas have drawn others to the south, and yet more have sped across to Paris to witness the siege of Silistria, and the other wonders enacted during the present week in honour of the Emperor's fête, Hyde Park corner has still presented a gallant array of equipages, and a considerable gathering of the ton day by day since Thursday week, when the Turkish Museum was first opened. We are glad of this, for the untiring energy of Messrs. C. Oscanian and S. Aznavour, in gathering together so interesting a collection, deserves to be so supported by the aristocracy. Nearly every one of rank, remaining in London, has already visited the Turkish Museum, but twenty visits will not exhaust its wonders. The managers are doing well in keeping it open till ten at night, by which means the over-wrought lawyer or merchant, and others—ever busy by day—can participate in the pleasure of gazing on the gullant Turks in all their pomp and glory.

BOWER SALOON.—The audiences of our transpontine thes have long been hebl capable of appreciating nothing better than dramas of the Radcliffe school, bristling with accumulated horrors, and broad farces, in which genuine wit is replaced by extravagant buffoonery; but most persons can recollect the day when the inhabitants of Islington were supposed to be as little capable of appreciating a higher school of dramatic art, and the success which has attended the efforts of Mr. Phelps for the elevation of the popular taste, appears to have incited the new management of the Bower Saloon to attempt a similar experiment, which it is hoped may be crowned with as triumphant results.

BRIGHTON THEATRE.—There has been little that calls for notice here this week. The pieces have principally been repeats, and with one exception "Open Sesame" has been played nightly. On Monday, however, it was withdrawn to make way for "Victorine." The attendance has not been so good as it was during the opening, which happened also to be the nice week.—Brighton Guardian.

WOODIN'S CARPET BAG.—This entertainment was opened at the Pavilion on Monday evening, and judging from the satisfaction it gave to the respectable audience it brought together, and from its own intrinsic merits, we augur for it a long and prosperous career.—Brighton Guardian.

LIVERPOOL.—The theatres are in full force, especially the Theatre-royal, where Mr. B. Webster and Madame Celeste, supported by Miss Woolgar, Miss M. Keeley, glorious Paul Bedford, Parselle, and J. Rogers, of the Adelphi, London, are creating an extraordinary sensation. The "Tartuffe," Molière's "Tartuffe," in all its integrity, has been received with great and well-merited favour. The Liverpool Mercury thus enlogises the entertainment:—"On Friday last, Mr. Webster appeared for the first time in his celebrated character of Tartuffe. Since the time of Dowton, whose inimitable representation of the 'hypocrite' stamped him as a first-rate actor, there has not been so faithful a delineation of the sneaking, smooth-faced villain, who, under the mask of piety, attempts to ruin the peace of a family, debauch the wife of the man who has received him, and plunge into poverty his benefactor. The piece will be repeated this evening (Tuesday), and we advise all the lovers of good acting to attend. Our old favourite, Mr. Baker, as the dupe of the designing profligate, acted well; and Madame Celeste and Miss Woolgar were very effective in their several parts. The scene from 'Nunber Nip' gives the opportunity for the introduction of some excellent dancing by Signor Lawi, Miss Rosina Wright, and Madame Celeste, whose pantomimic picture of a Madrid bull-fight drew forth thunders of applause. 'The Pretty Girls of Stillsberg' is a piece which always takes. Mr. Webster's imitation of Napoleon Bonaparte, and the evolutions of the pretty girls, dressed as Prussian soldiers, under the command of Madame Celeste, ensure its success." The second night of "Tartuffe" (Tuesday) was honoured with the most fashionable house of the season, and on Wednesday the theatre was crammed in every part to witness the wonderful effects of "The Thirst of Gold" and "The Sea of Ice."

OSBORNE.—The celebrated pianist, Charles Hallé, had the honour of being commanded to attend at Osborne on Tuesday, for the purpose of performing before the Queen and Prince Albert some of the most remarkable productions from the music of Beethoven, of which Mr. Hallé is so well known to be a faithful and brilliant interpreter. Her Majesty and his Royal Highness condescended to receive Mr. Hallé privately during an interview of nearly three hours, and were pleased to express to the artist their approval of the excellence of his playing, and to treat him with the most flattering distinction.

THE MAGNETIC PAGE-TURNER.—Pianoforte players will at once appreciate the convenience of the apparatus entitled "The Magnetic Page-turner," a patent for which has been taken out by the Messrs. Druce, the eminent upholsterers of Baker-street. Contrivances have been before suggested for relieving the pianist of the trouble of turning over his own leaves, but they have always been uncertain and imperfect in their action. The invention of the Messrs. Druce consists of a mahogany frame, which is annexed at will to the music-stand of the pianoforte. The base of the frame contains a spring, the tension of which is effected by the foot, which presses a lever in communication with a shaft screwed on the side of the instrument. The pages of the music are each furnished at the right-hand corner with a small disc of metal, attached either by an adhesive process, or by a sliding spring to admit of removal. The frame is provided on the left with a branch, which is in immediate connexion with the concealed spring, and which, when operated upon by the lever under the foot, describes a rapid semicircular movement over the music, when a small horse-shoe magnet with which the end of the branch is armed comes in contact with the metal disc. The result is obvious. The restoration of the branch to its original position is accompanied by the simultaneous flight of the leaf to which the disc is attached.

DEATH OF MR. A. COOKE, OF ASTLEY'S AMPHITHEATRE, FROM CHOLERA.—The family of Mr. W. Cooke, proprietor of Astley's Amphitheatre, in the Westminster-road, Lambeth, has been plunged into great affliction, in consequence of the following awful visitation, which will deprive the patrons of that favourite place of amusement of one of the principal performers. From all that can be gleaned, it appears that Mr. A. Cooke, was the brother of the successor of Mr. Batty, who was formerly lessee of the theatre. On Monday he went to Margate to see his wife, who was confined with a child there. After bidding his wife an affectionate adieu, and promising to see her again in a few days, he took his place in one of the carriages on the South-Eastern Railway, in order to reach London the same night. The train had got about midway of Margate and London, when Mr. A. Cooke was seized with all the premonitory symptoms of cholera; he, however, kept his seat, fancying he was recovering from the attack. Upon reaching the terminus at London-bridge he appeared considerably worse. A conveyance was procured, and the unfortunate gentleman was placed therein, and he was driven to his residence in Mount-gardens, near his brother's theatre, where Dr. Beck and several other eminent surgeons were promptly in attendance. Everything that humanity or medical skill could devise was done for the sufferer, but he expired between the hours of eleven and twelve next morning, from Asiatic cholera. Owing to the critical state of the widow the deceased has left behind, it has been deemed prudent not to inform her of the sad event at present. The deceased was quite a young man, being only thirty-five years of age.

WARLIKE ACTORS.—Charles the First passed from an apartment in Whitehall to the scaffold, but the poor player, though ruined in his avocation, was true to his sovereign, and this loyalty furnishes a bright page in the actor's history. On the 14th September, 1655, the performers at the Red Bull, and at Southwark-fair, enlisted themselves into the army in the cause of royalty. Most of the players (except Lowin, Taylor, and Pollard, who were superannuated) likewise took part with their sovereign. Mohun became a captain, and whilst serving in Flanders, received the pay of a major; Hart was a lieutenant in Prince Rupert's regiment; Burt was a cornet in the same troop, and Shattford a quartermaster. Allen, of the Cockpit, became a major and quartermaster-general at Oxford; whilst Swanston (of the Blackfriars) was the only player of note who sided with the opposing party.—Bentley's Miscellany.

PROVINCIAL.

FATAL FALL OF A CLIFF.—Last week a large stone, weighing about a ton, was suddenly displaced from the breast of one of the cliffs at Whitehaven, and falling with great violence to the beach, struck two children, aged eight and four years, who were picking up coals. Both of them were killed on the spot, and the stone then rolled over on to a third child, who, though seriously injured, is still alive.—Carlisle Journal.

GAROTTE ROBBERIES.—Robberies of this description have of late been of frequent occurrence in the neighbourhood of Eekington, and the thieves have, in every instance, escaped detection. About a week since a person named Hall, employed at Rainshaw Works, was attacked and plundered of a sum of money while walking between Eekington and the railway station. On the previous Saturday night another man had taken a quantity of provisions stolen from his basket in the same locality; the thieves, in this instance also, preventing resistance by strangulation. Other cases have occurred with the like result.—Sheffield Examiner.

LAMBTON CASTLE.—It is reported that the stately and beautiful mansion of Lambton-castle is in a critical state, owing to some of the main walls having sunk to a serious extent, and affording reasons for caution, if not for alarm. It is believed that the workings of a neighbouring colliery have been carried under the entire house.—Swindon Herald.

MURDER BY A BROTHER-IN-LAW.—Near the Kirby station, and within a few miles of the spot where the railway accident occurred ten days ago, the following brutal murder has been perpetrated:—A man named Henry Shockladly lived with his brother-in-law, Henry Mercer, a farmer, of Kirby hill. They were always on the best terms, unless Mercer drank, when he became violent and quarrelled with Shockladly. On the day in question, and just after his wife's confinement, Mercer drank excessively, and under the influence of drunkenness hurried out of the house, armed with a heavy fork, towards the gate upon which Shockladly was sitting, the latter's sister following Mercer, and begging him to return. Martha Webster, the sister, seeing that Mercer was making for her brother, called out to him to make off, and asked Mercer if he was going to kill her brother. With-out giving an answer he pursued her brother, who ran off, and, coming up with him, dealt him such a blow on the head with the dung-fork that he felled him to the earth, when he twice again struck him. The poor fellow never spoke, and after a few heavy sighs expired. Mr. Woods, surgeon, opened the body, and found a clean cut two and a half inches long at the left side of the head, and another wound, an inch long, below the left ear, besides a severe wound on the shoulder. The skull was fractured to the length of two and a half inches, which produced congestion and infusion into the brain that caused death. The coroner's jury returned a verdict of "Wilful murder" against Henry Mercer, who was accordingly committed to gaol for trial.

SUDDEN DEATH OF THE MAYOR OF GLOUCESTER.—On Monday night, Mr. Washbourne, Mayor of Gloucester, was travelling in a first-class carriage, and was in his usual health on leaving Pablington at seven o'clock in the evening. On the train arriving near Stroud there is a long and rather acute incline towards Gloucester, and the train being a heavy one, it proceeded at an unusually rapid pace down the incline, so as to excite some fears among the passengers. Mr. Washbourne remarked to one of the passengers that the train was running very rapidly, and appeared a little uneasy on the subject. Shortly before this he had been looking out of the window, but suddenly his fellow-passengers were alarmed by observing him fall backwards, and he appeared to be in a fit. He was raised up, and, as soon as the train stopped, Dr. Cook, of Cheltenham, who happened to be among the passengers, was called in. Little could then be done; but the train soon after arrived at Gloucester, and the unfortunate gentleman was at once removed to his residence. On his arrival, Mrs. Washbourne came to the door to meet him, and, as may be supposed, a sad scene ensued. Her husband was then insensible, and he died almost immediately afterwards. An impost has been held, and a verdict to the effect, that the deceased died in a fit of apoplexy returned. He has left a widow and eleven children.

LAMENTABLE OCCURRENCE AT BLACKPOOL.—On Wednesday morning a young woman, while bathing at Blackpool, got out of her depth, and the conductor of the machine, an elderly man, who went to rescue her, found himself unable to do so, and the two remained struggling in the sea, carried every moment further from safety by the receding tide. The spectators remained helplessly screaming and shouting, but at length the old man's daughter, though unable to swim, rushed into the sea to rescue him. Her own life was thus in great jeopardy, but she was saved by some of the male bystanders, and at last a young man succeeded, after great exertions, in rescuing the others. Unhappily, all efforts to restore the old man to consciousness were unavailing. Ever since, the heroic daughter, to whom first it occurred to risk her own life for her father's, has been—and it is feared will continue—raving mad; and the young woman who so nearly perished remains at the present time in a stupor which is only occasionally broken. More singular still, a lady who witnessed the sad affair from the window of the house in which she lodges, was soon afterwards smitten with delirium, and in that state, we hear, she still continues.—Manchester Examiner.

STRIKE OF CROWN GLASS-MAKERS.—The crown glass-makers of the Tyne and Wear are on strike, the glass manufacturers having given notice to the men of their intention to reduce their wages 6d. per 100 tables.

A MAN KILLED BY A VICIOUS HORSE.—On Monday afternoon, as William Parry, aged forty-five, a carter in the employ of Mr. Ralph Leyland, was putting a bit in the mouth of a horse, in the New Quay-yard, Nova Scotia, the animal, notorious for its ferocity, reared suddenly, and with its fore feet struck the unfortunate man on the chest and stretched him on the ground. It then deliberately knelt on his body, pressing its legs on his chest and stomach, and at the same time bit him savagely in the shoulder. Parry's son, who was standing by, screamed out, "Oh, father, father," on which some workmen came to his assistance, and attempted to drag the unfortunate man from his dangerous position. On this the horse rose, and pursued them with great violence round the yard, being ultimately secured with great difficulty. Parry was lifted up, and conveyed to his house in Twenty-four Court, Paul-street, where he died at noon on Tuesday, in great agony, vomiting blood and a quantity of green matter. The cause of his fearful death is now placed in a stable in Leeds-street, but no carter can be got to go near it. It has been for six years in the possession of Mr. Leyland, who resides at Pinesough, near Ormskirk, and is said to have worried several persons before its attack on his last driver.—Liverpool Chronicle.

EL HAMM PACHA, the son of the late Pasha of Egypt, had a private interview with the Queen, at Osborne House, previous to his departure from this country.

SCOTLAND.

THE TRIAL OF PLOUGHS AT THE BERWICK MEETING.—(From the North British Agriculturist).—The three best ploughs having now completed their trial task, and their three ridges lying quite contiguous, they became an interesting object of examination. To a practised eye, conversant in what constitutes fine ploughing, a very slight scrutiny only was necessary to fix upon the best. The competitors taken in the order of the catalogue were,—Howard, Ponton, and Sellar. It is well known that one mark of good ploughmanship lies in the more or less disappearance of any beard in either stubble or lea ploughing, in the seams of the furrows. Howard's plough is armed with an appendage—a little plough, whose duty is to scarify the edge of the slice that is being turned over—which effectually prevents any vestige of beard appearing. In Scotch ploughs this is effected by attention to the position of the coulter and the form of the furrow slice, and hence the greater difficulty in attaining perfection on this point. It was easy to see, therefore, that Howard's plough should have the advantage on this point, but that plough has also such a length of mould-board, and that mould-board beautifully polished steel, that it turns over and lays the slice in such an unbroken and glossy state, that to the admirers of fine ploughing its work appears perfection itself. No wonder then that Mr. Howard carried the prize; the work was as regular as machinery could make it, and not a blade of grass to be seen. Mr. Sellar's plough was second best, but came very close on the first, while Mr. Ponton's fell third, and it was even whispered that an assistant followed the latter plough, plucking up such large tufts of grass as occasionally appeared too obtrusive. Notwithstanding this carefully conducted trial, by which an English wheel plough has beaten all the Scotch swing-ploughs present, there will yet remain much room for questioning the propriety of such a decision. We know there is now a pretty strong feeling amongst agriculturists against the system of fine ploughing, and that in many districts it is ignored altogether. It is also known that the English plough-makers have of late years turned their attention chiefly to that system which with us is falling out of repute; but betwixt the two there is still a marked difference. In the Scotch system, it is produced by a deceptive process of cutting the furrow slice. By the English method there is honesty in the cutting of the furrow slice; it is fairly and fully lifted. The laying up and giving it the high polish seems due altogether to a combination in the mould-board, its great length, its curvature, and its polish. The first and principal element, therefore, in the working of this plough is such as ought to be encouraged, while the remaining em be modified to suit the views of those who may use it.

IRELAND.

HARVEST PROSPECTS IN IRELAND.—The weather since our last has been of the most favourable kind for the growing crops, which are now approaching to maturity with every prospect of affording an abundant yield. The cereal crops are looking remarkably well, and no complaint is heard of smut or lodgment, notwithstanding all the rain that has fallen during the season. As to potato crops, while it is undeniably that blight has shown itself pretty generally in the neighbourhood of Cork, still its effects are not of the serious character which marked them in former years. We have been also apprised that it is more general in this neighbourhood than in any other part of the province. Our city markets are abundantly supplied with potatoes of excellent quality, with prices varying from 8d. to 10d. per 21 lb.

MAYO.—The cereal crops are fast approaching to maturity under the present fine weather with which we are blessed, and in some instances, it is said, that under the same genial influence the blight in the potato has been materially checked.

DERRY.—The weather, for the last ten days, has been highly favourable for the crops, although we have had yesterday, and for a day or two previously, occasional heavy showers. The late flux is, in some places, considerably improved; but, on the whole, this crop in the northern counties will be below an average. Wheat has suffered a good deal from rain. Oats on favourable soils will be weighty. Damp lands, however, have not recovered from the effects of the superabundant rains which retarded the cultivation of turnips, and consequently, this crop is in a more backward state than at this season in former years. The potato crop is, in general, not weighty, although the breadth under cultivation will compensate for this deficiency. The disease, though apparent, upon examination, in almost every field, is not, as yet, making a rapid progress.

LIMERICK.—The weather since our last has been every thing that the farmer could desire. The cereal crops are all rapidly approaching maturity, and the sickle will soon be in full operation. Our market is abundantly supplied with excellent potatoes, and we hear little talk of disease in that valuable cereal.

SUBMARINE OPERATIONS AT KILMORE.—On Friday, at one o'clock p.m., Mr. Campbell, the celebrated diver, commenced blasting the Ling rocks, near Kilmore new pier. Some of these boulders are seventy tons at least. Such an attempt was never made here before.—Wexford Independent.

SOMEWHERE SUSPECTED AGAIN.—Under this heading the Liverpool Reporter gives the following:—"Captain Earl, of the Elizabeth Taylor, arrived in this port on Wednesday from the West Indies, reports having seen a very suspicious looking steamer off the Blaskets on Tuesday, long rakish hull, 'snake-like,' painted black, with long black funnel; gave no

NON-LIABILITY OF CAB-OWNERS FOR LOST BAGGAGE.—On Saturday, at this court, an action was brought by Maraudule Charles Salvin, Esq., of Burn-hall, Durham, to recover from the defendant, Mrs. Kartwright, a cab proprietor, £25, the value of a portmanteau and contents, lost by the alleged negligence of the driver. The plaintiff was removed from the Great Northern Railway to Manchester-square, and his luggage, consisting of two portmanteaus and a box, was placed outside, but, on arriving at Manchester-square a portmanteau was missing. The driver said it must have been stolen or shaken off. Mr. Lewis, for the defendant, submitted that he was entitled to let the cab out to the driver, and was shown, and the defendant had let the cab out to the driver. Moreover, it was therefore not responsible for the conduct of the driver. Moreover, it appeared that the complainant had himself gone to the railway station to see if the luggage was left there, showing that he was not certain that it had been placed on the cab. It was also contended that cab-drivers were not in the position of common carriers. The driver said that only two packages were given to him at the railway by the porter. The learned judge said he did not consider cabmen in the light of common carriers, which would render them liable for such losses, and, as no negligence had been proved, his verdict must be for the defendant, with costs.

much better, and that the more serious symptoms had abated.—Mr. Elliott observed that he must have testimony on oath before him of that fact prior to his making any alteration in his decision, and again re-manded the accused.—Again the accused were brought up, when the following evidence was given:—Mr. James Stanley Christian, M.D. and surgeon, of No. 1, Ovington-place, Brompton, said: I am Mr. Stewart Ker's medical attendant, and was called in to that gentleman at half-past eleven on Friday night last. He was then at his own house, and I found him suffering from wounds on the head, and which had been previously dressed. I have attended him ever since. The wounds did not appear severe, but the results are. I continue to attend Mr. Ker still, and saw him this afternoon a few minutes after two o'clock. He is suffering from an injury in the head, produced by violence.—Mr. Wontner: I will ask Dr. Christian whether the present state or condition in which Mr. Ker is does not result from a concussion of the brain?—Dr. Christian: Yes, from an injury to the brain and inflammation consequent on the injury. I consider his life in danger. Since yesterday the symptoms have caused me to change my opinion. An unfavourable change has taken place, so that at present Mr. Ker is quite unconscious. Taking his present state into consideration, I could not, under a fortnight, pronounce him out of danger, though his change might be favourable.—In his cross-examination by Mr. Salter, the barrister, Mr. Christian said, that the unfavourable change was increase of want of consciousness, and sinking of pulse. No matter how favourable the change, he did not think any medical gentleman could take on himself to pronounce him out of danger before a fortnight. He had signed a certificate on the day before of the 11th inst. of Mr. Ker, but could not say what had become of it.—Mr. Henry James, of 17, Artillery-place, Finsbury-square, surgeon to the Lying-in-hospital, said, he saw Mr. Ker on the night before, and he quite concurred with Dr. Christian in his opinion as to his present state. Mr. Ker was quite unconscious, his symptoms very alarming, and he thought the probabilities against his recovery. He had not seen Mr. Ker before Tuesday night.—Mr. Henry Charles Johnson, surgeon to St. George's hospital, said, that on Monday night last he was called in by Dr. Christian to see Mr. Ker, and had continued to visit him since, and he considered his life to be in a great state of uncertainty; he also considered it impossible for any medical man to pronounce an opinion as to the chance of his recovery in a shorter period than a fortnight.—In cross-examination, the witness said he perfectly concurred with the other gentlemen. He was at the head of a large establishment where he had much experience in such cases, and from that experience he should say that it would not be safe to pronounce in such a case as the present in less than a fortnight. It was his opinion that Mr. Ker was worse.—Mr. Elliott observed that the law did not give him the power to remand beyond a week, and he should, therefore, name that day week for the further examination, and if Mr. Ker could not attend then he should have to extend the remand to a further week.—The prisoner William Philip Newton was admitted to bail as before, but his brother was sent to Horsemanor-lane gaol.

ILLEGAL DETENTION OF A YOUNG LADY.—Shortly after Mr. Elliott had taken his seat on the bench on Saturday, an application was made to him on behalf of a gentleman in attendance, but whose name did not transpire, to interpose his magisterial authority to procure the release of a young lady, his daughter.—From the statement made, it appeared that some time ago her father placed the young lady in question at a highly respectable boarding-school at Clapham, where he paid £100 per annum for her education, and from letters that had been recently received from her, expressive of much discontent and unhappiness, he made an application at the school to see her, but this was met by a peremptory refusal. This, together with the sentiments expressed in her letters, confirmed his suspicions of what he had heard, namely, that it was the intention of the proprietor of the school to get her married to a poor relative as soon as she was of age and could legally contract a marriage. On Monday she will be of age, and on that day will be entitled to a fortune of £12,000, and therefore he was most anxious to take her away, or at least to see her.—Mr. Elliott: You had a right to demand her, and take her by force; but I can give you no authority to do so; you should at once apply to a judge, who can grant a habeas.—It was replied that there would not be sufficient time to procure an writ on a judge's authority; but Mr. Elliott having again told them that he could not interfere, the parties left the court.

"THE EMPEROR NAPOLEON," says the Progrès du Pas-de-Calais, "is expected to stop at Boulogne-sur-mer for several weeks. The hotel hired for him is at Capécure, and has been taken from the 20th August to the 2nd October. The price to be paid for it is 42,500*fr.* The same journal states that the King of Portugal, the King of the Belgians, and Prince Albert are expected to visit his Majesty, to be present at some grand military manoeuvres which are to take place from the 15th to the 20th September. Tuesday, the 15th inst., being the French Emperor's fête, the Bourse and all the public establishments remained closed. The Emperor granted, on this occasion of the fête, 2,582 pardons or reductions of punishment. These pardons are thus apportioned:—805 to those sentenced to deportation, 774 to those detained in the Bagnes or penal establishments of Guiana and other colonies, 1,008 to soldiers or sailors undergoing imprisonment."

According to ADVICES FROM MADRID of the 14th the state of Catalonia continues to cause uneasiness to the Government. Serious disturbances had broken out at Tortosa, where the mob burst into the Town-hall and massacred the secretary. His mutilated corpse was afterwards dragged through the streets and thrown into the river. A despatch from Madrid of the 14th announces the publication of the decree convoking the Cortes. It is decided that the question of dynasty cannot be discussed. There will be only one Chamber. The Government is buying back the arms which were in the hands of the civil population, and already 9,500 muskets have been taken to the arsenal.

AUSTRIA AGREES WITH THE WESTERN POWERS upon the following guarantees, embodied in the note to St. Petersburg of the 11th.—1. Abolition of Russian protectorate in the Principalities. 2. Declaration of independence of the orthodox Church in Turkey. 3. Unrestricted navigation of the whole line of the Danube. 4. Establishment of a free port on the Black Sea. 5. Revision of the old Russo-Turkish treaties.

THE "NEW YORK HERALD" announces the arrival at New York of Dr. Cottman, an American gentleman, who has lived for several years at St. Petersburg, and who has been intrusted by the Czar with a mission of the highest importance—viz., to propose a commercial treaty, and to dispose of Alaska, the latter on very advantageous terms, to the United States' Government. According to the Herald, the Czar, "in speaking of our relations with Spain, says he considers that Cuba is ours by right of her geographical position, and that, as she commands the entrance to the Gulf, we should take her, whether the Spanish Government is willing or not!" The Herald is most fulsome in its praise of the Emperor and abusive of England. This Dr. Cottman, the Czar's agent, while in London, en route to New York, addressed a letter to the United States' Consul in London, speaking in the harshest terms of the proceedings of the British squadron in the Baltic, and even accusing the crews of the violation of Finnish women! On the morning of the 2nd a horrible tragedy was enacted at the St. Nicholas hotel, New York, by which Colonel Charles Loring, of California, lost his life. It appears that an altercation took place between him and a gentleman named Robert M. Graham, of New Orleans, who ran a sword-cane through the body of the former, killing him outright. Mr. Graham was examined at the Toombs on the 3rd, and was fully committed for trial for murder.

INDIA AND CHINA.—THE OVERLAND MAIL.

By the Overland Mail we have advices from Bombay of the 1st; Calcutta, June 29; and Canton, June 22.

The news by this arrival is scanty and of unexciting character, if we except the intelligence from Cabul, from the faithful reporter of the Delhi Gazette. According to this authority the Czar was offering entire provinces for the aid of the Shah's armies, to be employed in harassing those of the Sultan in Asia.

The King of Ava is said to have renewed his earlier manifestations of a desire for peace. Our Indian possessions enjoy a state of complete, and it is hoped, well-grounded peace. From Bengal it is reported that the indigo crop has been placed in considerable danger by heavy and continuous rains.

The Dutch expedition against Borneo has been successful; Montrado has been taken. The Sumatra corvette has been destroyed by fire in the roadstead of Rema. The crew were saved.

COLONIAL.

MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, HALIFAX, August 3.—[Per Telegraph from Washington.]—The Colonial Reciprocity Treaty was ratified by the Senate yesterday, without amendment. No amendment was necessary as far as respects the American interests. The American Government always takes care of that in their arrangements with Great Britain.

ALLEGED PRIVATEER OFF ST. DOMINGO.—The New York Herald says:—Captain Buckman, of the schooner Jenny Lind, from Guayama, Porto Rico, informs us that, a few days before he sailed, he saw a letter, received by A. Reed, Esq., the English consul at Guayama, from the British consul-general at St. John's, Porto Rico, giving the particulars of an attempt to carry off a British vessel by a pirate or privateer. The vessel captured was a sloop, tobacco laden, bound from Port-au-Prince, St. Domingo, to St. John's. She fell in with an armed schooner on the 25th ult., in the Mona Passage, and was taken in tow and remained captive for thirty-six hours, when she was released on the appearance of a ship and a brig. She immediately proceeded on her voyage, and arrived safely at St. John's. The schooner is described as of about 130 tons burthen, with very raking masts, and painted black. She was armed with a long brass eighteen-pounder amidships, besides two carronades, and was well provided with small arms. Her crew was composed of seventy men, who spoke English. The only colour shown was a blue flag with a red cross. The consul-general cautions all British vessels to be on the look-out for this privateer or pirate, but which he thinks is most probably of the latter class.

NARROW ESCAPE OF LADY ROWE.—The Kingston Journal states, that while Lady Rowe, the wife of the Chief Justice of Jamaica, was sitting under the front porch of the mountain residence of Sir Joshua Rowe, during a storm of thunder and lightning, a large cedar tree was struck and split from the top to the root, and splinters of more than six feet long wrenched out of the centre, and one was thrown more than fifty feet from the tree. The lawn was covered with branches and wedges of wood; indeed, it would be impossible to imagine a more complete demolition. A small splinter struck Lady Rowe in the face, and a large limb was thrown to the very spot on which her ladyship had been standing a few minutes previous to the discharge of the immense volume of electric fluid.

BARBADOES.—The cholera in Barbadoes has swept off 16,817 persons, according to the data of the most recent accounts. It had nearly disappeared from Bridgetown, but still prevailed in the interior of the island.

GUERNSEY.—Cholera has broken out and prevailed to an alarming extent in Guernsey. The deaths were estimated at about 1,500, and so destructive were its effects that in some parts of the island the bodies of the dead had to be consumed by fire. Business was almost at a stand still. On some estates the ravages were frightful, the manager, family, and the whole of the labourers falling victims to the epidemic.

JAMAICA, July 27.—[BY THE STEAMER LA PLATA.]—Cholera still prevails in a fatal form in many of the agricultural districts. Amongst its latest victims we regret to mention Mrs. McKen, the wife of James McKen, Esq., proprietor of the Stanton estate, in St. Thomas-in-the-East; and Mr. Stratton, sub-collector of her Majesty's Customs, at Morant Bay. The mortality in St. Thomas-in-the-East has already exceeded 500, of which 200 deaths have occurred in the small district of Manchioneau, where the disease still lingers. We still hear of it in St. George, St. Mary, Clarendon, and Trelawny. The seasons are said to be favourable for planters, but the scarcity of labour, becoming every day more and more aggravated by the effects of cholera, additional war taxes, high freights and insurances, and decreasing prices, combine to render sugar cultivation more precarious than ever, and to depress all interests in the colony.

AUSTRALIANA.

GOVERNMENT EMIGRATION.—Her Majesty's Commissioners of Emigration continue zealous and active in despatching labour to our Australian colonies. They have given notice that they require two vessels, one to receive passengers for Portland Bay on the 26th of September, and the other for Sydney, New South Wales, on the 29th of September next.

OUTWARD BOUND.—The departures from the port of London for the Australian colonies during the week have comprised eight vessels—two to Sydney, with an aggregate burthen of 1,148 tons; two to Adelaide, with an aggregate burthen of 1,249 tons; three to Melbourne, with an aggregate burthen of 970 tons; and one to Swan River, of 384 tons. Their total capacity was consequently 3,751 tons. The rates of freight are steady at previous quotations.

Bits and Snips.

ROT IN BALIC SHEEP.—Mr. Davidson, of her Majesty's ship Dragon, has sent us specimens of a species of distoma, found in the portal veins of a sheep purchased for the use of the ship's company. The veins were quite filled with them. The species is the distoma lanceolata.—Medical Times and Gazette.

THE WHITEBAIT DINNER.—(From the Press).—The usual Ministerial whitebait dinner, which announces the close of the session, took place at Greenwich on Wednesday. All the Ministers were present, with the unimportant exceptions of the Premier, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the First Lord of the Admiralty, and the Attorney-General. Lord Palmerston took the chair, and, for the first time, was "supported" by two of his colleagues—Lord John Russell being on his right and the Duke of Newcastle on his left. He was opposed, as usual, by Sir William Molesworth. Mr. Wilson was kind enough to attend to the hats and tickets them. The dinner did credit to Mr. Mainquarter's establishment. The usual loyal toasts having been disposed of, Lord Palmerston said that they must not forget their absent friends, and he proposed "The healths of Lord Aberdeen, Mr. Gladstone, Sir James Graham, and Sir Alexander Cockburn." He had no doubt that very sufficient reasons kept them away that day. Lord Aberdeen, he knew, had never been quite well since the attack on the Crimea had been announced; Mr. Gladstone had probably been upset by the Lawley and O'Flaherty disclosures; Sir James Graham was possibly suffering under affliction at the laches of his proteges in the Black Sea, who let the Russians do as they please there; and Sir Alexander Cockburn very likely did not consider the sitting down among a batch of unlucky colleagues as much in the light of a "refresher" after his labours. But he was sure that there could be no doubt as to the degree of esteem in which every one present held the four subjects of the toast (it was, said his Lordship in an under tone, a case of Le Diabli d'Quette), and therefore he would give, with all the honours, their absent friends, and ask Sir W. Molesworth, as the most absent man among them, to return thanks.

FISHERMEN'S SUPERSTITION.—The herring fishing being very backward, some of the fishermen of Burkin, on Wednesday last, dressed a cooper in a funnel shirt with bars stuck all over it, and in this condition he was carried in procession through the town on a hand-barrow. This was done to "bring better luck" to the fishing. It happened, too, in a village where there are no fewer than nine churches and chapels of various kinds, and thirteen schools.—Barr's Journal.

NEWSPAPER MAKING IN CANTON.—The Colonist Observer of the 10th ult. commences an extraordinary supplement:—"The coach passed through Colpetty about half an hour ago, and on proceeding to our office we found the compositors at work, the pigeons having arrived last evening, or night, by moonlight, when they could not see their way into the house. They were, therefore, not caught till this morning. Although we have thus to a certain extent lost the benefit of their services, still we hope to be able to get a full extra ready for the coach." The "extra" then goes on with a description of the bombardment of Odessa.

KIPP MOVING. Man is like a snowball. Leave him in idleness against the sunny face of prosperity, and all the good that's in him melts like fresh butter in hot days; but kick him around, and he gathers his strength every revolution until he grows to an avalanche. To make a figure in this world, you must keep moving.—Pennant Star.

THE FATE OF RUSSIA.—In the writings of J. J. Rousseau—himself one of the most extraordinary men of his age—we find the following prediction touching Russia:—"The empire of Russia will endeavour to subjugate Europe, but in the struggle will herself be consumed. Her Tartar subjects or her neighbours will become her master." Rousseau has been dead seventy-six years.

THE INDIAN SERVICE.—Candidates for "direct" cadetships in the East India Company's service, who are not in future found qualified on their first examination, will be allowed a second trial within the next ensuing six months, and, if not then found qualified, their nominations will revert to their patrons. Those who have already examined and not passed will be allowed one trial more within the next six months, and if they then fail, their appointment will be also returned to their patrons.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.—An extraordinary and rapid Cure of Erysipelas in the leg, after medical aid had failed. Copy of a Letter from Mrs. Elizabeth Yates, of the Post-office, Athrick-road, near Bognor, Sussex, dated January 12th, 1873.

TO PROVE SON HOLLOWAY.

Sir,—I suffered for a considerable period from a severe attack of erysipelas, which at length settled in my leg, and resisted all medical treatment. My sufferings were very great, and I quite despaired of any permanent amendment, when I was advised to have recourse to your Ointment and Pills. I did so without delay, and am happy to say the result was eminently successful, for they effected a radical cure of my leg, and restored me to the enjoyment of health. I shall ever speak with the utmost confidence of your medicines, and have recommended them to others. In this neighbourhood similarly afflicted, who derived equal benefit.

I am, Sir, your obliged and faithful servant,

WATER POISONED

BY LEADEN
PIPES.

"The above engraving represents accurately a section of a leaden pipe, which was employed for a short time in conveying water from a well on the grounds of Mr. Duck, of Bonchurch, Isle of Wight. The original section of pipe is 4 1/2 in. long, 2 1/2 in. diameter, and 5-16 in. thick. A great part of the internal surface is corroded by the action of the water, but, as shown in the drawing, four deep excavations have been made, and another is shaded out of view by the manner in which the section of the pipe has been cut. The water has cut these deep pits almost through the pipe, and not only upon the portion which we have illustrated, but have formed similar channels throughout the entire length."—Expositor.

N.B.—The corrosive water of the Isle of Wight has no effect on Gutta Percha Tubing. See Testimonial below.

DURABILITY OF GUTTA PERCHA TUBING.

Many inquiries having been made as to the durability of Gutta Percha Tubing, the Gutta Percha Company have pleasure in giving publicity to the following letter from Sir RAYMOND DARVIL, Ventnor, Isle of Wight.

(Second Testimonial)

March 10, 1852.

"In reply to your letter received this morning, respecting the Gutta Percha Tubing for pump service, I can state, with much satisfaction, it answers perfectly. Many builders and other persons have lately examined it, and there is not the least apparent difference since the first laying down, now several years; and I am informed that it is to be adopted generally in the houses that are being erected here."

DR. DE JONGH'S

LIGHT BROWN COD LIVER OIL.

PREPARED FOR MEDICINAL USE IN THE LOFFODEN ISLES, NORWAY, AND PUT TO THE TEST OF CHEMICAL ANALYSIS.

The most Effectual Remedy for Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma,
Gout, Chronic Rheumatism,
AND ALL SCROFULOUS DISEASES.

Approved of and recommended by Berzelius, Liebig, Woehler, Jonhann Pereira, Fouquier, and numerous other distinguished scientific Chemists in Europe. Prescribed by the most eminent Physicians, and supplied to the leading Hospitals of Europe. Specially rewarded with Medals by the Governments of Belgium and the Netherlands. Has almost entirely superseded all other kinds on the Continent, in consequence of its proved superior power and efficiency—effecting a cure much more rapidly.

Contains iodine, phosphate of chalk, volatile acid, and the elements of the bile—in short, all its most active and essential principles—in larger quantities than the pale oils manufactured in England and Newfoundland, deprived mainly of these by their modes of preparation.

EXTRACTS FROM OPINIONS OF THE MEDICAL JOURNALS.

"THE LANCET," July 29, 1854.

"In the preference of the Light Brown over the Pale Oil, we fully concur. We have carefully tested a specimen of the Light Brown Cod Liver Oil, prepared for medical use under the direction of Dr. de Jongh, and obtained from the wholesale Agents, Messrs. Ansar, Harford, and Co., 77, Strand. We find it to be genuine, and rich in iodine and the elements of bile."

"THE MEDICAL CIRCULAR," May 10, 1851.

"The utmost reliance may be placed upon the experimental results of Dr. de Jongh, who is one of the most eminent of European chemists; the oil prepared by him enjoys also the additional sanction of the opinion of Baron Liebig and the late Dr. Pereira, in favour of its genuineness and efficiency. Our own experience practically confirms their judgment, and we unhesitatingly recommend the Light Brown Oil as the best for medicinal purposes, and well deserving the confidence of the profession."

"THE MEDICAL TIMES," August 5, 1851.

"We believe that the profession is much indebted to Dr. de Jongh for his laborious researches into the composition and properties of this oil; and we have the high authority of Baron Liebig and the late Dr. Pereira in testimony of the value of those labours."

THE FIELD OF WAR.

THE NARROW ESCAPE OF THE GRAND DUKE CONSTANTINE AT CRONSTADT.

We have received further particulars of the Grand Duke Constantine's narrow escape from drowning while trying a new sailing boat not far from Cronstadt, on the 2nd instant. Besides his Royal Highness, there were three officers, his adjutants, and a non-commissioned officer in the boat. A row-boat was in attendance at some little distance. The wind was fresh, and the boat being apparently top-heavy from too much canvas, a sudden gust threw her on her side, and she began to fill. The Grand Duke threw himself into the water while the boat was sinking, and shouted for the row-boat to come up; limes were thrown out, and the Grand Duke and three of his attendants were saved. The fourth, Prince Galitzin, one of the Grand Duke's adjutants, being no swimmer, clung to the mast, but the whole craft had sunk with him before the row-boat came up. The catastrophe is described as having produced a deep impression on the Grand Duke, who was particularly attached to the young officer.

The Augsburg Gazette says:—"The recent accident to the Grand Prince Constantine, when he was near finding a watery grave, and was compelled to see one of his dearest friends perish before him, made a deep impression upon the Russian court, and a deeper one on the superstitious population who saw in it a figurative representation of the Russian drama. God, the Lord, they say, has this time had mercy and saved the Czar's son, the champion of old Russian ideas regarding the East, from the foolhardy course upon which Russia had entered. Generally speaking a more subdued sentiment has taken the place of the pride and over-weening confidence which lately prevailed, at least so we (Augsburg Gazette) are assured by means of credit in St. Petersburg. Others, however, think that the long slumbering national feeling will awake, as in 1812, and as at earlier epochs of Russian history, and then accomplish more than the over-drilled and thoroughly corrupted army."

THE BALTIC FLEET.

FIGHTING AND VICTORY AT ALAND.

(By Submarine and European Telegraph.)

GRISSELHAMM, August 15, Six P.M.—To-morrow a main attack is to be made on Bomarsund. It has been announced from the pulpits of all the churches in the Isles of Aland, that the Russian sway is at an end. The Russian authorities are flying from the Aland Isles; the peasants threaten them and place them in fear. Some of them are at this place. No cannonading was heard last night.

STOCKHOLM, August 15.—The Allies are before Bomarsund. On the westward 10,000 French troops and 2,000 English marines are entrenched. The Russians made a sortie, but were repulsed with great loss. One fort in flames. One fort is reported as having been taken.

BOMARSUND, August 15.—The strongest fort has been taken by the French and English after several hours' severe fighting.

Scaling ladders were furnished last night, and are to be used to-day against the principal fortress.

The Moniteur of yesterday says:—"An English courier, coming from Stockholm, has brought word to Calais that

2,000 French troops had landed near the works of Bomarsund, and had carried a redoubt of eight guns by assault, without losing a single man. The enemy's fire was essentially defective, and our soldiers did not give him time to rectify it."

A battery of five guns of large calibre was speedily destroyed by the Philæthon, a steam-corvette of the Imperial navy, and the Amphion, belonging to the British squadron. The guns, which had been buried under the ruins of the gun-carriages and the earth, were spiked by the sailors of those two vessels.

The soldiers advanced along the heights which crowned the fortifications.

Vice Admiral Parseval made arrangements to establish communications with the General-in-Chief, so as to be enabled to send him instantly the matériel which he might require.

The troops were animated with the best spirit.

3,000 infantry of the French navy and English marines landed without obstacle to the north of the island.

Two or three vessels were attacking the towers which command Bomarsund with guns of large calibre."

COPENHAGEN, August 7.—Important intelligence may now be expected from Aland, six or seven hours' cannonading having been heard from those islands on the 3rd and 4th.

STOCKHOLM, August 12.—The bombardment of Bomarsund has been going on since the 8th. The Russians hold only the fortress, and are completely shut in.

ALAND, August 7.—A deserter was taken this morning and conveyed to Admiral Chads. He gave information that the garrison expected a reinforcement of troops from Abo, to the number of 2,000. They were to be carried over in sixty gun-boats. On the receipt of this intelligence four steamers were dispatched to cruise off Abo, and cut off any communication with the main land.

PARIS.—The Moniteur contains the following article:—"Despatches have been received from Vice-Admiral Parseval, Commander-in-Chief of the French squadron in the Baltic, dated August 8.

The landing of the expeditionary corps was effected on the 8th, at three o'clock in the morning, without resistance, upon two points of the island of Lumpar, situated at the north of the archipelago of the Aland Islands.

SAILING OF TROOPS.

The 4th Queen's Own Light Dragoons arrived at Constantinople on the 31st of July, after a very prosperous voyage in the steam ship Simla; all well on board.

The 68th Light Infantry, which had been for some time under orders for Turkey, left Malta on the 6th instant, on board the Cambria:—Lieutenant Colonel Henry Smyth; Majors Smyth and Wynne; Captains M'Beath, B.L.C., Blount, Lewis, Somerville, Morant, Hon. D. G. Finch, and Savage; Lieutenants Cassidy, Croft, Shuttleworth, Hamilton (adjutant), Seymour, Fitzroy, Barker, Vaughan, Edwards, and Cator; Ensigns Smyth, Battiscombe, Wilkinson, Light, Tucker, and Marshall; Quartermaster Tunks, Assistant-Surgeon O'Leary 341 rank and file, and five women."

The hired screw-steamer Harbinger having embarked Rear-Admiral the Hon. Montague Stopford and Commander Gordon with stores and specie valued at £100,000, has sailed from Plymouth for the Black Sea.

The steam-transport Avon, with troops, passed the Straits of Gibraltar on the 28th ult., all well.

A letter from Malta, dated the 7th of August, says:—"On the 2nd of August the Himalaya, from Liverpool, the 26th of July, reached this port a little before midnight, with the 2nd Dragoons on board (Scotch Grays). Notwithstanding the lateness of the hour, the forts were lined with the troops in garrison, who received their comrades with vociferous cheers. The following officers arrived: Lieutenant-Colonel Oriffiths, Major Sullivan, Brovet-Major Clarke; Captains Williams, Boyd, and Freeman; Lieutenants Miller (Adjutant), Sutherland, Buchanan, Edwards, Woddrop, and Hunter; Ensigns and Cornets Nugent, Prendergast, and Handley; Quartermaster M'Bean; Assistant-Surgeon Choffle; Veterinary-Surgeon Gardier, 299 troopers and 367 horses. None died. Besides the above, there were on board Lieutenant-Colonel Stracey, Scots Fusilier Guards; Quartermaster Docherty, 33rd Regiment; Lieutenant Stopford, Royal Engineers; Lieutenant Locke, Bengal Cavalry (proceeding to organize the corps of Basli-Bazouks); Assistant-Surgeons Williams and Shorrock, Rifle Brigade; and Veterinary-Surgeon Collins, 6th Dragoon Guards. On going out of port, the Himalaya ran down a boat, in which were four soldiers—two of the 62nd and two of the band of the Buffs. The boat was cut in two, but all the men, save one, William Goodfellow, were saved.

On Wednesday the Lords of the Admiralty determined that all ships bired as transports for the conveyance of troops or freights must be supplied, at the expense of the owners, with three or more of the patent fire annihilator machines, and the necessary number of additional charges.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 3.—The Simla took the 4th Dragoons up to Varua on the 1st, and the Orinoco the Rifles on the following day. A grand move is expected on the 15th, but where the troops are to go is still a secret.

THE 21ST FOR TURKEY.—The 2,500-ton screw steam-ship, Golden Fleece, arrived at Queenstown on Sunday morning, for the purpose of embarking troops and materials of war for Varua. She had sailed from Southampton on the previous Friday. On Monday a company of the 21st Royal North British Fusiliers, numbering 120 privates and five sergeants, sailed from Cork for Queenstown, and, immediately on their arrival, went on board the Golden Fleece. The officers who accompanied this division were Captain E. C. Haines and Lieutenant Duane. The remainder of the regiment, consisting of five companies, embarked at Cork about three o'clock on Monday evening for Queenstown. In addition to the troops, the Golden Fleece conveys to the seat of war forty-five tons of gunpowder from the magazine at Rocky Island, besides a large quantity of shot and shell, and other warlike stores.

TROOPS ON THE MARCH OR UNDER ORDERS FOR FOREIGN SERVICE.

The 3rd company of Royal Sappers and Miners, stationed at Corfu, under the command of Captain Edmund Ord, Royal Engineers, and the 4th company of the same corps, stationed at Malta, under the command of Captain Anthony D. Cruick, having both been sent on to the seat of war in Turkey, the 5th company, at present at Woolwich, under the command of Captain William Mason Inglis, has been ordered to prepare for foreign service, and, when filled up to the requisite strength, will embark for Malta.

Mr. Chartres Brew, for the last thirteen years sub-inspector of constabulary at Cahin, has been addressed by the principal portion of the inhabitants of the town and neighbourhood, on his approaching departure for the scene of the Eastern war, as Deputy Commissary-General to the British forces.—Limerick Reporter.

A large number of the constabulary has volunteered into the Eastern expedition, including thirty of the mounted police, whose duty will be to carry despatches, &c. Constable Vickers, of Cork, and Constable Doudd M'Mahon, of the Voughal police, have been appointed storekeepers in the commissariat department of the British expedition in the East. The pay is 7s. per day.—Limerick Reporter.

RACE COURSE AT LYONS.

The steam-transport Jason, with a detachment of artillery guns and horses, passed Gibraltar, on the 5th of August, for Varna, all well.

The Mauritius steam-transport, now fitting at Southampton, has been taken up to convey the 34th regiment from Portsmouth to Corfu. She is to call at Queenstown to embark a detachment of the 57th for the same destination. She will afterwards convey the whole of the 57th regiment to the seat of war in Turkey.

A great many men have volunteered from the 48th Foot to join the 57th, under orders for Turkey.

SOLDIERS' WIVES AND FAMILIES.

MALTA, AUG. 9.—The Rubicon transport, with a number of distressed soldiers' wives and children, returned from the East, sailed for England on the 4th, Dr. Rebe, late of the Buffs, and now attached to the staff, being in charge.

CAMBRIDGE ASYLUM FOR SOLDIERS' WIDOWS, KINGSTON, SURREY.—This institution (erected in memory of his Royal Highness the late Duke of Cambridge) was visited on Thursday afternoon by their Royal Highnesses the Duchess of Cambridge and Princess Mary, and on Friday by her Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester, who ordered a gratuity for each of the twenty-one inmates.

OUR FRENCH ALLIES.

L'Angleterre et la France,
Reines Sœurs désormais;
Où, Reines Sœurs à jamais;
Au Czar,

Donnont le cochemar;
Et brisant l'espérance,
Du sauvagerie insolent,
Où, du Cosaque saignant,
Au Turc donnent l'indépendence.

Loin de la Patrie,
Mère bien chérie,
Sur le Termagant,
Voguons en chantant;
Et vers le Baltique,
Au pas gymnastique,
Que vapeur et vent,
Nous poussent gaiement.

Ecumant de rage,
Nicolas sauvage,
Nous sommes les fils
De ceux d'Austerlitz.
De la même grève
Partis, quel beau rêve!
Cinquante ans après,
Sur un bord Anglais.

Cet homme héroïque,
Dont le nom majestueux,
Amène aux combats,
Nous a dit, Soldats,
Que mon cœur vous suive,
En Mer Noire ou Baltique,
Fait des vœux pour nous,
J'ai les yeux sur vous.

Le chef intrépide,
Dont la voix nous guide,
Nous a dit, Enfants,
Soyez confiants.
Vos armes terribles,
Nous font invincibles.
Le bataillon noir
Fera son devoir.

Au champ de bataille,
Lorsque le mitraille,
Vomira la mort,
Celui que le sort,
Rendra pour victime,
D'une voix sublime,
S'écrit, Vainqueur,
Vive l'Empereur!

[The above song was composed by a private of the 12th Chasseurs.—Ed.]

KIEL.—The French ship of the line, Donawerth, 90 guns, and the screw corvette, La Place, put into Kiel Bay on the 10th inst. They are loaded with provisions for the French fleet. Both vessels are also completely manned and armed.

DOWNS, TUESDAY.—Yesterday the French frigate, Persévérant arrived, and cast anchor off Deal, from Cherbourg and Calais, with reinforcements and stores for the Baltic.

MALTA.—The Montezuma, Panama, and Albatross, French steam-frigates, arrived on the 5th inst., from Toulon in four days, bringing 551 seamen for the French fleet, to fill up the vacancies of such as have served their time, replace invalids, &c.; these vessels are also heavily laden with warlike and other stores.

ADDRESS TO THE ALLIED ARMIES.—In Varna Marshal St. Arnaud issued the following address to the army on the 30th of July:—"Soldiers of the allied armies!—We shall soon advance into the territory of our enemy. I rely on your obedience, on your bravery, and on your steadiness in the fight. The task we have to complete is no light one. The enemy we have to encounter is strong and numerous. The forty years of peace passed by us in promoting commerce, industry, and the arts, have been spent by him in the study of the art of war and in military preparations. From your bravery and energy France and England await a victory. The eyes of all Europe are on you. Show yourselves the worthy sons of your brave fathers. We march into the land of the enemy, resolved on victory. As conquerors must we see our fatherland, or never more return."

Orders have been sent to Toulon to have the steam-frigate Christophe Colomb, which has been employed as a transport, fitted out as a vessel of war.

THE TURKS AND RUSSIANS.

The Ost Deutsche Post gives a letter from Cincow, of the 7th, which says:—"We learn, from an almost certain source, that the Emperor of Russia is to arrive towards the middle of the month in the village of Maczki, on the frontier of Galicia, and preparations are being made there in secret for his reception. It is thought that this journey to a village close to the Prussian and Austrian frontiers has a great political importance, particularly as of late an interview has been spoken of between the Czar and the King of Prussia in another frontier village."

The Akkar of Algiers announces that the Emperor of Morocco lately convoked a grand divan, to whom he announced his intention to place at the disposal of the Sultan, during the present war, an annual subsidy of thirty millions and 12,000 horses. The divan, the chiefs, and the population generally loudly approved of the determination of Abdurhaman, who has already sent nine millions to Constantinople, on board a Portuguese steamer, and is freighting merchant vessels for the conveyance of the horses.

THE WAR IN EUROPE.

NEWSPAPERS AT DEVNA.—In a letter from a private soldier, published in the Sunderland News, the writer says—"When a man gets a newspaper you would laugh to see the crowd gather round him, as if they were going to eat him, all are so anxious to hear the news."

The news from Wallachia may be told in a few words. On the 3rd and 4th there were still a few Russians—probably deserters—to be seen in the streets of Bucharest. The army is in full retreat, but moves along the side and cross roads, as the highway is so crowded with artillery and baggagewaggons as to be impassable for troops. The Turkish army, which is placed in echelon between the Danube and Bucharest, consists of 85,000 men. About 5,000 men will be stationed near Bucharest as a corps of observation.

THE WAR IN ASIA.

KARS, AUGUST 6.—The state of the Ottoman army is every day improving. Provisions arrive in abundance, and disease and mortality have sensibly decreased. The morale of the troops has been raised under an intelligent and energetic command. The mushir appears disposed to assume the offensive, and the soldiers are desirous to march against the enemy. The Bashi-Bazouks have had a new chief, who has been able to gain an ascendancy over them, and who has already shown them what they may do with discipline in different recent rencontres, where, although inferior in number, they have put the Cossack cavalry to the rout. Desertion continues in the Russian army. Almost every day ten or fifteen deserters from the Russian Mussulman militia arrive here, as well as some from the troops of the line. From the information obtained from them it appears that the Russians have on the frontiers four regiments of infantry, one battalion of chasseurs, one of sappers and miners, sixteen squadrons of dragoons, 2,500 Cossacks, and 1,500 irregular cavalry. They are said also to have eighty pieces of cannon, but this number is evidently exaggerated, unless they take into account the artillery of the Cossacks, which is not very formidable. The Russians have a total of 17,000 troops at the outside on this part of the frontier; if, therefore, the mushir assumes the defensive, according to his wish and the desire of his troops, there is reason to hope that the army of Anatolia will conduct itself in a manner worthy of that of Europe, and that the campaign will be attended with favourable results."

HEAD-QUARTERS OF THE TURKISH ARMY.—HADGI VELIKOI, JULY 16.—On the 1st of this month the Russian garrison of Gumri marched from that fortress, and having passed the Arpa-tchai and the Kars-tchai, two rivers on the Turkish territory, took up a position two hours distant from the Ottoman avant-guard, posted in Soebattan and Hadgi Velikoi, about four hours' march from Kars. On the 3rd instant the whole Turkish army at Kars, with the exception of five battalions of redifs, broke up the camp, and marched to Hadgi Velikoi, where the entire forces are now concentrated. In the course of the week the Turkish left wing stationed at Ardahan arrived. The Turkish army is about 50,000 strong, and the Russians 30,000. On Wednesday, the 12th July, it was decided in the Turkish camp to give battle, and at half-past one in the afternoon the army left its position, and advanced for an hour and a half. The Russians advanced from their encampment, and formed in line of battle. The Turkish Bashi Bazouks (irregulars), under General Kueti (Ismail Pasha), advanced and opened a desultory fire, and the Russians sent out their skirmishers. At the moment when the action commenced a most terrific storm broke over the heads of the army, and a deluge of rain poured down. The Russian army at once retired to their former position, whilst the Turks remained three hours on the ground during the entire storm, and then slowly retired. Since the 12th, the army has been daily alarmed by the Russians, who advance in serried columns, but, on seeing the Turks drawn up in battle, they invariably retreat. Their object is evidently to fatigue the Russian troops, and then to make a night attack. General Bebutoff commands the Russians. Thirty pieces of cannon are on their way to Kars, but they will arrive too late to be of much use. As it is, the Turkish artillery is in fine condition, and strong enough for immediate necessity. I trust sincerely that my next will record the signal discomfiture of the Russians, and the advance of the Ottoman army into Georgia.

TRENIZOND, JULY 18.—Great activity prevails at present in the port of Sansoun. The loading of wheat and barley is going on without cessation; eighteen vessels are anchored in the port, and all freighted for Constantinople or Varna. Should the port of Odessa be closed against commercial vessels, Sansoun is destined to assume a considerable importance in what concerns the exportation of corn. There exists in this country exceedingly fine wheat, which would find an easy sale in the market of Marseilles and the north of France.

NAVAL OPERATIONS IN THE BLACK SEA.

A telegraphic despatch, dated Vienna, Sunday, announces that it was fixed that ninety thousand allied troops should sail from Varna that day on an expedition against the Crimea.

When in the harbour of Sebastopol on the 26th ult., the Terrible, the Fury, and the Cæcile, having on board Brigadier-General Sir George Browne and General of Division Canrobert, and several other officers of the two allied armies, to make a reconnaissance, the Russian batteries opened fire; one shot went right through the Fury at the water line, and another through her main rigging; the Terrible had, likewise, a shot through her rigging.

CONSTANTINOPLE, JULY 31.—The day before yesterday the Turkish fleet, under Hassan Pasha, left, with all the flat-bottomed boats that could be collected, for the Black Sea.

In letters from St. Petersburg, published in the German papers, it is said that the Russian Admiral at Sebastopol reports to the Czar, that divisions of his fleet make daily excursions on the Black Sea, and often proceed to a great distance from port without meeting any of the ships of the allied fleets.

THE ARCTIC SEARCH.—The Diligence store-ship arrived at Woolwich on Sunday afternoon from Disco, where she parted with the Phoenix screw steam-sloop, Captain Edward A. Inglefield, and the Talbot, tender to the Phoenix, on July 7.—The Diligence on her return to England, and the Phoenix and Talbot proceeding up the Winnepeg between Disco and the Main, and on their way to Beechey Island with stores for the relief of Captain Sir Edward Belcher's expedition. The last winter in the north had been the most severe experienced for many years past by the inhabitants of the Danish settlements, and the reports received at them from every quarter alluded to the uncommon severity of the weather, even for these high latitudes. Capt. Inglefield's expedition experienced very boisterous weather during the passage of the vessels from England to Disco, and unfortunately the Talbot sprung a leak, which damaged about 5,000 lbs. weight of biscuits, and to make up in some degree for the damaged biscuits the Diligence transferred all she could spare to the Phoenix. The crews of all the vessels were quite well when they parted, and the use of the razor had been abolished on every part of the faces of the officers and men, and the natural hair allowed to grow in the fullest luxuriance. No intelligence had been heard of any of the ships at present in the Arctic regions, but some news of them may be expected about the end of September next. The Diligence had very disagreeable weather during her passage home. She is expected to be paid off at Woolwich in the course of the present week.

POSTAGE.—The Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty have arranged with her Majesty's Postmaster-General that all letters received from officers of the royal navy serving on foreign stations, for conveyance to the United Kingdom, upon which the full amount of postage has been paid in advance in penny postage stamps, will be treated as paid by the Post-office authorities.

A HINT TO THE YANKEES.—The Boscawen, 70, Captain Glanville, having received a number of hands from the steam-sloop Spithead, Commander Kynaston, got under way from Spithead, with a fine breeze, and sailed for Greytown. The experiment ordered to be made by the First Lord of the Admiralty in this ship by Mr. Edward Duke Moore, of Ranton-abbey, Staffordshire, of brewing good beer for the men from concentrated wort, has proved eminently successful, as have other experiments in soldiers' barracks; but where condensed water, so abundant in steamers, has been used, the result has been even more gratifying.

PEMBROKE YARD, AUGUST 12.—We have had another launch here, that of the Falcon, a 16-gun screw-steamer, which took place yesterday, successfully, before an unusually large number of spectators. She was named by Lady Waldegrave, now staying at the adjacent fashionable watering-place, Tenby. The following are the dimensions of this splendid little craft: Extreme length, 184 feet; length between the perpendiculars, 160 feet; ditto of keel for tonnage, 148 feet 1½ inch; breadth extreme, 31 feet 10 inches; ditto for tonnage, 31 feet 8 inches; ditto moulded, 31 feet; depth of hold, 17 feet 5 inches; hurlthen in tons, 747½ tons. She is a sister ship to the Harrier, lately launched here and now fitting for sea at Portsmouth. She will be sent to the same port for a similar purpose, and is now in dock being jury-rigged for that end.

APPOINTMENT.—Lieutenant Robert Robertson, who has for several years past had the charge of the steam department afloat at Woolwich, has been appointed, with the sanction of the Admiralty, Surveyor of the Mercantile Marine of this country under the Board of Trade.

DANTZIG, AUGUST 10.—The Tweelingen, Daniel and Wilkin, of Lemmer, H. F. Klein, master, arrived here yesterday from Riga! With six others she has been for about two months lying in Riga, and has lately been allowed to leave Riga, and proceed on her voyage by permission from Sir C. Napier! Can this be true! To those uninitiated in the secrets of the coalition Cabinet, it may seem that the blockade in the Baltic is as great a farce, and as ridiculous a waste of public money, as the establishment of an agency at Elsinour to despatch supplies from Dantzig.

GALLANT SAVING OF LIFE.—The senior lieutenant, Mr. Annesley, of the flag-ship Conway, at Queenstown, on hearing the report given by the gun-room steward of a boy being overboard, made the best of his way from the breakfast-table and gallantly dashed overboard, and succeeded in saving the boy as he was sinking.

FRENCH NAVY AND MERCHANT SERVICE.

The Black Eagle, Admiralty yacht, Master Commander Letley, having had fitted to her the "velocimetre," invented by M. Dronet, a French scientific gentleman, went to Stokes Bay on Monday to test it, when it performed all the duties reported of it—viz., indicating the speed with clock-like accuracy most satisfactorily.

A letter from Varna of the 29th ult., in the Moniteur, says:—"The Vauban steam-frigate, which had quitted this place on the 7th, to conduct Turkish troops to Chomouk-su, returned here on the 24th, after having fulfilled its mission. She had on board five Circassian chiefs, who came to present their respects to Marshal de St. Arnaud, and to express in his presence the sentiments of their nation towards France and England. They have visited the allied camps, and admired exceedingly the appearance, discipline, and manoeuvres of the two armies. On the 27th, the Turkish Admiral, Ahmed Pasha, who had quitted Varna at the same time as the Vauban, returned here with the Naib Pasha, Schamyl's lieutenant, on board. The Naib speaks Arabic and Turkish, and is regarded by his countrymen as the spiritual head of the country. Fifty notables of the Caucasians accompany him. All these personages have come and given to Marshal de St. Arnaud the assurances of their devotedness, declaring to him they were ready to conform to his instructions. Before leaving for Constantinople, the Naib again visited the Marshal, with four or five of the principal chiefs. These men are all remarkable for their lofty stature and their warlike and antique aspect."

STEAMERS.

COALS.—The consumption of coals at the coal depots of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Packet Company in India, China, and Australia, is 10,000 tons a month, or 120,000 tons a year. At Southampton the consumption of coals by the steamers leaving that port is considerably above 100,000 tons annually.

POSTAL PERFORMANCES.—The following is an approximate estimate of the number of letters originating in and destined for England, conveyed in the course of a year by British mail packets, viz.:—By Cunard's packets, 2,400,000; by the mail packets, viz.:—By the Brazil packets, 300,000; West India packets, 1,100,000; by the Pacific packets, 200,000; by the Peninsular and Oriental Company's packets to and from India, China, and Australia, 2,300,000; by the Cape of Good Hope packets, 280,000; by the West Coast of Africa packets, 50,000.

LAUNCH OF THE TYNE.—NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE, AUGUST 11.—Yesterday afternoon a very noble iron steam-ship was launched from the building-yard of Messrs. Ravenhill, Miller, and Salkeld, at Walker, three miles below this town. She is for the West India Royal Mail Company, and is four feet longer than the Great Britain. Her length is 320 feet, breadth thirty-six feet, depth thirty feet, and burthen in tons 1,850. She will carry 2,500 tons, and will have accommodation for 300 passengers. She has four decks, is a paddle-steamship, and is forty feet longer than any vessel hitherto built on the Tyne.

IRON SCREW COLLIERIES.—There are now fourteen screw colliers running between the Tyne and the Thames, and during the month of July they carried 23,587 tons of coals to London, equal to 8 per cent. of the entire importation by sea. Most of them make a voyage every week, and upwards of 4,800 tons of coals were carried by two of them, the William Hutt and Northumberland, in twenty-eight days. There is also a considerable number of these vessels building in the Tyne and at Blackwall which will be put into this trade.

THE GREAT BRITAIN.—The screw steam-ship, Great Britain, Captain Gray, which left the Mersey on the 15th of June for Australia, was spoken on the 29th of the same month, in lat. 8.24 N., long. 27.30 W.—Seventeen days out—by the Great Britain ship arrived from Callao, at Queenstown. Captain Gray reported the passengers all well.

CAPTURES FROM THE RUSSIANS.

RIO.—Two Russian merchant vessels were offered at auction on the 10th in the Exchange, but found no bidders. This was in consequence of the Journal do Comercio having published an article some days previously, stating that the sale of Russian vessels must have been made before the declaration of war to exempt them from capture; therefore, they will probably be broken up or allowed to rot in harbour.

RUSSIAN PRIZES.—The Lords Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury have, in compliance with a request of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, directed that the several collectors at the outposts be instructed to bring to account the proceeds of the sale of prizes and their cargoes, with reference to the Act of the 17th of Victoria, chap. 18, in order that the same may be transferred to the naval prize account of the Bank of England; and, in pursuance of this order from the Treasury, the Commissioners of Customs have caused their principal officers at the several ports to be made acquainted therewith, and have directed that any sums which may be received by them on account of the sale of Russian prizes be remitted by bill of exchange direct to her Majesty's Paymaster-General, Whitehall, to whom the bill is to be endorsed, and the Comptroller of Customs at the port is to advise the Accountant-General of the Navy, Somerset-place, of the remittance so made.

The Russian ship Catherine Charlotte, of Riga, Daniel Kalling, late master, and the Carl Magnus, of Pernau, Frederick E. Rassmus, late master, taken in the port of Hull by the customs' officers, sailing under simulated papers, have both been condemned by the Court of Admiralty, and ordered to be sold for the benefit of the Crown.

On Wednesday the decree, condemning the Russian ships Industrie and John lawful prizes to her Majesty's cruisers, was issued from the Court of Admiralty. With respect to the Ocean Bride and Bathia, taken in the port of Leith, the Court has deferred judgment for further proofs. The Argo, Russian ship, captured by a revenue cutter off Queenstown, Cove of Cork, on the 6th of May, has been restored to her owners, the Court considering she was not liable to seizure.

Military.

DEATH OF COLONEL HOGARTH, OF THE BRITISH ARMY, BY CHOLERA.—ALBANY, July 27.—A telegraphic despatch from Quebec announces the death there on Monday, by cholera, of Colonel Hogarth, commanding the 26th Regiment of British Infantry. He was in command of the regiment during the Gavazzi riot.

The 97th Regiment has lost between eighty and ninety men in one week by cholera in the Piræus.

Mr. Keyse's invention for biting off the ends of cartridges, by simply notching a portion of the outside circumference of the muzzle of the muskets in use in the British service, having been favourably reported on by the select committee of officers of the Ordnance at Woolwich, the Lieutenant-General of the Ordnance has directed that it should be communicated to the inventor that the plan has been submitted to the Commander-in-Chief, with the object of having the invention fully tested by the infantry at present under a course of instruction with the Minié musket at Hythe. Mr. Keyse has received notice, in answer to a communication he has had with the French Government, that his presence will be required about the end of the present month in Paris, to submit his invention to the Emperor Napoleon.

Captain Cleveland's company, 12th battalion Royal Artillery, is to go through a course of repository instruction previous to embarkation for Malta. The company has been placed under orders for foreign service at that station, as it is intended to form a depot there, whence men of the Royal Artillery may be drawn to supply any casualties that may occur during the war in the East, instead of having to send home to Woolwich.

Peermoney and Militia.

DUBLIN, August 14.—The Marquis of Londonderry, as Lieutenant of the county of Down, has received a letter from Lord Palmerston, informing him that her Majesty has been graciously pleased to approve of the North Down Regiment of Militia, of which his lordship is colonel, being formed into a rifle corps; and that her Majesty's pleasure, in this respect, has been signified to his Excellency the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

PORTSMOUTH.—The 4th Middlesex Militia, Lieutenant-Colonel Bagot, are now under orders to proceed to Portsmouth on the 23rd inst.

Medical.

SINGULAR FACT IN DEATH-STATISTICS.—It appears that the total number of deaths in the cholera-year (1849), for all England and Wales, was 440,839; but in 1850 the number of deaths fell to 368,995, being not only 71,844 less than in the cholera-year, but even less than the number of deaths of the year preceding that of the cholera by as many as 30,838. . . . If we take the deaths of the two years together which preceded the cholera, and strike the mean, and treat the year of the cholera and the compensating year that follows in the same manner, we shall find that the four years present nearly the same average. . . . So that in reality it is found, when the aggregate of the four years is taken, either for the whole of England or for the metropolis only, that no greater number of people died in those years because of the cholera intervening, than if the cholera had not visited us.—Dr. Granville, in the Medical Times and Gazette.

COPENHAGEN, August 10.—As the cholera has re-appeared among you, I beg to mention a remedy which saved many lives here last summer, as far as I know, not failing in any single instance where it was used. It is simply from ten to twenty drops of ammoniac water (salmiak spiritus), in a spoonful of water, well stirred, to be repeated immediately after each vomit, and every hour or two otherwise, as required. It neutralises the acids in the stomach, causes instant and powerful perspiration, and the patient is saved. At all events, it can hurt no one.

FRANCE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, THURSDAY, AUGUST 17.

The only political event of the week has been the publication of the correspondence of M. Drouyn de Lhuys and Count Nesselrode with the ambassadors of their respective Courts at Vienna, relative to the Eastern question. The only fault found with the excellent despatch of M. Drouyn de Lhuys, is that it does not contain the least hint of making the Czar pay up any part of the expenses of the war! While the general opinion here is, that one of the best modes of preventing despots breaking the peace is to make them pay the damage, when they force their neighbours to incur the cost of going to war. The prospect of opening further negotiations at Vienna is positively sickening every body. Whether just or no, the English Government are suspected of being in favour of this do-nothing policy; and these proposals, which smelt strongly of further procrastination, coming just at the closing of Parliament, is looked upon as a very bad sign. In Paris people have no faith in any of your ministers, except Lord Palmerston, but he is probably the most popular Englishman ever known in France. His clear, manly, out-speaking style, which translates capitally into French, has made him an unmistakable favourite with all classes; and there is not a café in all Paris not familiar with his name. His late declaration in Parliament, in allusion to Austria and Prussia—that he cared little whether they were with us or not, while France and England were united—was a compliment which found its way to every Frenchman's heart. They say here that his lordship, like Canning, is too clever for his party. They are afraid of him.

You will be pleased to learn that the Russians have sustained another defeat of the most signal and decisive character, in which our gallant allies the Turks once more covered themselves with glory. The battle I allude to was fought on Tuesday, in the Champs de Mars, when the final repulse of the enemy before Silistria formed the grand feature in the programme of the amusements of the Emperor's fête. An imitation of the fortress was erected, of great extent—the principal bastion covering full 200 yards of ground—and of sufficient strength to bear the weight of the artillery and cavalry, which played the chief parts in this holiday warfare. A regular pantomime in two acts was got up for the occasion, in which all the performers from Franconi's, the Cirque, and the Hippodrome were engaged, assisted by soldiers, who, in horse and foot, amounted to about 1,500 in number. The French shine particularly in these affairs, and the military auxiliaries entered into the spirit of the representation in a manner quite extraordinary. The proceedings are supposed to commence at early dawn; numerous sentinels keep careful watch on the ramparts of the citadel, and of the fort of Abdul Medjid, which occupies the fore-ground. Bodies of soldiers are observed to advance on the out-works, which they strengthen with the various materials lying about. Mussa Pasha, the governor of the place, comes forward with a numerous staff, and encourages the soldiers; suddenly an alarm is given; peasants are seen to rush in as if pursued by the enemy, who soon appear, with General Gortschakoff at its head, and prepare to besiege the town. The Russian soldiers at once commence the construction of a battery right against the fort; gabions, fascines, and bags of earth are brought forward and arranged, while the sharpshooters protect the workmen. At last an assault takes place, but the Russians are repulsed with great loss. Gortschakoff, furious at the result, gives the signal for a fresh attack, in which the Russians are again beaten back. The Turks make a sortie, slaughter the enemy at their guns, and capture several pieces of cannon. Mussa Pasha testifies his satisfaction at the conduct of his troops; but while returning thanks to Providence for the victory he has just obtained, he is mortally wounded by a shell, and falls nearly lifeless in the arms of his followers. At this intelligence, his wife and children rush to the scene of desolation; the dying warrior embraces them and expires. Imagine all this interspersed with the terrific roaring of the artillery, charges of infantry and cavalry, and, above all, the frantic applause of thousands of the populace, who received every success of the Turks with roars of delight, while the proceedings of the Russians drew forth expressions of feeling exactly the reverse, groans and hissing attending every evolution they made.

The decorations of the Place de la Concorde, the Champs Elysées and other public places, were nearly the same as last year, and when night drew on the illuminations presented scenes of fairy splendour of which no description can convey an idea. The ascent of balloons, boat races, public orchestras for dancing and other al fresco gaieties of a Parisian fête filled up the amusement of the day, to which the weather, notwithstanding some occasional threatenings, kindly lent its indispensable aid to the last, Aquarius considerably reserving his visit until Wednesday morning, when he favoured us with a regular deluge. The whole thing went off admirably;—yet there was one drawback in the minds of the populace to the pleasure of the day, and the question heard on all sides was "where is the Emperor?" "Pas ici!" "C'est étrange!" In fact the absence of his Majesty was a theme of universal surprise with the multitude—ever prone to mystery—who were racking their brains to discover some secret cause for an absence which to them appeared perfectly unaccountable.

The question is very easily answered. Their Majesties at Biarritz are not only in the best possible health, but in the enjoyment of that perhaps next best blessing—perfect freedom from the restraints and observances which surround them at Paris and elsewhere—a necessary evil of very exalted station, but not the less ennuyeux on that account. Letters from the spot state that the health of the empress had particularly benefited by the change of air, and that both herself and the emperor appear to enjoy themselves to the utmost, and that their stay there as long as they possibly can remain, was a point long since resolved on. Besides this, the delicate position of her Majesty is a very natural reason for the emperor's remaining with her as long as possible. So much for the wonderment at the fête of the 15th August not being graced by the presence of Napoleon III.

The activity of the police here against those scoundrels who, not content with cheating their customers, poison them at the same time, is positively delightful. Scarcely a day passes but what some examples are made public. The great delinquents in this species of victimising are the wine-dealers and milk-sellers. One of the latter, a wholesale rascal, has just been made an example of; his name is Lefèvre—there is a savage satisfaction in gibbeting the names of these fellows—living in the Rue d'Amsterdam, close to the Rouen Railway, and who was, therefore, supposed to receive his wares fresh from the villages in the vicinity of Paris. He was last week sentenced by the "police correctionnelle" to six months imprisonment and a fine of 20,000 francs (£800) for drugging his milk. The case of this scamp was peculiar, as he was president of a society long established under the sanction of the authorities for the protection of the public against the very frauds of which he himself was so active a promoter. This rogue has driven a most flourishing trade for a length of time, it being proved by his books on the trial that his illicit profits during the last three years amounted to no less than 240,000 francs (£9,600). Hence the large sum in which he was fined. The cheap wine-dealers are, if possible, still worse. Not content with watering their wine—which might, in fact, be of service, seeing that their stuff is originally some abominable compost—after watering it, they add some fiery poisonous compound to give it the appearance of strength. These wretches sell their deleterious mixture at threepence (six sous) a quart; and, though condemnations take place almost daily, the fraud does not appear to be in the least abated. Among the most profitable abominations perpetrated by these knaves, is the manufacture of white wine from vinegar, the latter paying no octroi duty on entering Paris, while the duty is about five sous a bottle on wine, which is therefore a clear gain to that amount for these profidi caepones. By the aid of sugar of lead, and other noxious substances, the fraudulent transformation is easily effected. Notwithstanding the frequent exposures, and the severe penalties almost constantly daily inflicted, the profit is so great that the number of wine-shops are daily on the increase, for there is unlooked-for restriction here as in England, of the number of licences. The importation of the English system would be a real public benefit.

As usual in the warm weather, the number of suicides in Paris has undergone a notable diminution, only two having taken place within the last fortnight. One of them is rather peculiar. Two young men of fortune were sitting together at their rooms, in a fashionable street on the Boulevard. One of them complained of the extreme heat of the weather, quietly walked to the window, opened it, and jumped into the street, from a height of more than fifty feet. He was, it is hardly necessary to say, killed on the spot. The deceased was the young Viscount de ———, and belonged to one of the wealthiest and noblest families in France. As I am on the subject, I subjoin the following abstract, from the official returns, giving the number of suicides in France for the last twenty-seven years: In 1825 the number was 1,739; 1827, 1,542; 1828, 1,754; 1829, 1,904; 1830, 1,756; 1831, 2,081; 1832, 2,156; 1833, 1,973; 1834, 2,078; 1835, 2,305; 1836, 2,340; 1837, 2,443; 1838, 2,586; 1839, 2,747; 1840, 2,752; 1841, 2,814; 1842, 1,866; 1843, 2,020; 1844, 2,973; 1845, 2,084; 1846, 2,102; 1847, 3,647; 1848, 3,306; 1849, 3,683; 1850, 3,592; 1851, 3,508; and in 1852, 3,673. Making a total of 71,418, and an average of 2,645 per annum. It will be remarked, that the number increases, as it were progressively, every five years. The highest number was in 1852, the lowest in 1827.

The annual races at Laçon, in Vendée, came off last week, but were comparatively unimportant; the horses and owners, though very respectable for a remote quarter like that part of Brittany, being totally inconnu among the racing circles of Paris and London. The great earl was the "Departmental Stakes," for 1,000 francs, won by a mare called "Roulette," belonging to M. de Trèves, and the "Emperor's Stakes," for 800 francs, were carried off by "Coraire," an animal owned by M. de Nini.

GOLD FIELDS.

GOLD IN WESTERN AUSTRALIA.—"We are in receipt of Perth papers to the 31st of March. They give in full an account of the discovery of gold in that colony, and that too over a considerable extent of country, at a short distance (about twenty-five miles) both from Perth and Fremantle. Several parties are at work already, sinking shafts. This will lead to the abandonment, by the Home Government, of the transportation of criminals to Western Australia.—Melbourne Argus."

HEAR THE OTHER SIDE.—Our letters from Western Australia, dated the 14th of May, entirely disprove the accounts of gold discoveries in that colony. According to previous advices, great excitement prevailed on the subject, and prospecting parties were in the course of organisation. All that is now said about it is, "The gold farce is over, and not an ounce has been found."

PLYMOUTH.—The Marlborough, Captain Young, which left Plymouth on the 1st of January, and arrived at Port Phillip on the 18th of March—seventy-eight days, sailed from Melbourne the 12th of May, and was again off Plymouth on Thursday, the 16th of August—eighty-nine days. She experienced baffling winds in the South Pacific, and was driven as far south as 61½ deg., with easterly winds; passed some icebergs, and on the 11th of June was covered with snow and ice. Rounded the Horn on the 18th in a heavy south-west gale, the thermometer as low as 16 deg.; touched at Fernando Po, a Portuguese penal settlement, on the 7th of July, and at Flores on the 27th, for supplies. Since leaving the north-east trades has had light winds, with thirteen days calm and easterly airs. She has brought 64,000 ounces of gold, 11,000 sovereigns, and 100 passengers, among whom are several wealthy colonists. The Essex, with a heavy mail, left four days before the Marlborough. A considerable number of first-class passengers are waiting to come home in good ships.

MORE GOLD.—The Maid of Judah has arrived from Sydney with 18,598 ounces of gold, valued at £71,392.

A FORTUNATE DIGGER.—In June, 1853, there left Banff, in the Minerva, for Australia, Mr. Phenister, from Lossiemouth, with his two sons. They went to the diggings, where, it is said, they have been most fortunate, Mr. Phenister having from one hole, almost in one day, dug up not less than 146 lbs. of gold, or equal to £5,000.—North British Daily Mail.

GOLDEN MORROS.—A vain man's motto—'Win gold and wear it.' A generous man's—'Win gold and share it.' A miser's—'Win gold and spare it.' A prodigal's—'Win gold and spend it.' A broker's—'Win gold and lend it' (on firm security and good interest). A fool's—'Win gold and end it.' A gambler's—'Win gold and lose it.' A sailor's—'Win gold and curse it.' A wise man's—'Win gold and use it.'

"Stockholm, August 15th,

"News from Bomarsund has been received to the 12th instant. 10,000 French and 2,000 English are established behind entrenchments west of the fortress. On the 12th the Russians made a vigorous sortie, but were driven back with considerable loss. The fortress was on fire."

TURKEY.

CONSTANTINOPLE (via Marseilles), Aug. 5.—Marschal de St. Arnaud returned on the 2nd inst. to Varna, after a conference with the Sultan.

The Journal de Constantinople states that a heavy cannonade was opened upon Sebastopol during the last reconnaissance. Some shells fell even in the town itself.

An action took place on the 29th ult., at Babadagh, between the Basbi-Bazouks, under Yonussuf, and the Cossacks. The latter were repulsed. A French colonel received seven lance wounds, but none of them dangerous.

CONSTANTINOPLE (via Trieste), Aug. 7.—The expedition against the Crimea, and, consequently, against Sebastopol, has commenced.

Anapa and Nevessitch are still occupied by the Russians.

Accounts from Constantinople to the 7th speak of the expedition to the Russian coast as still in prospect. Marschal de St. Arnaud returned on the 2nd instant to Varna. Negotiations were carried on between the Circassian envoy and the Porte for a joint plan of action against the common enemy. The Circassians, it is said, in order to obviate future difficulty, desire that the Porte shall formally disclaim all pretension to resume the sovereignty over the mountain tribes of the Caucasus, which it surrendered in 1830. It is not expected that any difficulty will arise on this score; indeed, it is said that a compact was completed on the 4th instant, between Schamyl and the Porte, amounting to an offensive and defensive alliance.

EGYPT.

The following circumstances, not generally known, respecting the poisoning of the Viceroy of Egypt, are extracted from the Osservatore Triestino:—"The Viceroy desired to drink. His two attendant Mamelukes presented to him a cup of water, which had been poisoned with diamond-dust; but, fearing that the poison would fail in its effects, they strangled him. They then immediately left the palace, and after five hours' hard riding arrived in the principal square at Cairo. They here went into the shop of a baker, Testa by name, and, after having refreshed themselves, confessed to him that they had committed a crime, and offering him a ring of the value of £3,000 and a purse of 300 guineas if he would provide a place of concealment, at the same remarking that a person of distinction had given them 200 purses (about £750) five days previously. Testa refused to shelter them, and the result was the same at two inns where they applied. When they found that they could nowhere obtain a hiding-place, they bought two cars, and departed no one knows where. The physicians said Abbas Pasha died from apoplexy."

COWES, THURSDAY.—The first race on the card of the "Cowes Town Regatta" was for four-oared boats belonging to yachts. The following boats started:—

Fancy.....	Rev. R. Hartopp.....	Red.
Eclipse.....	Mr. H. Pearson.....	White.
Julia.....	Mr. W. Pearce.....	Blue.

This was a well-contested race throughout, which was won cleverly by the Julia by about a length. The next race was for four-oared boats rowed by shipwrights or apprentices belonging to East or West Cowes. The following boats were entered:—

Names	Owners	Flags.
Elfin.....	James May.....	Yellow and black.
Gipsy.....	Joseph Cato.....	Nelson's arms.
Dove.....	Henry Scudamore.....	Blue.

A very capital start was effected, and for a considerable distance they kept scull and scull together; but on the second round Gipsy took the lead, followed closely by the Dove, and so well matched were they together that for more than a mile before arriving off the flag boat, it was impossible to say which had the foremost position. This was continued up to the finish, when the committee declared it to be a dead heat. The result of this contest must be deferred until to-morrow.

Parliamentary.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 12.

In reply to an inquiry by Mr. HUME,

LORD J. RUSSELL stated, that a communication having been made by the Emperor of Russia to the Austrian Government that it was his intention to evacuate the Principalities, the Austrian Minister for Foreign Affairs had intimated to the Ministers of England and France that his Government was nevertheless ready to interchange notes, as previously agreed upon, with a view to obtaining securities for future peace. The English and French Ministers had stated the general nature of the securities which would be required, and which were specified in the paper of the French Minister for Foreign Affairs recently published in the Moniteur. It would remain to be seen, he added, whether the Austrian Government would put its armies in action to obtain those securities by force, if they could not be obtained by negotiation.

The LORD CHANCELLOR, kneeling, presented her Majesty with a copy of her royal speech, which the Queen proceeded to read in a clear and distinct tone of voice.

Her Majesty's Speech is given elsewhere.

Often as her Majesty has now addressed her Parliament, and greatly admired as her royal speeches have been for the purity of intonation and judicious emphasis which have characterised their delivery, never has a Queen's speech been more happily delivered than that which thus closed the session of 1854. Its least praise is that, without an effort, every syllable was heard in every part of the lofty and nobly-proportioned hall by every person in it, and that this result was obtained by her Majesty without straining her voice.

The LORD CHANCELLOR, falling upon one knee, received the royal speech from her Majesty, and then said:—"It is her Majesty's royal will and pleasure that this Parliament be prorogued to Thursday, the 19th of October, and this Parliament is accordingly prorogued until Thursday, the 19th of October next."

Her Majesty then rose, and giving her hand to Prince Albert, left the House, and returned to Buckingham-palace amid the cheers of her people.

The Nemesis of Power. By JAMES AUGUSTUS ST. JOHN. Chapman and Hall, Piccadilly.

This extraordinary work the talented author has dedicated to his three sons: they are not the only ones to profit by its contents, if properly studied. The subject is a most important one. Nemesis is the personification of Justice, and is, therefore, engaged equally in rewarding and in punishing. Her movements are slow, but irresistible; and she is ever at work in human society, ensuring ultimate triumph to the good and perdition to the wicked. She may be regarded, therefore, as the inseparable attendant on Power, to uphold and encourage it when exercised for the benefit of mankind, to repress and chastise it when perverted to their injury or destruction. The author says, "A practical illustration of the results of unjust power has been given by my son Bayle, in his 'Purple Tints of Paris.' Nemesis has often been at work in France, but her task is obviously not yet accomplished. When or how her next blow is to be struck is uncertain, but whenever it falls, it will probably be decisive."

We give one specimen of the author's style of treating this subject, regretting that want of space will not allow us to treat it fully:—

When, out of the vast aggregate, a small number of individuals are chosen, for their supposed competence, to regulate public affairs, they are not by this not segregated from the nation, but continue always to make part of it; so that, when by accident their will is opposed to the will of the greater body, it is for the lesser, and not for the greater, to succumb. In all communities there is a religion in politics which renders principles sacred, which reconciles men to the loss of property, of life, nay, even of fame itself, for the good of that abstract creation which we call "country."

This was embodied in the old poetical phrase—

"Dulce et decorum est pro patria mori."

But if by country we signified only so many rods of land, inhabited by two-legged rational entities, how could it be sweet or honourable to die for a thing thus stripped of all the religion of politics?

By country we mean brotherhood; that is, identifying ourselves with the whole nation as one united family; we fill and penetrate our whole being with the thought that it is glorious to die to promote their lasting welfare. What greater proof of love can a man give than to lay down his life for his friend? and what is friendship compared with the love of country—with that holy and pure principle of action which God has planted deepest in the human heart, and which always flourishes there till vice and sordid selfishness have dried up the last particle of warmth and nourishment? Wee to that nation in which the love of country ceases to be a general sentiment—in which patriotism is sneered at—in which it is regarded as a mark of simplicity to labour disinterestedly for the good of others!

Routledge's American Handbook. ROUTLEDGE and Co., Farringdon Street.

In these days of rapid locomotion, when America is literally almost as close to us as the Rhine or Paris, we hail with gladness what a few years since would have been thought an absurdity—"A Handbook to America." Almost a necessity to a very large portion of our own community, not merely to the tourist, but even to those who advertise their firms as of such a street, London, and New York, or Philadelphia! So rapid is progress, that we must not be surprised, if in a short time these last-mentioned tell us seriously, when we call at their London establishment, that we shall get what we want at their other house.

This is not the least perfect of that very important class of literature—guide-books. The directions to the traveller are as concise as possible, and by the arrangement of the different routes from one great point, he may immediately find the route from that point to the State in which his place of destination is located; and from the capital, or principal commercial city of that State, to the interior towns. In doing this, New York is made the starting-point after crossing the Atlantic; and from that city the various routes into the different States of the Union, and the interior routes of those States, are described. For example, if he desire to visit one of the interior towns of Georgia, he has only to turn to the table of contents, and find, "From New York to Georgia;" then turn to the page in the book, and see the remarks on the State, the different routes into the interior, hotels, fares, public buildings, places of amusement, &c. The work is adapted to the wants of the travelling community, and is not encumbered with useless matters. Many of the smaller towns are not noticed, nor do they lie sufficiently in the way of general travel to make their insertion an object. On referring to the map, places and routes will be found, not laid down in the book. The railroad lines described on the map are up to the latest date.

Summer resorts, watering-places, best localities for hunting and fishing, &c., &c., are described, together with the best means of reaching them. Another portion of the book is set apart for advice to mechanics and instruction to emigrants.

As an advertising medium this work has peculiar advantages.

The City of the Sultan. By MISS PARDOE. G. ROUTLEDGE and Co., Farringdon Street.

The Messrs. Routledge have reproduced this delightful book in a cheap form, this being the fourth edition of a work of which upwards of thirty thousand copies have been already sold. We congratulate that portion of the reading community whose means are limited on being able to obtain for eighteen pence, that which was originally published at two guineas.

It is not for us to praise the charming writings of Miss Pardoe; her works possess an established fame; but all who desire information upon Turkey, its manners and customs, can scarcely obtain what they wish without reading these delightful chapters of travel. A lady travelling in Turkey has many advantages which would be denied to men, and is admitted to those sacred spots not to be desecrated by the presence of the rougher sex; and many of such scenes are amongst the most charming and interesting. MEETING OF LODGES, &c.

BEADON LODGE, No. 902, STAR AND GARTER, NEW BRIDGE.
WEDNESDAY, 16th.—The brethren of this Lodge met for the purpose of installing Brother Wm. Watson, P.M., of Lodges No. 23, 25, and several others. This ceremony was performed by Brother Beadon, in his usual eloquent and impressive manner. The W. M. initiated two gentlemen into the craft, Messrs. White and Davis, and passed Brother Charles, appointed Brother Tiley, S. W., Brother Goodman, J. W., Brother Cooper, treasurer, and re-appointed Brother Haywood as secretary. Previous to closing the Lodge the W. M. acquainted the brethren that the pedestals which graced and adorned the Lodge were the gift of Brother Beadon. In commenting upon them he called the attention of the brethren to the exquisite labour and workmanship bestowed (the decorative portion, we are given to understand, is the labour of Brother Lee, who, in the same true masonic liberality, presents to the Beadon Lodge). The W. M., in continuation, called upon the brethren for a vote of thanks to Brother Beadon, to be entered upon the Lodge minutes, which was most unanimously responded to. Brother Beadon, in returning thanks, wished to impress upon the brethren that no craftsman could work without good and efficient tools; he, therefore, considered that the Lodge, being new in the order, should not be deficient, and that, under the instruction of so able a master as Brother Watson, they would not only work up under his guidance, but that eventually they would do honour to themselves and the Lodge they represented. The brethren then adjourned to a banquet, supplied by our worthy host, Brother Adams, replete with every delicacy of the season of the year. The dessert was provided by Brother Norris of Isleworth, from his extensive grounds; pines, hot-house grapes—in fact, everything that the most fastidious epicure could require. The evening was enlivened by some delightful singing by Miss E. Taylor, accompanied by her brother on the piano. Upwards of forty, including visiting brethren, sat down. Our correspondent having to leave early, upon business, left with the impression that his brethren would spend a most pleasant and agreeable evening, blended with that social and brotherly feeling, that on separating they could say, "Happy have we met, happy do we part, and happy may we meet again."

AGRICULTURE.

THE DUKE OF MARLBOROUGH.

It has long been a well-known fact in agricultural circles that his Grace the Duke of Marlborough is one of the most able promoters of the useful science of agriculture in all its branches. In furtherance of his object, his Grace has announced a variety of ploughing matches to take place on the 22nd of September next in a large piece of land (nearly 100 acres) situated at Campfield, a short distance from Blenheim-palace. The following prizes will be given by his Grace:—

Class 1.—Open to the tenants of his Grace the Duke of Marlborough.
To the best ploughman with a pair of horses	£1 10 0
" second best	1 0 0
" third best	0 10 0
" best ploughman under eighteen years of age	1 0 0
" second best	0 15 0
" third best	0 10 0
" owner of the team that performs the best work, a silver cup, value	5 0 0
Class 2.—Open to strangers; all Oxfordshire and Berkshire.
To the best ploughman with a pair of horses	£1 10 0
" second best	1 0 0
" third best	0 10 0
" best ploughman under eighteen years of age	1 0 0
" second best	0 15 0
" third best	0 10 0
" owner of the team that performs the best work, a silver cup, value	5 0 0

The noble Duke has set an example which we hope to see more generally followed, not only in the liberal manner shown in the above announcement, but in the treatment of the labourer, who is ever ready to work on his estate, where he can obtain constant employment and better wages than are given in the neighbourhood of Oxford. His Grace has of late years bestowed considerable attention upon the culture of flax, of which he grows a large quantity, and occasions employment for a great number of hands.

FARMS AND FARMERS.—Farms occupy two-thirds of the land of England. The number of the farms is 225,318; the average size is 111 acres. Two-thirds of the farms are under that size, but there are 771 of above 1,000 acres. The large holdings abound in the south-eastern and eastern counties; the small farms in the north. There are 2,000 English farmers holding nearly 2,000,000 acres; and there are 97,000 English farmers not holding more. There are 40,650 farmers who employ five labourers each; 16,501 have ten or more, and employ together 311,701 labourers; 170 farmers have above 60 labourers each, and together employ 17,000.—Census Report.

EXTRAORDINARY CROP OF POTATOES.—Mr. Robert Charlton, nurseryman, of Wall, near Heston, has just reaped a portion of his potato crop, of the lapstone kidney variety, producing at the enormous rate of 130 loads of 20 stone each, per English acre, of large clean potatoes, perfectly free from disease. It is stated that the above satisfactory result was effected principally by allowing a sufficiency of spare in planting, viz., three feet between each row, and one and a half feet between each potato or set—the sets being whole potatoes, and tolerably large ones. It is believed that the adoption of this measure is the best preventative of disease, the plant being thus kept in a healthy condition by a free admission of air.—Academy Journal.

AN HISTORICAL FACT.—Wheat was first sown in the North American colonies in 1692, on the Elizabeth Islands, in Massachusetts, by Censob, at the time he explored that coast. That has been 252 years ago, and since that time so great has been the increase of this cereal, that in the year 1849, according to the census of 1850, the product amounted to 100,593,899 bushels. Up to 1610, and perhaps later, England supplied the colonies with the greater part of their breadstuffs. How changed is it now. All Europe is looking to us for bread. The bread sent to the colonies in 1610 was not cast upon the waters never more to return. Two hundred and forty years afterwards it rolls back in a continuous stream to gladden the hearts of half-famished millions in England, France, and Belgium. The descendants of men originally landed and scourged from their shores, and forced to make their future habitations beneath the uninviting sky—more humane than the taskmasters of the ivy fathers—are now striving to return good for what was considered an evil, by supplying them with bread.—American Paper.

CHESTERFIELD GOOSEBERRY SHOW.

The annual meeting for the exhibition of gooseberries grown in the neighbourhood of Chesterfield was held at Mrs. Pinder's, the Star Inn. From the awards it appears that the premier prize was gained by a berry (Herbert's London) 24 pennyweights 12 grains in weight. This, however, was not the heaviest, as one grown by Mr. Huphison, of Glue-man-gate, was 26 pennyweights 12 grains; but unfortunately, on the morning of the show, it burst, and consequently became disqualified. At the close the members and friends sat down to an excellent dinner.

SCARCITY OF APPLES AT OXFORD.—Owing to the severe frosts of May last, which destroyed nearly the whole of the apple blossom, this useful fruit is very scarce in many parts of the country. Last Saturday at Oxford, a farmer residing near that city sold to a retail dealer of fruit, two bushels of the early "May Pippin" for 18s.; this time last year a bushel was worth about 3s. 6d. or 4s.

better, as regards the two essentials, "hand and seat," than gentlemen, and can ride horses that a gentleman could not, and are they to be told when and how they are to use their whip and spur? Will a spur on their small foot be a more dangerous instrument, or one oftener used when not required, than when on the heel of the opposite sex? If letters were written about the way the poor horses are used who, day by day, draw the great, heavy, four-wheeled carriages full of people, their shoulders often raw from the ill-fitting collar, and their backs bruised by the whip, I should not be astonished; but to write about a lady not using her spur, if she thinks fit and her horse requires it, I cannot understand. I say this, if a horse goes better, easier, and more pleasantly with a spur, let a lady always ride with one. Would not a gentleman ride with one under such circumstances? I think every lady ought to have her ride made as agreeable to her as a gentleman has. A lady, if a good horsewoman, never looks to greater advantage than when mounted; no exercise is more graceful or more conducive to health. Then, at least, allow a lady to have the same means at her own command to enjoy this exercise as you would give to the gentleman who may be riding with her. Few ladies will use their spur unless required, and I should advise almost every lady who rides much, never to be without a spur, so that if she ever requires it she will have it ready.—Yours, ANTI-HICCOG.

SNATCHING BARBEL AT LEA BRIDGE.

Sir,—I was much astonished on Saturday morning, when your paper was brought to our house, at seeing my name in it in connexion with the above heading, and I trust you will allow me, through the same channel, to explain the affair. Your correspondent was right about a certain gentleman catching a great number of fine fish at the mill-tail in our water; but in an unfair way, I beg most respectfully to contradict him. The facts of the matter are these:—In the afternoon I went over to see what sport he was having, and was asked by him to take his rod, while he lit a cigar. I did so, and struck at a fish. I suppose I missed him with the hook he bit at, but caught him with the bottom one in the shie (which will occur at times to the best of anglers). The basket being a very heavy one, the triangle hook lacerated his shie so much that he would not have lived had he been put in the water again, which was our intention.

The certain gentleman has been a subscriber to our water for many years, and I feel confident would not be guilty of any unfair play; neither would my father allow it, should it come to his knowledge.

I presume your correspondent, "A Lover of Fair Angling," was either annoyed at not taking fish, or had partaken of rather too much wine with his dinner, that he could not distinctly see whether the fish were hooked foul or fair, for most certainly he made one grand mistake. The gentleman was not using three but two hooks.

Your placing the above in your "Letter-bag," will much oblige.—Yours, respectfully, Horse and Groom Tavern, Lea-bridge.

INTERPRETERS IN TURKEY.

Sir,—Having resided on the shores of the Black Sea, and scarcely ever having found an Englishman acquainted with the Turkish tongue, I am glad to see by the Times of Wednesday, August 16, that one of our countrymen at Redout Kaleh, Georgia, is bucking-to, as many more ought at once to do, at home as well as in the East. I subjoin the extract from the Times.—Yours, &c., HAJJI BABA.

"We have now a Tejuiman (Angles, dragoman), a clever little fellow, who speaks perfectly ten languages; he was born in Bagdad, has lived in France and England, in Turkey, and in Greece, and has married an Italian wife. I am learning Turkish under his auspices, and can already make myself understood among our friends of the fez. The construction of the verbs is most singular; for example, there are two future tenses, one signifying the determination, 'I will do it,' the other expressing 'At present such is my intention.' On a first hearing, the language sounds remarkably like gibberish; but when the ear becomes more accustomed to it, it is not unpleasant. First studies are, of course, mere efforts of memory, as the language is so entirely different from any other, both in derivation and formation. I have found the little Turkish phrase-book which was sent out to me most useful, and have constantly carried it about with me, and have now learnt the whole of it by heart. I have also made some additions; the little fat Bey here (in whose quarters I have daily calibouques and coffee) is constantly adding to my dictionary, and to-day has told me that 'ekce ayeler' (two months) I shall speak 'pek ayce Tureh' (very good Turkish). The grammars of Turkey offer their own language when in intercourse with each other, and speak pure Arabic, and those are deemed the most polished who speak it the most purely."

TROUT.

Sir,—I was much annoyed about May by seeing the trout in a large pond of mine die of a disease quite new to me. Some of your correspondents, no doubt, can account for such; and if they will kindly do so, I shall be much obliged to them, as well as to you for inserting this in your paper. The disease is a sort of mildew, which shows itself on the fish in spots of half an inch in diameter, and increases until the whole of the body is covered. The eyes protrude from the head the third part of an inch, and are covered with a glazed film, so that the fish is perfectly blind. If you catch the fish, the eyes burst in the struggle, and the fish is left completely eyeless. There are a great many healthy fish amongst the diseased ones, which makes the matter more difficult to account for. I have seen mildew show itself on fish when too closely confined in large numbers, but never saw the eyes affected in the manner just described. When I say that I have seen mildew show itself before, I mean three years back, but never before that time, although I have been in the habit of watching fish, and keeping them in small ponds, &c., for the last twenty years. Trusting to your usual indulgence for taking so much of your time up, I remain, Sir, your obedient servant,
INQUIRER.

WASPS.

Sir,—I know not what contributions towards your paper are most worth consideration; but the following, if admissible, is much at your service. I think it may be acceptable to some of your readers at the present season, when the wasps are very troublesome and very numerous; therefore, I will give you a short account of the manner—to me novel—of destroying them. About noon, or soon after, when the nasty reptiles are abroad in search of food, fumigate the hole with sulphur; then dig out the comb, and destroy everything in it; then place a ripe bottle, half full of water, in the hole, leaving the mouth of the bottle within an inch of the surface of the surrounding earth; and, on taking it up on the next morning, you will find every one of that family safe in the trap. I will give an instance. Yesterday we discovered a nest, not far from the house. The fore-mentioned plan was adopted, and this morning we found no less than five hundred and twelve wasps in the bottle, and not a survivor to be seen about the place, as is usually the case when the old mode of destroying them is adopted.—I am, yours, RESTIERS.

NEEDLE RIFLES.

Sir,—In a few weeks I shall perhaps be able to speak to your correspondent "Calcedonia" with authority respecting "Needle Rifles." But I know little about revolving fire-arms, and I am rather prejudiced against them, because I am certain that if they are got up cheaply, and not most carefully made, they are very dangerous. It strikes me that, except with an air-gun, it would be impossible to shoot rabbits with your small bullets with much success, because the report of the gun would drive them away so as to afford you time to load over and over again; and, for that reason, a revolver would be no use. As to very young—almost unledged—rooks, it might be different; because they would sit, without moving, for several successive shots to be made at them. But bullets are nasty things to play with, and are useless and dangerous for running and flying shots; you never know where they go, or what damage they may do. I shot at a small bird with an air-gun last year out of a parlour window. The bird was sitting on an iron-hurdle; the bullet struck the hurdle and glanced back, and hit the window—will close to myself and a friend who was sitting by me. We immediately put down the air-gun, and resumed our bottle of port; a much more safe and agreeable pastime than playing with bullets.

TURF TALK.

"The chosen sport of a great and a free people."
OUR SAILOR KING.

THE thick clouds that so long covered over the St. Leger are gradually dispersing, and the first glare of light reveals to us the astounding sight of Boiardo standing, alone and unapproached, the favourite for the great race at Doncaster. It is evident that wonders are not to cease even in our days. King Tom is irretrievably gone, but his mournful backers remain to sing his dirge, the last echo of which will not have died away till after the day of reckoning at the far-famed corner of Grosvenor-place. That no marked favourite should be suffered to retire alone, the parallel of the Derby is likely to be strictly observed, and Dervish, following the example of Autocrat, appears ready with alarming celerity to dance after his rival to the silent shades. But the retreat of Dervish caused no advancement in the position of Acrobat. A surprise was in store, and it came like a thunder-clap. The demonstration in favour of Boiardo was simultaneously made in London and Manchester on Monday. From 10 to 1 at Tattersall's, we find him backed at York at 7 to 1, and on the success of his stable companion Meteora, in the Great North and South of England Biennial, he at once sprung to the short price of 3 to 1. Boiardo's pretensions to St. Leger honours would appear, however, to rest on the shallovwest of grounds. Public performance, we are aware, is too frequently no more than a reed, on which little reliance can be placed; but, at the same time, to trace the career of this son of Orlando may not be entirely without advantage. On his first appearance at Goodwood, last year, in the Rous Biennial Stakes, he defeated Quince by a neck, with the following moderate lot making up the field—Astolfo, sister to Incense, Dandelion, Little Gerard, and Baalbee. At the York August Meeting, on the condition of saving his stake, he allowed Tros to walk over for the colt sapling. For the Municipal Stakes at Doncaster, he beat the Physalis colt by two lengths, with Julian a bad third. This same Physalis colt, by Pantaloon, was afterwards absolutely lost by Acrobat in their match over the Rowley mile in the First Spring at Newmarket. On the opening of the year, Boiardo may be

FISHING STATIONS. No. 8.—HAMAR POINT.—DRAWN BY T. H. WILSON.

WEYBRIDGE is about twenty miles from the Metropolis, and is an excellent locality for genuine angling. Trout are often plentiful. Mr. ALFRED, jun., of 51, Moorgate-street, on one occasion captured at this spot thirteen Trout; one weighed twelve and a half pounds, one seven, and one five pounds; and the residue were of more than average size. They were caught trollin; with a small artificial gudgeon. This proves that the regulations respecting poaching have operated well for the interests of the angler. This neighbourhood abounds with all the usual Thames fish, including fine Bream, Perch, and Barbel, and there is an immense variety of water; so that the angler is sure of sport at any season of the year, provided the weather is favourable. The best house for anglers is the "Lincoln Arms," kept by R. and J. HARRIS, who have been the principal fishermen here for many years. The other houses are the "Ship" and the "King's Arms;" the fishermen being KEEN, PURDUE, and MILBURN. Trains run from the Waterloo Station at short intervals every day.

TATTERSALL'S.—MONDAY.

Although there was little activity in the betting to-day, yet some of the operations were to a high degree important.

For the Great Ebor Handicap, Heapy experienced a further decline, until 100 to 3 was reached; in fact, so unfavourable an opinion was entertained of him, that even money was bet against his starting. Meanwhile, his stable companion, The Grand Inquisitor, was advanced to the position of first favourite—2 to 1 offered, 5 to 2 taken. Tros had staunch adherents, who increased their investments by taking 8 to 1 to various sums; and a strong disposition was manifested to back Dr. O'Toole at the same figure, but layers were "cautious." The last bet wanted was 500 to 100.

The St. Leger.—The almost forgotten Boiarde came out with such a rush that, at one time, he was as good a favourite as anything for this event. At the commencement he was backed for 500 even against The Trapper; at the close, however, The Trapper took the lead at 7 to 1, and 9 to 1 was offered, bar one. The principal investments which were made with regard to Boiarde were at 12 to 1 and 10 to 1. 375 to 75 were taken twice about Acrobot; and 1000 to 60 offered against Dervish. 2000 to 60 taken about Marley Hill; 1000 to 25, 500 to 15, and 330 to 10, about Dr. O'Toole. The odds quoted against Ivan and Champagne were taken to only small sums. In the early part of the afternoon 500 to 40 was taken about King Tom, but towards the close 1000 to 5 was betted with an eagerness which palpably betokened that even his starting is considered extremely problematical. 600 to 200 was taken about Scott's "lol."

The room was very thinly attended.

MANCHESTER.—TUESDAY.

There have been some important changes in the betting since our last. Heapy, who has been unhealthy in the market for some time, has gone to 40 to 1, friendless. Grand Inquisitor, Doctor O'Toole, and Tros were the only horses in force this morning. For the St. Leger Dervish has receded to 15 to 1, while his stable companion has been freely backed at 10 to 1. In others we have little change to notice.

Showery weather, and the attendance of general company consequently somewhat scanty. Sport abundant and highly interesting. Speculation brisk. By the bye, some means ought to be adopted to prevent the admission of "Welchers" into the betting enclosure; to-day the ring was infested with them.

Since last year some excellent improvements have been made in connexion with the Subscription Stand; and every attention has been paid to the condition of the running ground, which is in capital order.

considered to have achieved his best success by winning the Buckhurst Stakes at the Craven Meeting; he then defeated Baalbec and Phaeton with apparent ease. The 2,000 Guineas must be still fresh in the recollection of most persons. Boiarde started at 5 to 4 on him, and Hermit and Middlesex at the finish were clear of both him and Champagne. In the Newmarket Stakes, on the subsequent Friday, he was a bad fourth; not only were Champagne and Middlesex again before him, but Apollonius also took the liberty of precedence. At Goodwood he won the Grattwicke Stakes, beating El Dorado cleverly by three-quarters of a length, his other opponents being Fact, Boer, Prince Arthur, and the Phyalis colt. Favourably as this performance may be viewed, it cannot be forgot that Cook Phasant, giving twelve pounds for his year, made a dead heat of it with El Dorado for the Burghley Stakes at Stamford. Taking the whole of Boiarde's running, therefore, into consideration, it cannot warrant the assumption that he alone has a chance of carrying off the Leges. At one time he laboured under the imputation of whistling, but that charge at least seems to have vanished into air. That he is no more than a mile-horse his victory at Goodwood must satisfactorily disprove. But still, looking to his antecedents, we can hardly reconcile to ourselves the position he holds in the betting, and we must regard with suspicion the sudden rush by which he attained it. It is loudly asserted, however, that a trial has taken place at Malton, when the son of Orlando and Miss Bowe out-paced the whole team. This smacks something of the marvellous, and yet what is there that people will not give credence to in respect to turf affairs? At the present moment it seems as if they would back Acrobat against the field for the Great Yorkshire Stakes, but we shall be in the hands of many of our readers before the result of the race can be known. Should Acrobat win with anything like ease, his turn of favour may come, or he may be doomed still to linger in the shade of the great Boiarde; if defeated, we may presume that 100 to 1 will go begging. Despite these fitful starts of cloud, storm, and sunshine, the Leges is still an enigma, but we doubt not that John Scott holds the key.

York is holding her rich carnival of sport, and bidding fair to outdo her honourable rival, Doncaster; but as the meeting falls so late in the week, we are able only to cast a hurried glance on the events already decided. The matchless Virago, as a matter of course, made the Yorkshire Oaks her own; her appearance having scared away all racing respectability from the field, a brace of less than mediocrities went to contest the 40 sovs for second, but even there, too, the race was all one way.

By some unaccountable error of judgment Dr. O'Toole, after having several times been beaten at a light weight in handicaps, was thought good enough to win the Great North and South of England Biennial Stakes. He was made the favourite at 3 to 1, and finished seventh in the race amid a field of ten. Meteor's victory, like that of Marryas last year at Goodwood, was a score in favour of the Northern stables. Rifleman maintained his reputation by hitting the mark for the Convivial Stakes, though the proximity of the Cavalier, even at a 5lb allowance, was hardly what the most enthusiastic supporters of the Touchstone colt expected, or perhaps desired.

The Ellerdale filly, now named Ellermire, has added to her fame by winning the Chesterfield Handicap and the County Plate. The Ebor Handicap has witnessed the triumph of Grand Inquisitor, who furnishes another instance of the uncertainty of the test of public running. Beaten easily by Ivan as a two-yr-old, he was nowhere in the Maiden Plate, won by Jetty Treffz at Manchester in June last. He became a rattling favourite at the eleventh hour to the discomfiture of Heapy, who has literally pilled loss upon loss on the heads of his unfortunate backers, till they were finally handed over to the tender mercies of the Grand Inquisitor.

The Black Duck Stakes afforded a proof of the pluck that constitutes an English sportsman; out of five nominations at 1,000 sovs each, four came to the post, and Rambling Katie found her way home in advance, to the full satisfaction, it may be presumed, of Lord John Scott. Fortune, however, is still at odds with Lord Glasgow; in his brace of matches he paid forfeit for one, and was beaten in the other. Jack Sheppard's making booty of the Prince of Wales' Stakes must tend to increase the number of the Lord of the Isles' adherents. The acceptances for the Great Yorkshire Handicap are declared, amounting to forty-one; among the number, the winner of to-day, Grand Inquisitor, is to be found at the light impost of 5st 8lb. The Cleveland Handicap has closed with an acceptance of twenty-three.

There are several meetings during the coming week, though but few of them possess more than a local interest. The most important are Derby, Lincoln, and Chelmsford.

CROWS CAN COUNT THREE AND NO MORE.—A few months since we were (says the Olive Branch) riding in a stage-coach with several gentlemen, when the conversation turned upon the subject of crows, and many interesting anecdotes were related. One gentleman said that he knew that crows could count—at least as far as three—for he had often proved it. Being troubled with crows in the field, he had often attempted to shoot them; but they knew what a gun was as well as he did, and therefore kept out of his reach. He then concluded to put a small booth in the field, and place some carrion—a dead horse—within gun-shot. From this place he supposed he could fire at them when they alighted to eat. Whenever he would enter the booth the crows would all sit upon the distant trees, and not one would come near until he was gone; then all would alight except the sentinel, who remained to give warning if danger approached. The gentleman, finding his plan to fail, thought he would deceive them. So he took his gun with him to the booth, concluding that when they had seen one go away, the crows would think the coast clear, and descend to the bait. But when his gun left the booth a crow came out "caw, caw, caw" (there goes one), but not a crow would leave his place. The next day the gentleman took two persons with him to the booth, and then let them depart one at a time. The crows on the trees saw the first, and cried out "There goes one," in their own peculiar dialect; then, when the other went, "There goes two," but they would not light, for they had counted three when they entered. The day following, the gentleman took three others with him. When they went out one by one, the crows cried, "There goes one," "There goes two," "There goes three," and when the last man was out of sight they all alighted, and the gun of the fourth man did it work. The gentleman, thinking this thing had been tried repeatedly, and the crows could count as far as three, but not as far as four, concluded to try it again. When they will ascend to the number of four, it is yet to be ascertained.

attractive character will be given, the articles of which are being prepared, and will appear early next week.

THE ANMAGH STEEPLE-CHASES are fixed to take place on Thursday and Friday, Nov. 2nd and 3rd, under the stewardship of M. C. Close, Esq., High Sheriff, Lord Lurgan, Lieut. Colonel Caulfield, M.P., James Mathew Strong, Esq., J. W. McGeough Bond, Esq., and John Porter Harris, Esq. Five events, to which £155 will be added from the bill of fare.

THE celebrated sire Tearaway, Ringleader, Rinaldo (engaged in the St. Leger), Louisa, the Tattler (engaged in the Derby, 1855), and Rakeway, all the property of Mr. L. Keegan, the Irish trainer, are advertised for sale on the Thursday of the Curragh September meeting, with their engagements and without reserve.

SPORTING MISCELLANEOUS.

THE Devon and Somerset Stag Hounds will meet on Tuesday, the 29th of August, at Simonsbath, and on Friday, the 1st of September, at Twitchin-farm, Cullions, each day at half-past ten o'clock.

A NOVELTY.—The attention of several of the Sevenoaks townfolk was called the other morning to a white swallow, which was on the top of the savings-bank. An attempt was made to capture it, but it was unsuccessful.

The reports of the grouse shooting are much more favourable than was anticipated; the 12th was, in most parts of the country, a very indifferent day, and the returns of the sport on that day are therefore nothing very remarkable, and form no criterion of the character of the moors. The severe winter has driven the birds lower down than usual, and many of the lower moors, which are in general not very well supplied, are this year fully stocked. The birds are everywhere very wild, although by no means scarce, and are already packing in many quarters. The heaviest bag which I see reported is that of Mr. Stirling Crawford and party, who got 150 brace on the 12th, and 340 brace on the 14th, at Dalwaspidal, the number of guns not being mentioned; Lord Paumure bagged seventy brace on the 12th, and the Duke of Beaufort and party, at Glenlyon, fifty brace. Black game, hares, and partridges are said to promise very favourably.

ROMFORD.—The accounts which reach us from all parts around this neighbourhood speak most favourably of the prospects of the shooting season. The coveys of partridges are both numerous and strong, and this may be attributed to the fine weather during the sitting and hatching season. Hares are also more plentiful than in former years. The pheasants also, although thus early, are reported to be very numerous and the birds fine. Indeed we have seldom known a more cheering prospect for the sportsman than the approaching season presents, and we have no doubt that good sport will be the fortune of our sporting friends.

About a week ago, Charles Cattaneach, stalker to Sir Maxwell Steel, Bart., on the estate of the venerable Colonel Maclean, of Ardgour, cleverly shot, with a double-barrelled gun, two very fine golden eagles, birds now comparatively rare in the Highlands; and no less rare is the chance offered to the sportsman for killing, especially right and left, two such noble birds. They were adult specimens, male and female, and had no nest in the locality.—Inverness Courier.

THE MOORS AND THE GROUSE.

On Rodrip-fell, near Alston-moor, on the 12th, despite of the rain, Mr. Jos. Richardson, of Penrith, wine-merchant, killed ten and a half brace of grouse; and on Monday last the same gentleman bagged fourteen brace. On the same moor, on the same days, Lieutenant P. Musgrave, of Eden-hall, shot twenty brace—six brace on the former and fourteen brace on the latter day; and R. Tinkler Esq., of Eden Grove, on the same moor and days, killed twenty brace. On Melmerby-moor, Mr. S. Carmalt, of Penrith, on the 12th, only killed three brace; but on Monday he was more fortunate, and bagged ten brace. R. Musgrave Esq., of Eden-hall, was similarly successful. Mr. John Young killed nine brace in the two days, and Mr. J. Hogarth shot about the same number. Henry Howard, Esq., of Greystock-castle, and party, on the moor of Matterdale, did not enjoy good sport, for a heavy rain began to fall soon after they had commenced operations. The Hon. Colonel Lowther, Captain A. Lowther, and friends, did not go out on Shap and Birbeck Fells, till Tuesday, and then they found the birds both scarce and shy. W. Marshall, Esq., M.P., and his three sons and party, had only poor luck on their moor, near Gilsland. On the whole, the sport so far has been considerably below par. In Penrith, grouse sell at 5s. a brace; in Carlisle the top price is 6s. a brace. Large quantities have found their way to the dealers here, principally from the north. There is no doubt that the lion's share still falls to the poachers.—Carlisle Patriot.

At Lochlee, the 12th was looked forward to with high hopes of good sport; but rain, wind, and mist were the order of the day, and the hills were so close that nothing could be done. The Right Hon. Lord Paumure and party went out to the low grounds, and had good sport. Lord Paumure killed sixty-four brace; his nephew, Mr. Young, forty-three ditto; Colonel Ferguson, eighteen ditto. At Glueflock, Colonel Dundas went out two or three hours and killed eighteen brace. On the 14th, Lord Paumure killed forty-nine brace; Mr. Young, thirty-nine ditto; Colonel Ferguson, thirty-eight ditto; Colonel Dundas, at Glueflock, forty-one ditto. All parties say that the grouse are plentiful, but something shy, owing to the late rains. At Mildden, the sport was not so good; thirty-nine brace was the highest number that we have heard of on the 12th.

Mr. Dyce Nicol and friends, at Birse and Ballogie, shot thirty-one and a half brace. The Duke of Buckingham and party have had good sport; Mr. Laverock and friends first-rate—bagging, in a few hours, upwards of a hundred brace. The parties shooting at Aboyne, Finzean, and Hill of Fair, have had average success. Weather very favourable.

From Strathdon we learn that the 12th was ushered in with a bright sun and favourable breeze. The whole of the hills and corries in the Strath at an early hour resounded with a rattling fire. The success of some of the parties was as undernoted:—At Skellater, Mr. Grant, of Monymusk, shot forty and a half brace; Mr. A. Grant, of Monymusk, thirty-eight brace; and Mr. Jackson thirty-three brace. At Forbes-lodge, Geo. Forbes, Esq., shot forty-five and a half brace, two hares, and one pheasant. At Newe, Mr. Hardy, Sir Charles's head gamekeeper, went out at a late hour of the day and shot thirteen brace, and reports the grouse as pretty numerous and strong on the wing. At Deskry-lodge, Mr. Elves had an excellent day's sport, and bagged upwards of fifty brace. Although disease appeared the early part of the spring among the grouse, still we anticipate that there will be plenty of birds and good sport during the season.—Montrose Standard.

THE PERTHSHIRE MOORS.

The morning of Saturday, the 12th of August, dawned very auspiciously for the eventful opening of the shooting season generally throughout the north. The previous day with us was one of the most brilliant, with sunshine and a cloudless sky, that we have enjoyed during the summer; but towards evening the atmosphere grew dull and lowering, with heavy dark clouds and a cold blast; and a thick rain began to fall a little after sunset, which continued till the following morning, with little intermission. Saturday also was very dull; dense grey mists shrouded the Grampians in their watery screw; and there were drizzly showers till after mid-day, when the weather cleared up. The mist, indeed, was so dense on Saturday morning, that parties at most of the various shooting quarters did not betake themselves to the hills till the day was well advanced. Accordingly, the result of the first day's shooting can give no fair idea of what success may yet attend the sportsmen. In fact, the reports which we have obtained from our numerous correspondents throughout the county of Perth, relating to Monday and Tuesday week, show that the sport on the Perthshire moors has, upon the whole, been pretty good, considering the paucity of birds, which, being fully a fortnight earlier than usual for the 12th, were found rather too strong on the wing. In the early part of the season the coveys were very large, but disease having made its appearance some time ago, especially on the hills of Perthshire (to which we had occasion formerly to allude), the birds are found much less numerous than might have been expected in a season apparently so favourable in all other respects.

A very great number of sportsmen have passed through Perth en route for the north; in fact, many more, we believe, than for several years past; and we learn that the Perthshire moors are all let, except those in the possession of their proprietors.

Since the commencement of the shooting the coaches and other conveyances from the Highlands have not brought nearly the usual number of game-boxes to town, as compared with former years. On the Monday the London mail-train carried about fifty boxes of grouse to the south. The Duke of Wellington coach, from Inverness, brought fifty boxes to Perth in the evening; and on Tuesday sixty-eight boxes. On Tuesday morning the Duke of Wellington van arrived here with sixty-one boxes, and on Wednesday with seventy-eight.

The following are some of the results of the sport:—At Logiealmond the Earl of Mansfield killed eighty-three brace of birds with his own gun. At Kinloch, Strathbraan, T. Brown, Esq., and party, had very good sport, though the stock of young birds was very scant. Mr. Brown killed fifty brace; Mr. Jaffray, forty and a half; Mr. Fisher, thirty-three; and Mr. Muir, twenty, besides hares and snipes. At Kinloch, Drummore, Major Hill killed, on the 12th, forty brace. At Rochallion, on the 12th, James Condie, Esq., and party, killed 110 brace. At Phonsess, on the 12th, Mr. Pyne and Mr. J. Massey Stanley shot ninety brace. At Dalwhinnie, on the 12th, Mr. William Finnie shot thirty-one brace. At Dalnaspidal, on Saturday, Mr. Stirling Crawford and party killed 150 brace. At Dalnaspidal, on the 14th, Mr. Stirling Crawford and party killed 320 brace. At Glenbraine Messrs. Biddie and Graham killed 170 brace.

On the 12th there was a goodly number of sportsmen in Glenesk, and Lord Paumure killed seventy brace of grouse, a greater number than ever before was killed by any one in the glen in one day.

All accounts from the northern counties agree in reporting the game as plentiful, though in many cases wild and strong.—Perth Courier.

ROYAL LONDON YACHT CLUB.

August is a bad month for meetings in the metropolis; but, nevertheless, the R. L. Y. C. had a good muster at their monthly meeting on Monday last. Mr. Eagle, the treasurer, ably filled the chair, in the absence of the flag-officers of the club; and among those present we observed Messrs. Asclatine, Turnbull, Cooper, Weedon, Dutton, Wilson, Knight, Greening, Jackson, Carr, Oliveira, Farmer, Dormay, Webster, Moore, Addison, Richards, Goldsmith, Bouner, Ayckbourn, &c. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read by the secretary, Mr. T. Gregory, and confirmed by the club, ten candidates were put up for ballot, and elected. Attention was called to the Dover regatta, fixed for Tuesday, August 29th, and a letter read from Commodore Goodson, urging a full attendance, at that hospitable port, of the clubmembers, a recommendation which we have no doubt will be duly acted upon. Herne Bay regatta was announced as fixed for the 28th instant, or September the 12th. Capt. Bowden, R.N., is the honorary secretary. Two silver cups, each value £21, will be sailed for by yachts of any club, in classes up to fifteen tons and twenty-five tons. Mr. Eagle called attention to the match, on the 16th of September, on the Thames, for a prize given by the R. L. Y. Club, and names were put down in sufficient number to justify the engagement of a small steamer to accompany the race, at a charge per head of 3s. 6d. These yachts must use their own anchors, and weigh them at the start. The course will be from Erith to Rosherville and back to North Woolwich. The entry remains open till September the 6th. The Gnat will be among the competitors. Yachts can be entered at the Caledonian Hotel, by letter to the secretary, enclosing the entrance-fees. No ladies will obtain a passage in the steamer, which will not receive her passengers at London-bridge, but at Blackwall, waiting at that pier for the ten o'clock train from Fenchurch-street, and no longer. A vote of thanks was passed to the ex-Vice-Commodore Bartlett, for a handsome framed and glazed portrait of the Sverige, presented to the club. The club-business closed by communications being read from Mr. Drew, the honorary secretary for the Weymouth regatta, and from Messrs. Gordon, Duff, and Co., the club agents at Madeira.

ROYAL YACHT SQUADRON REGATTA.

COWES, Monday evening.—For many years past such an occurrence as the race for the Queen's Cup not being determined on the day named for that contest, has not taken place at this regatta, and therefore the sailing for it on a second day is a perfect novelty here in such matters. The course, however, is a very long one, and, unless the wind is auspicious—a state of things not at all to be reckoned upon at this time of year—the vessels cannot possibly arrive before a late hour. The committee of the Royal Squadron, feeling that a race decided in the dark, and at a late hour at night, was most unsatisfactory to all parties concerned, as we have said before, wisely determined that, if the wind is so light that vessels cannot get round in reasonable time, it would be far better to defer the issue till another day. The hour of nine being named as the limit, and the yachts not having arrived, it was on Thursday night declared to be "no match," and led to a renewal of the contest this day. When the race was stopped by the regulation referred to, the Alarm was the leading vessel, the others being a long distance astern.

According to arrangements made on Thursday last, nine o'clock this morning was fixed for starting the vessels; and it was at the same time intimated that the course would, in the first instance, be to the westward, so as to afford them an opportunity of performing the distance. The four vessels that sailed on Thursday were expected to start, but great was the surprise to the inhabitants of Cowes this morning when it became known that the other three yachts were so alarmed at the prowess of their opponent on Saturday last, that they had determined not to renew the contest, and that the Alarm would sail over the course alone. That such should have been the case, with so tempting a prize in prospect as her Majesty's Cup, is greatly to be regretted; but, from the information we have received from the best authority, such an untoward event is not likely to happen again.

In consequence of the Shark, Genova, and Titania thus retiring from the field, the time originally agreed upon was not adhered to, and ten o'clock was substituted. Although a drawn battle is at all times but a very tame affair to record, yet there are certain points in reference to it that may render it necessary to give the time at which the start took place. With the customary regulation of the squadron (although the Alarm alone hoisted her racing flag), the preparatory gun was fired at 9.55, and, as the clocks were striking ten, the start took place. The Alarm then made the run up to Yarmouth and back to Cowes at 12h. 29m. 10s., proceeding then towards the westward. She passed the No-man-land, going down at 1h. 25m., and, on returning, at 2h. 5m. She completed the course at 3h. 20m. Thus she became the possessor of the Queen's Cup, in addition to that given by the squadron. It will be seen that the distance was performed in a space of time almost unprecedented, and, as there was a tolerable good breeze blowing all day, if the other yachts had gone round, it was most probable that the same result would have been arrived at.

With this matter of form, for it cannot be called a race, terminated the Royal Yacht Squadron Regatta of 1854, and in reviewing the entire proceedings that have taken place during the week, they cannot be regarded but as highly satisfactory and honourable to the club. Everything went off without any occurrence that could tend to mar the pleasures of the meeting, and it is but a bare act of justice to acknowledge the services of Captain Pousonby and Richard Franklin, Esq., the sailing committee, and Captain Browne, the secretary, in perfecting the arrangements, and the readiness with which they gave every facility to the press in the performance of its duties.

PORTISHEAD REGATTA.

The Portishead regatta owes its origin to Admiral Cooksley; but for the last seventeen years it has been discontinued, owing to some unfortunate disturbances which took place at the distribution of the prizes. The success of the present regatta was creditable to the exertions of its promoters, and we understand it will again become an annual affair. The entrance fee for boats was five shillings, and, as a condition of entering, it was specified that they should be from twenty-two feet to thirty-eight feet, and carry their own fore and aft sails. The sailing-match was from Portishead to Kingroad, and round Charleston, and back to Kingroad and Portishead. Eight boats started soon after eleven o'clock, and kept well together till they came to the signal-ship in Kingroad. The Beachley then took the lead, and kept it for some time, until she came in contact with the Messenger, by which she lost her mizen, and got disabled. The Elizabeth was now the first boat, taking the lead at the Black Rock, and she maintained her position until the end of the race. The following is the order in which they came in:—

Elizabeth, Wm. Bruton, jun.	1	5	4
Hoppe, James Williams	2	5	0
Terrill, Wm. Bruton, sen.	3	3	0
Thomas and Mary, S. Steele	4	3	0
Messenger, Thomas Addie	5	1	0
Eliza, George Morgan	6	1	0

The race was a very spirited one, and well contested. There was scarcely sufficient wind, but the "tacking" looked extremely pretty and interesting. The Fairy Queen, with a large company on board, followed the boats during the race.

The next race, between four-oared Pill boats, was also well contested, and after the display of some smart rivalry, the following was the result:—

FOUR-OARED PILL BOATS.—Prize, £3.
George and Caroline	1
Late and Early	2
Grasshopper	3
FOUR-OARED BRISTOL WHERRIES.—Prize, Purse of Sovereigns.
Champion	1
Black Bess	2
Jenny Lind	3

A duck-hunt followed, which created the greatest merriment amongst the spectators. The hunted party was possessed of plenty of "pluck," for after losing his oars, from the break of the ruddocks, he plunged into the water, by way of baffling his pursuers. Altogether it is estimated there were about 1,500 persons present, and everything went off satisfactorily. No accident occurred to mar the festivities, if we except the bursting of a cannon, without, fortunately, doing any damage.

A very excellent dinner was provided by Mr. Wait, of the Portishead-hotel, to which about seventy persons sat down. There was a goodly gathering of country people from the adjacent villages. To Mr. Wait's strenuous exertions is mainly owing the successful getting-up of this aquatic spectacle. The Clifton brass band was engaged, and played on the lawn, where, in the evening, dancing was kept up with some spirit. The amusements terminated with a grand display of fireworks by that celebrated pyrotechnist, Gygell, and the Fairy Queen safely returned to Bristol a number of delighted passengers.—Bristol Mirror.

LONDON MODEL YACHT CLUB.

A very entertaining match, which collected a vast number of spectators, took place on Monday afternoon upon the Serpentine, in Hyde-park, for two silver cups, presented by the above club. The race was in five heats:—

Weather-gauge	3
Water Kelpie	W. Biffen	0
Little Wonder	R. Harrison	0
Eloa	J. Perritt	0

It was a very beautiful race, with repeated changes, the boats passing and repassing each other, and the last three named almost making a dead heat.

In the third heat, the yacht Gannet attracted considerable attention, and also again in the final heat (in which the Eloa went out of bounds). The Gannet, whose sails were made by Ratsey, was ably sailed by Mr. John Whitehead for Mr. Flood, R.S.Y.C. (owner of the Eloa, 25 tons), and we expect upon a future occasion that she will gain a prize. The club manned two sailing-boats to watch the match, and, thanks to Dr. Gnest, one of them, the Ripple, was gaily dressed in Marryat's flags, and gave the Serpentine quite a holiday appearance.

LIVERPOOL YACHT CLUB REGATTA.

The members of this club, which was formed last year, held their first regatta for the season on Wednesday. The weather throughout was wet and unfavourable, and the wind outside rather boisterous for such small craft. The boats started from the Jessica, the yacht of Mr. J. A. Clark, Commodore of the Club, which was the flag-ship for the occasion, and was moored opposite the Birkenhead ferry. A steamer belonging to Mr. Baines accompanied the yachts during the races.

The first race, for a cup of £30, commenced at fifteen minutes past twelve, when the following boats started:—Una, W. Harley, L.Y.C., eleven tons; Stanley, T. Wilson, L.Y.C., sixteen tons; Mirage, J. R. Woodward, R.M.Y.C., eighteen tons; Ranger, G. W. Moss, R.M.Y.C., thirteen tons; Priestess, A. Dann, L.Y.C., eleven tons. The course was from Birkenhead round the bell buoy and north-west light-ship and back. Going out, all black buoys to be passed on the starboard hand; the bell buoy and north-west light-ship to be left on the port hand. Coming home, the bell buoy to be passed on the starboard hand, and all black buoys on the port hand; finishing at Birkenhead between the flag-ship and the shore.

In consequence of the heavy weather, none of the boats were able to round the north-west light-ship. The cup, therefore, will be retained by the club authorities, and contested for at some future period during the season.

The second race was for a cup, value £20, for fixed keel yachts of all clubs, from three to eight tons. To start at twelve o'clock. Three-quarters of a minute time allowed for difference of tonnage.

The following were the entries:

Stations.	Yachts.	Owners.	Tons.
1	Challenge	A. Bower, L.Y.C.	8
2	Electric	T. Wilkinson, L.Y.C.	8
3	Kelpie	E. A. Hornley, L.Y.C.	4
4	Spirit	T. Wilkinson, L.Y.C.	4
5	Arrow	Commodore Littledale, R.M.Y.C.	3
6	Sirocco	T. Roscoe, L.Y.C.	3

Course: From Birkenhead round the Crosby Lightship; thence round the North Magazine, which was to be passed on the starboard-hand, back to Birkenhead, finishing between the flag-ship and the shore.

All the boats started, except the Arrow, at 1h. 15m. The Kelpie gave in at the rock on her outward passage; and the Spirit, in passing the flag-boat on her return, seeing there was no chance for her, went to her moorings. The Electric came in first, arrived at 5h. 34m. and the Sirocco second, arrived at 5h. 37m. 20s.

The third race for shrimpers went off, no boats coming up.

The fourth race was for a purse of £10, for pair-oared in-riggers, to be pulled and steered by gentlemen amateurs. The following were the entries.

Stations.	Name.	Coxswain.
1	Phantom	J. Logan.
2	Belle	J. Segar.
3	Mystery	M. Barton.
4	Cestria	R. Harding.
5	Rocket	— Bowman.

Course: From Birkenhead round the North Cunard Buoy, which was to be left on the starboard hand, back to Birkenhead, finishing between the flag-ship and the shore.

Only two boats ran, Nos. 2 and 5, the crew of the Mystery pulling in the Rocket, won the race, the Belle giving in.

The races were continued on Thursday, and in the evening there was a grand display of fireworks, under the direction of Mr. Knowles, of Vauxhall, in the grounds of the Birkenhead-hotel.

WOODBRIDGE REGATTA will take place on Monday, August 28, 1854, commencing precisely at one o'clock. Ten sovereigns, with five sovereigns added by the Deben Yacht Club, for yachts of any rig, not exceeding six tons. Time half a minute a ton. Ten sovereigns, for yachts not exceeding twelve tons. Time half a minute a ton. Rowing: Seven sovereigns, for four-oared boats not exceeding twenty-five feet. First boat, £5; second boat, £2. A purse of £3 for pair-oared skiffs not exceeding eighteen feet. First boat, £2. 10s.; second boat, 10s. A purse of £1. 10s. for skiffs not exceeding fourteen feet (sculler's match). First boat, £1; second boat, 10s. Ten sovereigns, for four-oared boats of any length. First boat, £7; second boat, £3. A purse of £1. 10s. for ships' boats, belonging to the port. First boat, £1; second boat, 10s. A purse of £2. 10s. for pair-oared pilot boats, belonging to the port. First boat, £2; second boat, 10s. To conclude with a new nautical farce, of an extraordinary comical nature, "never yet acted in Woodbridge." Three to start in all matches, or no race. Each boat to carry a distinguishing colour, which will be supplied by the committee. All yachts and boats to be entered by letter, addressed to the Secretary of the Deben Yacht Club, on or before Saturday, 26th inst., by twelve o'clock at noon.

No entrance fee for any match. Stations will be drawn for at the Anchor-inn, on the 28th inst., at eleven o'clock a.m. Dinner at the Crown-hotel, at six o'clock.

DOVER AND CINQUE PORTS REGATTA.—The committee are ceaseless in their exertions to render the sports of 1854 the best and most successful that have taken place since those regattas have been resuscitated. Among the patrons we observe the name of James Goodson, Esq., commodore of the Royal Yacht Club; and a squadron from this club will be in our bay on the day of the regatta. Two yacht races are to take place, the first between yachts under fourteen and under forty tons; the second between yachts under fourteen tons. The sports of the day will be much enhanced by these matches, and the lovers of yachting will no doubt enjoy a great treat. The subscription lists are still open at all the libraries; and as it is proposed to conclude the day with a grand display of fireworks if sufficient funds are raised, donations will still be received with thanks by the committee.—Dover Paper. By the placards just issued, it appears that the regatta will commence at eleven o'clock a-breast of Clarence-lawn flag-staff, and that the first race will come off between yachts over fourteen, and not exceeding forty tons, O.M. for a cup value £30, half-minute time per ton; and then that the second race for the £20 cup will be contested by yachts not exceeding fourteen tons. The first boat in the first rowing-match will receive £12; the first in the second £7; with proportionate prizes to the second and third boats in both cases. A purse (£10) will also be rowed for by amateurs. It is to be regretted that the Poole regatta has been fixed for the same day as that at Dover. The regatta ball will take place at the Apollonion-hall, and, "should the finances allow," there will be a grand display of fireworks.

PAINTON REGATTA, under the patronage of Captain Yardo Buller (S.D.M.), Major Studly, Captain Studly (S.D.M.), Captain Barker (R.W.Y.C.), Captain Dick, R.N., and S. D. Belfield, Esq., took place on Thursday last. The day being unusually fine, the number of visitors was very great. For the FIRST PRIZE OF TEN SOVEREIGNS, for vessels of any port not exceeding fifteen tons, five started, and came in as follows:—

Lily of the Valley	1	Flirt	4
Fairy	2	Morning Star	5
Why Not	3

SECOND PRIZE, for Five Sovereigns.
Star	1	Pamela	4
Jack	2	Jan	5
Julia	3	Nautilus	6

THIRD PRIZE, for Five Sovereigns.
Olive Branch	1	Isabella	4
Rajah	2	Pet	5
Nimble	3

After the above followed the rowing matches. £2. 15s. was rowed for by the Dittisham Amateurs; £2. 15s. was contested for by four-oared boats; after which the punt races concluded the amusements of the day.

PORTFLEVEN SAILING AND ROWING RACES.—These races took place on Thursday last. The weather in the morning was rather cloudy and inclined to rain, but the afternoon was fine, and by the time the first gun was fired a great number of persons was present, and the hills and wharfs presented a very gay appearance. The wind was moderate from the north west, and the boats being moored, one to the eastward and westward, at three o'clock the gun on the pier-head was fired for starting. The secretary and umpires, with their friends, met at a late dinner at the Ship Inn, and spent a pleasant evening, terminating the same with a display of fireworks. The following were the prizes awarded:—For fishing-boats not exceeding 23 feet: Albion, Portloven, William Eldy, Alarm, ditto, W. Pascoe; Start, ditto, W. Crowle. Fishing-boats not exceeding 16 feet: Daring, Prussia Cove, W. Curtis; John, ditto, John Davoy; Dove, ditto, W. Richards. Ship's boats: Brothers, Jos. James; Silvia, Thomas Pryor; Ocean, Holston amateurs. There were two prizes for a gig and punt chase, the man in the punt being victorious. This race afforded a great deal of amusement, and great praise is due to the Helston amateurs, who caused much excitement.—Royal Cornwall Gazette.

DARTMOUTH REGATTA.—This annual holiday came off on Tuesday last; and, the weather being delightfully fine, a large concourse of pleasure-seekers assembled, many of whom came from Totnes, Plymouth, and neighbouring towns. A good breeze sprang up in the morning, and the sports passed off very successfully. The first start was made at ten o'clock, the contest being between barges belonging to the Dart, for a purse of three sovereigns, to be awarded—£1, 10s. to the first; 15s. to the second; 10s. to the third; and 5s. to the fourth. The Hero, Undanotted, Lucy, and Lydia were successful.

Four-oared Gigs, belonging to the port or to Torbay.—Prize, Ten Sovereigns.

Name.	Owner.	Port.
Cogswaine	W. H. P. Godfrey	Dartmouth.

Four-oared Gigs, open to all the world.—Prize Twenty Sovereigns.

3. Lightning	A. B. E. Holdsworth . .	Totnes.
1. Constance	W. H. E. Godfrey . . .	Dartmouth.
Success	G. Foale	Dartmouth.

This race was the principal attraction of the day, and excited much interest. The boats started in good order, and the Maid of the Mill took the lead, which it retained, the other boats, however, closely following. The last race was for £2, to be rowed for by women, with four-oared gigs. The Constance was the first boat, though the occupants of the Success vigorously contested the honour.

PAIGNTON.—The regatta, which was held on Thursday week, was very well attended, a large number of small craft being present. The green was lined with booths and amusements of every description. In the evening a serious ulley took place, which ended in the total demolition of one of the marquees. Constables Parnell and Wehner were called, and succeeded, after some difficulty, in quelling the disturbance. They took several persons into custody.

ROYAL WELSH YACHT CLUB REGATTA.—We have a long report in type which cannot appear till next week. The "Carnarvon Cup" was won by Mr. Byrne's Corallio, beating the Ada and Hirnant, and the "Prince of Wales' Cup" fell to Mr. Verner's Siren.

STARCROSS AND EXE REGATTA.—The "Devon and Exe Cup" was won by the Lily of the Valley, and the "Steward's Purse" by the Vision.

TRIGNMOUTH REGATTA.—Mr. Lane's Phantom won the 20l. prize, not giving the ghost of a chance to the Annie and Coquette, which raced against her. The next prize was won by the Idiell.

SWANAGE REGATTA.—A preliminary meeting has been held, and steps are being taken, with every prospect of success, for making the necessary arrangements and procuring the requisite funds for the holding a regatta.

GENUAGLEN, Aug. 15.—A boat from Lord Dufferin's yacht, the Foam, with four men on board, has sailed from Degerly to Vaxholm, and thence was towed up to Stockholm by a steamer. It carried despatches to the English Chargé, Mr. Grey, and to King Oscar. Mr. Grey will, it is said, set out for Aland immediately.

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 16.—The English pleasure-yacht Vesta has arrived. The transport, No. 117, has departed, towed by the Ulla.

BOMARSUND, Aug. 7.—The Valorous, Prince, and several other transports have just arrived; they were loudly cheered on coming in. The boy is quite alive with visitors. Bomarsund certainly never presented such an animated spectacle as it does at present. There are representatives of nearly every yacht club in England, and several private speculators in various embarkations, from small cutters to ship-rigged vessels. The Reine Hortense, the Emperor's screw-yacht, arrived this evening, having on board General Baraguay d'Hilliers and his staff, and a Dutch steamer came in with several German and Dutch officers on board.

THE ALAND ISLES.—You would be surprised to see the number of amateurs who have come out from England. In addition to our friend Campbell, in the Esmeralda, we have Lord Dufferin in his yacht, the Foam; Sir Robert Arbuthnot, Bart., in the yacht Mavis. He is accompanied by Mr. George Arbuthnot, and his relative, Captain Ireland. Your friend, Henry Robertson, of the Queen's body guard, with his son, a young ensign in the London Militia, are also here—in the camp one day, and on board one of the ships under fire the next. All these fellows astonish me much. You meet them walking about as coolly, with shell and all kinds of missiles, as the French term the "shrapnel," flying over them in all directions, as if they were out on their own moors on the 12th. At one time you will see them sharing the contents of their pocket pistol with one of the Chasseurs de Vincennes, at another chatting with a bearded Sappan; again you will catch a glimpse of them "tailing" on with our own blue jackets, rousing up the heavy guns to get them into position. This may be fool-hardiness on their part, and I will not say that it is not; but still we, whose duty it is to be here, cannot help admiring the stuff of which our countrymen are made.

MEDWAY REGATTA.—The subscriptions for the above, we understand, are going on very favourably. Besides the commodore's liberal donation of ten guineas, Lord de L'Isle has handsomely subscribed £5, T. H. Bartlett, Esq., three guineas, and among the subscribers already announced, are, W. Manclark, Esq. (Mayor), W. H. Nicholson, Esq., C. Winch, Esq., R. Prall, Esq., Messrs. Ford, Magnus, E. Aldersley, Payne, Wickenden, Emmerson, Moodie, Huggett, &c., &c.

Half a minute per ton time to be given. The course and rules the same as for all former cups. To be won three times by the same person. £20 to be given annually to the winner of the race. Three to enter. A Silver, for yachts not exceeding twenty-five feet from outside of stem to outside of stern-post aloft.—Second day. A Prize of the value of £25, for all yachts not exceeding twelve tons. Same rules as in the £50 prize. £20 to be given annually to the winner of the race.—Third day. A Handicap Race, for all yachts. The members are requested to meet at Rossclare, on Monday, the 28th of August, to appoint judges and make other arrangements. All yachts must be entered before six o'clock on the day previous, with the secretary, Henry D'Arey, Esq., or a person he shall appoint at Rossclare, and lots for their moorings will be drawn at the same time.

"We shall feel obliged by the Secretaries of "Rowing Clubs," and others, forwarding their Appointments of Matches or Notices of Meetings to come, at their early convenience."

GREAT BOAT RACE FOR THE CHAMPIONSHIP OF THE THAMES AND £400.

The aquatic season will in all probability conclude with a great match for the championship of the Thames and £200 a side, which has just been made, to take place on the 20th of November next. Ever since the race between the renowned James Cundlish, the champion of the Tyne, and James Messenger, of Teddington, last year, aquatic men have looked with anxiety for the time when a match should be made between the latter, who was victorious, after giving the most unquestionable proofs of perfect proficiency in the art of rowing, and Thomas Cole, the present champion of the Thames. Some efforts were made to forward the matter at the commencement of the present season, but terms could not be agreed upon, and the thing went off until the Royal Thames National Regatta, when the friends of Messenger, upon the question of aquatic superiority being again mooted, offered to back him for £200, and, as Cole's were nothing but preliminaries were arranged, and £50 have been already staked towards the £400, with proper stipulations respecting the remainder, which is to be posted at divers times and places, arranged at Mr. Styles's, the Rose and Crown, Putney, where the celebrated Elswick crew located previously to their great exhibition of prowess at the late Thames National. By the written conditions of the race, the distance to be rowed is from off the steam-boat pier at Putney to the Ship at Mortlake, the start to take place an hour before high water. Both men are in the prime of life for such pursuits, and a first-rate and very rapid race may be anticipated.

TOWER REGATTA.

The Tower annual regatta came off on Tuesday. The assemblage of spectators of varied grades was numerous, and the shipping and the shores in the neighbourhood exhibited one mass of living beings. The prizes, subscribed by the officers stationed in the Tower and some of the residents without, were a new boat for the first man, £5 for the second, and other minor amounts for the whole of those who took part in the race, added to which were bands of music, boats gaily decorated, and other indications of a grand gala. The race was in four heats, with six competitors.

FIRST HEAT.

W. J. Johns	(Dark blue)	1
J. Tomlin	(Light blue)	0
G. M'Lean	(Pink)	0

The distance was from the Queen's Stairs, Tower, to St. Katherine's buoy, twice round. After a few strokes the winner began to draw ahead, and maintained it to the finish, the other two being close together.

SECOND HEAT.

James Finnis	(Yellow)	1
George Murgatroyd	(Red)	0
H. Cannon	(Green)	0

They were all off in a bustle; then Finnis went to work, and never gave either of the others a shadow of a chance; red and green got strongly on their mettle, and made a very capital race of it all the way once round, green failing a little towards the finish.

THIRD HEAT.

George Murgatroyd		1
Henry Cannon		0
George M'Lean		0

This heat, as it will be seen, consisted of the losers of the two previous heats, the first man in each laying by. It was a very spirited heat, the men rowing very capably together, and by the equality of the two first for some distance keeping up the excitement. Won by two or three lengths.

FINAL HEAT.

James Finnis	(Yellow)	1
William Johns	(Dark blue)	0

For a moment or so only after the start was it questionable who had the lead. Finnis then went away at a slashing pace, and kept it throughout, increasing the lead at every stroke, and winning easily. The other two made a much closer race.

THE ALLIANCE ROWING CLUB.—FOUR-OARED MATCH.—On Monday, August 21, an interesting and well-contested four-oared race came off among the members of the Alliance Rowing Club, held at the Red Lion, Fore-street, Lambeth, for a set of silver cups, and other prizes, which excited considerable interest. The distance rowed was from Putney-bridge to Lambeth-pier, and there were four boats, with the necessary complement of competitors. The start took place about half-past five o'clock, when, on the signal being given, they all went off together. Green got a little in advance, but yellow kept closely up, and was pressed hard by blue, red being a short way astern. A change of position soon took place, for yellow obtained the lead, and passed blue nearly a boat's length off Wandsworth-pier; blue also left green near the Swan at Battersea. A smart struggle ensued, in which green made a spirited effort to obtain second honours, but owing to their strokesman's indisposition, they failed to draw upon them more than a boat's length. Yellow maintained the lead the whole way down, and the boats arrived at Lambeth-pier in the following order:—Yellow, two boats in advance of blue; blue, a length and a half in advance of green, red being the last boat down. There was a large concourse of persons on either side of the river and at the winning point. The distance was rowed in twenty-seven minutes:—

Crews.	Coxswains.	Colours.
Judge, Palle, Greenland, Potter	Fossett	Green.
Jones, Hopkins, Redgrave, Jones	Bennett	Red.
Claydon, Vandle, Cooper, Brooks	Sore	Blue.
Turner, Barrett, Lane, Jones	Oster	Yellow.

BEFORD.—THE OUSE REGATTA.—A club of young men having been established for the practice of the manly, athletic, and healthy exercise of rowing, the second annual boat-race took place on the river Ouse, above and below Bedford-bridge. No accident occurred, except a trifling one to Mr. Hall, schoolmaster, who got a ducking whilst reaching a glass of grog, the boat being unfastened and slipping away. This little incident afforded some fun to the bystanders, Mr. Hall not being in much danger, having instinctively clung to the bank. There were various amusements in Mr. Kingston's close, such as racing, jumping hurdles, climbing a pole, &c. A balloon also ascended, and some fireworks were let off. The whole amusements concluded with dancing. The following is the result of the matches:—

- L'Esmondale..... Fuller..... 1
- Dart..... Dennis..... 2
- 2. Four-oared Race.—First boat, £2 10s.; second £1. Heats.

SOUTHAMPTON.—The amateurs connected with West Quay gave their annual aquatic demonstration and rowing-matches on Wednesday and Thursday last. The matches, for some good prizes, came off on Thursday afternoon, the results being as under. The first match was won by the Unknown, Messrs. Lediott, Lock, Tubbs, Webster, and Scovell; the Eclair second, Messrs. Collins, Wallis, Harold, Friend, and Grandison; Morning Star third, Messrs. Biles, Beaton, Stone, Francis, and Guttridge; the Sea Serpent being fourth, with Messrs. Jones, Grimbald, Lee, Friend, and Mitchelard. The match was well contested, displayed some excellent skill, and the amateurs went over the course from West Quay round Cracknore Hard buoy and the coal-bulk off the pier to the rendezvous, in a few seconds less than the water men. The second match was won by the Red Lancer, the White Swallow and Beanty following close up, and the Favourite fourth. The match was looked to with great interest, and the mastery manner in which the boats were handled created much excitement. The Red Lancer was manned by Messrs. Wallis, Lee, and Collins; the White Swallow, Messrs. J. and B. Oakley and Hoving; the Beanty, Messrs. Lock, Tubbs, and Lediott; and the Favourite, Messrs. Harold, Webster, and Jones. The third match was won by the Monica, Mr. Vaughan; a spirited contest taking place for second, ending in favour of the Lily, Mr. Webster, by only half a length; the Blue Bell, Mr. Jones, being third. The fourth match, for watermen in four-oared boats, terminated as follows:—Sea Horse, 1st; Unknown, 2nd; Eclair, 3rd; Sea Serpent, 4th. There was some good pulling in this match. The Sea Horse took the lead, and kept it throughout, with an exciting struggle for the second place. The next match, for watermen in punts, was won by the Unknown, W. Hill, the boats frequently changing places. Some duck hunts which followed caused considerable sport to the spectators. The committee deserve every possible commendation for providing such a day's amusement. The unpropitious state of the weather on Wednesday evening rendered it necessary to curtail some of their arrangements on that day. Thomas Chamberlayne, Esq., very liberally placed £5 in the hands of the treasurer towards the prizes. The whole affair was very creditable to all concerned.

ROYAL PRINCESS'S REGATTA.—A regatta under this title came off on Wednesday afternoon amongst the industrious operatives engaged at the Royal Princess's Theatre, for various prizes subscribed for by Mr. C. Keun and the ladies and gentlemen of his corps d'armatique. The course was from Putney-bridge to Mortlake-pier, recently established opposite the veteran Frank Godfrey's establishment, the Queen's Head, where a repast had been prepared for the rowers, which was, however, not done so much justice to as it might have been owing to the premature departure of the Curlew, chartered for the occasion, which was started an hour before necessary. The following took their stations:—J. Judge, T. Slenford, T. West, J. Colligan, and J. Farquhar, coxswain, Blue.—R. Tisdell, W. Burton, R. Warton, T. Hale, R. Knight, coxswain, Red.—W. Turner, R. Powuall, H. Saunders, H. Brown, R. Scott, coxswain, White. They all got away well together, but their steerage was very indifferent. They all rowed very hard, and after a sharp struggle white took the lead, and kept it, coming in first by five or six lengths. Red was next, but had to keep pulling stidly.

WEST GLOUCESTERSHIRE AND WESTBURY-ON-TRYM CLUBS.

The return match between these clubs took place on Durdham-down on August 18 and 19. The ground was in capital order, and much good cricket was exhibited by both sides.

West Gloucester—1st innings, 137; 2nd innings, 127. Westbury-on-Trym—1st innings, 80; 2nd innings, 28. In the last innings of the Westbury Club the uncertainty of cricket was most truly exemplified. The four first wickets fell for twenty-four runs; the fifth wicket had one ball to receive to finish the over, from which he gave a chance that was not taken, and he obtained a run. From every ball of the next over a wicket was taken, all four being caught; from the first ball of the ensuing over one was bowled. Thus six wickets were taken for seven balls, the West Gloucestershire winning the match by 156 runs.

COVENTRY YOUNG SAXONS v RUGBY UNITED.

The above match was played on the School field, at Rugby, on Monday last. This game had been looked forward to with hope, and a little fear on the part of the United, the little Saxons being considered A 1 in the county of Warwick. The weather was very unfavourable; nevertheless there was a large muster of those who delight in handling the willow, besides a goodly company of the lovers of the game. Rugby commenced operations by sending in Osborn and W. Over, who made a long stand for thirty-six runs, when Over was bowled by Cribden, Osborn following in his wake. This caused a change in the game, till the fifth wicket, when Messrs. Parrell and Elkington placed thirty-six to the score; when the former was run out. Eyles placed ten opposite his autograph; the rest did nothing worth talking about; and when all was told, 115 was called the first innings. The Young Saxons went in undaunted. J. Copson made a stand for ten. Jos. Copson, Jones, and Hayward each looked nine. J. Cribden carried his bat out for twenty-eight, after steady play, and the rest being unfortunate, left their first innings thirty short of a tie. Jones and J. Copson's fielding was frequently applauded by both sides. After the sports of the day a large party dined together at the Horseshoe hotel. The young Saxons cheerfully gave a new ball to the United, and evinced, by their good feeling, that they were as good losers as winners. A very harmonious evening was spent to the satisfaction of all assembled.

THE COUNTY OF NOTTINGHAM v. ALL ENGLAND.

The unexpected course which this great match took, and the result at which it arrived, led to the transfer of some thousands of pounds from the pockets of the backers of Nottingham into the possession of those who had gone upon England. The match was played on Monday and Tuesday, on the Trent Bridge Ground, at Nottingham, where a numerous gathering assembled on each day. The final score, as snjoked, shows that Notts was defeated in one innings by eight runs:—

GRAND CRICKET MATCH AND FETES AT DUDLEY CASTLE.

A match between the Eleven of England and Twenty-two of Dudley and the district, will be played upon the Dudley ground, on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, August 25th, 26th, and 27th, when, by the permission of Lord Ward, there will be a magnificent illumination of the limestone caverns, and also of the grounds and ruins of the castle, under the patronage of the Dudley Cricket Club. The illuminations will on this occasion be carried out by means of thousands of different-coloured lamps. Access will be afforded to all parts of the grounds, ruins, and caverns of the noble old castle, from the summit of whose ancient keep may be obtained a panoramic view of the town and district, unequalled (to the stranger) in appearance and extent by any other in the kingdom. The committee have made arrangements for the attendance of the sax horn and quadrille band of Messrs. Harvey and Syner, and balloon ascents will take place during each afternoon. There will be a magnificent display of fireworks, also a gorgeous illumination of the castle ruins, with a variety of coloured fire, upon a most extensive scale.

The entrance to the castle grounds will be at the principal gates in Castle-street. No parties will be admitted, under any circumstances, through the other entrances, which will be entirely closed on the above days. The grounds will be opened at twelve o'clock each day, and the illuminations of the caverns will commence at two o'clock in the afternoon, continuing until six in the evening. The illumination of the grounds in the evening and the fireworks as early as circumstances will permit. Admission, on Monday, to the castle grounds and caverns, 6d.; on Tuesday, to the castle grounds and caverns, including fireworks, &c., 1s.; to the cricket-ground, 6d. each day. Arrangements have been made with the various railway companies of the district, and on Monday a special train will leave the Old station, Duddesborough, Birmingham, at ten in the morning, returning from Dudley at seven in the evening; and on Wednesday arrangements have been made with the South Staffordshire, Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton, and other railways, for juvenile trips from various parts of the country, at almost nominal fares. We shall report the cricket match in the next number of THE FIELD.

ISLE OF WIGHT.—On Saturday last, the 19th inst., an interesting match was played between the carpenters and masons engaged upon the new fort, at Science Point, in the Isle of Wight. The first innings proved "a tie," each party scoring twenty-eight; but at the close of the second the masons proved victorious by fifteen runs. Lieutenant Nicholson, the officer in charge of the works, kindly presented the players with a new ball for the occasion.

A MEETING was held at the Ball and Swan-hotel, on Tuesday evening last, to take into consideration the best measures to be adopted for bringing to an issue the Great All-England cricket match in the next season. It was announced that nearly £50 had been contributed by the inhabitants towards the expenses which must necessarily be incurred in bringing the event to an issue. Mr. Wm. Baker was called to the chair. The company present were not very numerous, but they certainly were of the right stamp. Messrs. George Adcock and Thomas Clarke were appointed secretaries, Mr. George Marriott treasurer, and the following gentlemen were made a committee of management, with power to add to their numbers. From the district clubs (the secretary and treasurer were to be members of the committee), J. Willis, T. Champion, S. Willis, W. Wright, W. Leadbetter, R. Sykes, W. Sharman, R. Whitechurch, G. Fittin, W. Baker, R. Johnson, G. Mayfield, J. Baker, W. Short, and S. N. Wing. It was resolved that an invitation be given by the secretaries to all clubs and players in the neighbourhood, to practise themselves, in order that the twenty-two may be chosen from the best men that can be found in the town and district.

DEATH OF LILLYWHITE.—The admirers of the manly game of cricket will be sorry to learn that this favourite son of the bat, the ball, and the wicket is no more. After a long and successful innings, cholera has at last "caught him out." He died at his house at Islington, on Tuesday, of the prevailing epidemic. The deceased was much respected by the cricketing world, who gave him the title of "The Nonpareil." Lillywhite introduced round bowling.

PIKE.

(To the Editor of THE FIELD.)

SIR,—Amongst your numerous readers there must be some who are practically acquainted with pike-fishing in the west of Ireland. I have determined upon a trolling excursion into Connemara during next November, and should be glad to meet with a brother angler disposed to join in what to me will be an experimental trip. From all I can learn, it appears that some extraordinary pike are occasionally taken, but that the fish generally are more scarce and far between than in the rivers and pools of the Midland counties, where the waters are more conducive to the increase of roach and other coarse fish, the food of the pike, than the peaty waters of Ireland. I am, Sir, yours, &c.,
Midland Works, near Birmingham. W. A. ADAMS.

CLOSE OF THE GALWAY SALMON FISHERY.—On Wednesday last, the fishing of the Galway weir was discontinued for the remainder of the season, although it might have been continued to the 1st of September, but that the take of fish was so small as not to be equal to the expense of fishing any longer. Much disappointment was occasioned at the sudden cessation of the supply, and the prospects of the anglers rose rapidly; but they were to nearly a like extent unsuccessful. On Friday last only two small salmon were on sale, which were quickly purchased at 1s. 3d. to 1s. 6d. per lb. Yesterday two or three very splendid fish rewarded the patience of the disciples of old Isaac Wallon, and obtained an immediate equivalent of 1s. per lb. to their successful exporters.—(Galway Packet.)

MALADY IN THE ELBE.—A Prussian journal states that in that part of the Elbe which flows through the Saxon province of Prussia, all the fish have been seized with a malady which causes them to perish of convulsions in a few seconds. As the fish were very abundant in that part of the river, the putrefaction of an enormous mass of them had rendered the air pestilential. The police had been obliged to employ several hundred men to remove the dead fish.

SALMON FISHERIES.—A HUNGRY SEAL.—The Ness, like other northern rivers, is still far too low to yield good angling. The only sport we have heard of this week is Mr. Jervoise, Ness-castle, on Saturday in the upper pools, five grilse; Mr. Edmunds, in the Holm water, one grilse. Not a single grilse has yet been taken in the water of the Angling Club. The nets at the mouth of the river continue to capture great numbers every day. Yesterday Mr. Tat's men had a haul at the mouth of the river of thirty-one salmon and grilse; the men were pulling hard to secure the prize, when they found a seal following close upon the fish, wrinking at the nets with its jaws, and trying to cut them with its teeth. The seal actually fell over the net to within a few feet of the shore, when the men lost it off. Inverness Courier.

FIRE.—We have no direct advices from the Fife stations, but we learn that the herring fishery is far behind last year's.

CHANTILLY RACES.

CHANTILLY has ever been celebrated. Under the Comds, the sons and fathers of heroes, it was an unrivalled sporting ground. In more modern times its races are the finest in France. First established in 1836, under the patronage of the Duke of Orleans, they have so improved that Chantilly is regarded as the Continental Epsom.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

THE first blow has fallen on the assailant of national rights, and the English and French flags float over Bomarsund. Full details of this important capture will be found in another portion of our columns; but, told in the briefest way, the narrative is this. The town of Bomarsund was burned by the Russians some weeks back, lest it should afford shelter to the besiegers. There were, therefore, left only the four forts, mounting in all about 150 guns. On the 7th of this month, the disembarkation of troops was effected, and up to Sunday, the 13th, batteries were being prepared and other arrangements made for the attack, some firing taking place on both sides. On the 10th the Penelope got ashore, but was saved by her guns being thrown overboard. On the 13th, the bombardment began in earnest, and by four o'clock on that day a flag of truce was hung out. Two hours were asked, in order to bury the Russian dead. One was accorded, and was used by the Russians to obtain reinforcements and ammunition. At eight in the evening another truce was asked, but refused, on the ground that, after what had occurred, the enemy deserved no consideration. The bombardment continued all night, and at half-past five in the morning the French stormed the western fort. On the 15th, the eastern tower was attacked by the English batteries, and this being the day of the fête Napoleon, a royal salute was fired, the honours being paid with shotted guns. At six the fort surrendered to the English marines and sailors. On the 16th the "long fort" was battered and the smaller one also; and at half-past twelve on that day, the agile governor, General Bodisco, surrendered, and about 2,000 men were made prisoners. General Baraguay d'Hilliers returned the old man his sword, with a compliment to the valour which had defended the place. The united loss of the French and English is something over 100. The capture was brilliantly performed, the allies working together in a spirit of honourable and cordial emulation; and the value of the conquest is great, inasmuch as it affords France and England a pied à terre for the rest of the Baltic campaign. The Russian scribes will have some trouble in proving that the loss of Bomarsund is really an advantage to the cause of the Emperor Nicholas, but we have much faith in their zeal and ingenuity.

Another important event in the war has taken place. Austria has marched her troops into Turkey. The entry began on the 20th. The whole of the corps of observation was to have passed the frontier by the 23rd, and the advanced guard is expected to reach Bucharest by the 5th September. Three brigades were preparing to move into Moldavia. The steps of course taken with the sanction of the Porte, and under treaty for the evacuation of its territory on demand, but it is worthy of remark that Austria is not at war with Russia, and, presuming a case of extreme treachery (which M. Kossuth anticipates from Austria, though we have no right to do so), the position of the allies would be a difficult one.

Lord Clarendon has addressed to Lord Westmoreland (our ambassador at Vienna) the most satisfactory statement of the resolutions of France and England in regard to Russia which has yet appeared. The Foreign Minister announces that the allies will listen to no proposals for peace, unless, 1st, the protectorate hitherto exercised by Russia over the Principalities of Wallachia, Moldavia, and Servia be discontinued for the future; and the privileges accorded by the Sultans to these provinces, dependencies of their empire, placed under the collective guarantee of the Powers; 2nd, the navigation of the Danube at its mouths be freed from all obstacle, and submitted to the application of the principles established by the acts of the Congress of Vienna; 3rd, the treaty of the 13th of July, 1841, be revised in concert by the high contracting parties in the interest of the balance of power in Europe; and, 4th, unless Russia gives up the claim to exercise an official protectorate over the subjects of the Sublime Porte to whatever rite they may belong, and France, Austria, Great Britain, Prussia, and Russia lend their mutual assistance to obtain, as an initiative from the Ottoman Government, the confirmation and the observance of the religious privileges of the different Christian communities. A similar announcement has been separately made by France; and at length it is permitted to comprehend with precision the object of the war. The guarantees for the fulfilment of their conditions which will assuredly be fixed upon Nicholas at one time or other, are in course of selection, and Bomarsund is one of them. It is possible that by this time the Black Sea fleet may have obtained another, though the ministerial organ was premature in fixing the precise time at which the attack in the Crimea was to be made.

Few occurrences are worthy to be called interesting in the presence of such events as our chronicle of the week has already recorded. The ravages of the cholera continue, and names of greater or lesser note are inscribed among those who fall by it. The death of Lord Beaumont is not, it now appears, to be attributed to epidemic. A name well-known to the readers of this journal henceforth disappears from the annals of the manly sport at which Lillywhite was a proficient, and the theatrical profession contributes, in the person of Mr. E. Cooke, a victim. But losses at home are light compared to the dreadful havoc in the ranks of the allied armies in the East, and the united numbers of the deaths in the French and English squadrons equal the probable loss in a bloody battle.

From France there is no news of importance, except that there has been a reduction or abolition of the French duties upon several articles, including dye-stuffs, foreign wood, and potash. From Spain we only hear that the union of the Moderados and the Progresistas is a coalition not very likely to endure. Queen Isabella drives about with her husband, but Queen Christina is still kept in the palace with the Duke de Riazares. Some persons charge Espartero with the intention of declaring himself Regent, as in other days, but the general opinion is in favour of his honesty.

The United States' legislature has closed as long and almost as useless a sitting as that to which the Queen's speech gave the coup de grace the other day. The Nebraska question has been rather deferred than settled. The real interest of this subject turns upon the point whether the new district shall be a free or a slave state, and north and south are at present engaged in a preliminary struggle which class shall, by settlement, become a dominant interest. The complaints of the Union are, as regards slavery, so nearly balanced, that the question is of vital importance. The President, General Pierce, has received a severe rebuke for his banking after war. He asked for a vote of ten millions, "to meet all possible emergencies," plainly hinting at Cuba, at which, in the present Spanish difficulty, he thought it would be popular to risk a snatch. The committee to which the proposal was referred, recommended the Senate not to accede to the desire of the chief magistrate. The result is honourable to the good sense and good feeling of the American nation. The outrage of Captain Hollins upon the helpless people of Greytown was everywhere condemned, even by the American press; and, valueless as the praise or blame of that "estate" may be, it is satisfactory to see public opinion in America force its organs to worthier utterances than usual.

Among the domestic events of the week must be mentioned another frightful railway accident—this time upon the Brighton line—by which a clergyman and another person have lost their lives, and numerous injuries have been inflicted. The Leeds and Yorkshire Railway has recently been compelled by law to pay £2,300 to two persons crippled by an accident on that line. The inquiry into the causes of the frightful casualty on the Croydon Railway is still to be completed. The court-martial on Lieutenant Perry has heard his eloquent defence, and there seems no doubt that he will be acquitted, after which the sooner the Forty-sixth Bashi-Bazouks are distributed into other regiments, where they may learn morality, decency, and truthfulness, the better. The Registrar-General's last report shows that, to the close of the year 1852, to which it is made up, the population of England and Wales has decreased.

THE MARRIAGE OF THE SULTAN'S DAUGHTER.

On the morning of the 7th inst. commenced the ceremony of the espousals of Ali Oulih Pacha and the Princess Fatima. At nine o'clock the presents given by the Sultan to his daughter left Chiragan Serai, preceded by a numerous body of pachas, generals, and officers in their gala uniforms, with a battalion of infantry, and a fine band of music, playing martial airs. They came upwards of 100 paces, each bearing on his head a salver, on which were placed baskets of flowers and sweetmeats, tastefully enveloped in gauze of various gay colours; cooking utensils of silver, with gilt handles and knobs, followed; and these were succeeded by the nichan takin, objects invariably presented to a bride, consisting of a pair of pattens and a hand mirror, for use at the bath; the former were of gold enamelled, the broad straps richly studded with brilliants, and the back and handle of the mirror were equally ornamented with jewels. An anterie (petticoat), sparkling with diamonds, was also exhibited; and, finally, two char-a-bancs filled with trunks, containing, I understand, among other precious objects, an abundance of French millinery to decorate the Oriental person of the princess. To these were added a purse on behalf of the bridegroom, containing a million of piastres, in the shape of pin-money. This train of pachas and presents embarked after ten minutes' ride, in twenty-eight boats, pulled each by ten men, and in upwards of 150 kaiks, and proceeded up the Bosphorus to Ali Galib Pacha's palace. On the 8th and 9th several interesting ceremonies took place in the Sultan's harem, viz., the bride was conducted to the bath, her finger and toe-nails dyed red with henna, and her hair decorated with jewellery. These are three distinct ceremonies. On the morning of the 10th the bridegroom repaired to the palace, where the grand vizier, the ministers, and all the grandes received him in state, and the Akdoo-nikah, or ceremony of espousals, was duly performed. At about two p.m. the whole party moved on in grand style, the grand vizier, surrounded by his staff, and the bridegroom, bringing up the rear towards Bultahman. An immense concourse was collected on the line of the procession, consisting chiefly of the fair sex, who seemed to interest themselves particularly on the occasion. This evening is fixed for the Zifaf-Guedgessi, or night of introduction, when the fortunate pacha will behold his modest bride for the first time. The Kadin, who presents them to each other, will no doubt be an old lady of high rank. The Oriental custom of their supping together on a boiled fowl will, it is said, be duly observed, and in the morning the ceremonies will be wound up by the young pacha's visit to kiss the dust of the feet of his imperial father-in-law, and the hem of the garment of each of the princess's other near relatives. Owing to the political difficulties of the day, the usual five days' and five nights' rejoicings have been put aside, and a dinner is the only treat given to the Turkish officials.

THE SALE OF SITKA.

(From the Times.)

The alleged offer of the Emperor of Russia to dispose of Sitka to the Americans has drawn attention to that comparatively worthless place, and inquiries are made with regard to its commercial capabilities. The matter, however, scarcely deserves attention, except as another instance of the small artifices to which the Czar is reduced. The territory of which Sitka or New Archangel constitutes the chief port, belongs to the Russian-American Company, a body analogous to the Hudson's Bay Company, established under charter from the Emperor Paul, in 1799, and consists of an archipelago and strip of land on the Pacific coast extending north from Queen Charlotte Islands to a point called Mount St. Elias. The interior range of this strip is limited to thirty miles, where it is bounded by British North America, but its length is about 400 miles. Sitka, or New Archangel, is its only point of importance, and this simply from its being the spot where all the business of the company is transacted, including that in connexion with its large continental possessions from Mount St. Elias to Behring's Straits. The port was founded in 1805, and has been maintained on a considerable scale and at a large expenditure, but if the Russian transactions of which it is now the centre were removed elsewhere, it would not only possess no value, but would probably involve some expense to maintain it against the Indians. The town is built on the west side of a large island, called Baronoff Island, and the harbour is formed by a number of smaller ones. It is smooth and safe, and impregnable, from its natural defences, while the Russians have also fortified it with a battery which commands every part. It has likewise an arsenal where the company build and repair their vessels—the establishment comprising casting houses, and also bodor-makers, coopers, turners, and every kind of mechanic suitable for such work, even including the building of steam-vessels. The number of Russians at the place is believed, however, not to be more than a few hundred, although they have a bishop of the Orthodox Church, with fifteen priests, deacons, and followers supported by the Emperor, and the aboriginal population is likewise extremely scanty. The trade of Sitka in 1842 was estimated at 10,000 fur seals, 1,000 sea otters, 12,000 beavers, 2,500 land otters, foxes, martens, &c., and 20,000 sea-horse teeth; but this is the export of the entire Russian possessions in North America, and would, of course, be transferred to such new port as they might select after they had sold the territory in question. As to the place being likely to prove valuable to the Americans for their whale fishery, there is nothing to warrant any such expectation, the whole coast being too forbidding and inhospitable to tempt the vessels in that trade to depart from their usual course of running down to the Sandwich Islands, where everything they require is immediately available. The purchase, therefore, would be a barren one, and as the parting with it would put the Russian-American Company to serious inconvenience, the only motive of the Czar in the transaction would obviously lie in the hope of giving us a troublesome neighbour. As he would, however, also bring this neighbour to himself, and the trade of his American possessions is carried on in the most exclusive spirit—the natives not being allowed to traffic with strangers—it will remain for him to consider whether he may not ultimately realise from the affair another instance equal to those he has already experienced of the peril of clumsily plotting against others.

THE COURT.

The royal family are still enjoying the rural retirement of Osborne, where her Majesty has entertained during the week a select few. Among these illustrious guests was his Highness the Maharajah Duleep Singh, who arrived at Osborne on Monday. METROPOLIS.

POSTAGE ON NEWSPAPERS.

By command of the Postmaster-General the following notice has been issued to the public:—

"General Post-office, August, 1854.

"1. The Lords of the Treasury have been pleased to increase, from two to three ounces, the weight allowed for publications bearing newspaper stamps, but not being strictly newspapers, which are permitted to pass through the post under the newspaper privilege.

"2. Their lordships have thought it necessary, at the same time, to lay down the following regulations, viz.:—

"1. That no such publication shall be permitted to pass under the newspaper privilege unless it be so folded as to expose to view the newspaper stamp.

"2. That no such publication shall have any cover or outside wrapper (a loose cover being of course allowed for the address), and that the stamp shall be affixed to the title-page, or any other page of the publication (provided it be exposed to view when folded), which page shall form a part of the sheet of paper on which the publication is printed.

"3. In every instance in which the foregoing regulations are not complied with, or the weight of three ounces is exceeded, the publication will not be allowed to pass under the newspaper privilege, but will be charged with the 'unpaid' rate of letter postage, and, if it exceed the weight of four ounces, will be sent to the dead letter office; and it will be the duty of postmasters to enforce the above conditions strictly.

"4. To ensure, as far as possible, a compliance with these regulations, not only when stamped publications are in the first instance transmitted through post, but also upon any subsequent posting of them, it is suggested that they should have a short notice to purchasers printed on the title-page, drawing attention to the necessity of exposing the newspaper stamp to view whenever they are sent through the post.

"5. As publications of this kind cannot be forwarded to places abroad under the newspaper privilege unless they be posted within seven days from the date of publication, it is necessary that they should in every case have the date of publication conspicuously printed on them.

"6. It is advisable that no stamped publication, if it nearly approach to the prescribed limit of weight, should be posted in a damp state; as whilst in that condition it may be found to exceed three oz., and, therefore, be liable to charge.

"7. In order to afford opportunity to the proprietors of stamped publications for complying with these regulations, they will not be carried into effect until the 1st of November next.

"8. It must be understood that the formal permission of the Postmaster-General will still be necessary in the first instance, in order to the transmission of any stamped publication, not strictly a newspaper, through the post under the newspaper privilege.

"9. No stamp will be required on any supplement to the publication entitled Boyl's List, provided such publication bear a newspaper stamp, and the supplement be sent with it.

"ROWLAND HILL, Secretary."

THE CHOLERA AND THE THAMES POLICE.—A very admirable precaution against the spread of diarrhoeal disease has been adopted at the Stepney station of the Thames police. Sergeant Hayre, the inspecting-sergeant, exhibited to our reporter yesterday two bottles, one intended to check primary symptoms, and the other to be used on more grave occasions. The medicine, as far as we can understand, is a mixture made by Mr. Ross, the divisional surgeon, who has had a great deal of experience in the close and narrow places of Shadwell. It is a fact of great value that police-stations are always stations of relief for those suddenly assailed with this indiscriminate pestilence. These stations are open during all hours; and when the apothecary's shop is closed, it will be gratifying to the poor to know that station-houses, which are seldom more than a mile apart from each other, are places where relief can immediately be had from this terrible contagion.

THE INFANT-NURSERY IN PORTUGAL-STREET.—Close by Ship-yard, in Portugal-street, there is a nursery for infants. Here parents, who are obliged to work during the day, can leave their children on payment of a small sum. They are well cared for, in a clean and well-ventilated place, lodged in snug little beds, and supplied with playthings, and that best of instruction for early years, kind and pleasant words. It is painful to witness the bleached countenances of the most healthy of these little ones. Almost every visitor who has come here from more airy neighbourhoods has noticed this, it seems. Those of sufficient intelligence who may visit this nursery, and see when the faces are cleansed of dirt how white they are, and how black a tint is below the eyes, will scarcely doubt the necessity of stringent measures of sanitary inspection and improvement. This nursery was founded, and is mainly supported, by the Rev. John Oliver, chaplain of King's College Hospital, who makes it the means also of affording a refuge to the convalescent female patients from the hospital who have no place to go to. The number of children varies from twenty to thirty at a time, and milk and pudding are found them by the benevolent originator. We know nothing of this gentleman, but he has our heartiest applause; and we hope the wealthy good will aid his excellent institution. Children are brought from Lambeth, Clarendon-town, and other distant localities, and the advantages afforded appear to be thoroughly appreciated by the parents. We have traced a few of them to their homes. Poor babes; alas! for the future. No wonder they are pale. Plant a potato in a dark cellar, and see the result.—The Builder.

RACKETS.—BOLEAL ARMS, HAMMERSMITH.—On Wednesday last a grand muster of racket celebrities took place at the Boleal Arms for the benefit of Mr. John Sowden, Master of the Court, under whose able tuition the gentlemen amateurs of the neighbourhood have mostly attained their proficiency. Nearly the whole of the Belvidere professionals and amateurs attended for the purpose of testifying their respect to one of the oldest, and in his day one of the best, racket players in the kingdom, and of aiding him in his benight. Mr. Morris and the gentleman who, with the London amateur, recently won the silver cups at the Belvidere, were matched against Bull and Sowden. The professionals were defeated by the amateurs. Other matches were played, in which the London amateur and Grentwood, jun., took a part. The greatest novelty of the day was a match between a military gentleman, a well-known amateur of the locality, against Bull, the latter striking every ball beneath his leg. Bull won three games, his opponent only succeeding in scoring three aces in the three games, against Bull's thirty-three.

Our Opera-Glass.

HOME OF THE GRAND OPERA.—The Grand Opera exists no more. I know there is an establishment in the vicinity of Covent-garden—a sumptuous, connoisseur, brilliant, and well-managed theatre, where the best operas are given by the best singers and instrumentalists. But I cannot call it the Opera. It can never be more to me than Covent-garden theatre—the conquered, but never to be the naturalised domain of Italian music. The ghost of Garrick jostles the ghost of Farinelli in Bow-street, and from Mr. Lacy's shop, in Wellington-street, the indignant voices of Cohan, Sheridan, Kenny, and O'Keefe, seem to be crying to Bellini and Donizetti, Meyerbeer and Mozart, "What do ye here?" What have the traditions of maestri and maccaroni, violins and Vellutis, bassi and ballet-girls, to do with a locality hallowed by the memory of the Great Twin Brothers, the two mighty English theatres of Covent-garden and Drury-lane? I can fancy, drawn up in shadowy line opposite the grand entrance, and sadly watching the carriages disgorging their aristocratic tenants, the long-gone worthies of the English stage. Siddons thrilling, O'Neil melting, Munden exhilarating, Dowton convulsing, Kemble awing, Kean astounding, Woffington enchanting, Young soothing, and Macready—not dead, haply, nor forgotten, nor unthanked, but gone for all that—teaching, and elevating, and immortalising us. About such a scene might flit the disembodied spirits of the O.P. row; of those brave days of old, when people went to wait for the opening of the pit door at three p.m., and took sandwiches and cast-bottles with them; when the engagement or non-engagement of a public favourite weighed as heavily in the balance of town curiosity as the siege of a fortress, or the capture of a fleet; when Shakespeare's scenes found gorgeous reflections in Stairfield's magic mirror; when actors (though rogues and vagabonds by Act of Parliament) were wonderfully respected and respectable, and lived in competence, and had quiet, cosy houses in Bloomsbury and Marylebone, paying rates and taxes, serving on juries, and when they died found no mortuary enlogium in the columns of some shabby Sunday newspaper, but were gravely noticed in the decent large type of a respectably small-sized newspaper, with a fourpenny stamp, as "at his house in Buskin-street, Mr. So-and-so, many years of the Theatre Royal, Covent-garden, and one of the overseers of the parish of St. Boscus. Universally lamented. An attached husband and a tender father." No! the opera cannot be in Covent-garden to my mind. The opera should, and can only be, in Haymarket, over against palatial Pall-mall.—Dickens's Household Words.

THEATRE ROYAL, WILLIAMSON-SQUARE, LIVERPOOL.—The London Adelphi Company, at the Theatre Royal, during the past week, have continued to prove very attractive, their performances having been nightly witnessed by numerous and highly-respectable audiences. On Monday evening, the celebrated melo-drama of "The Thirst for Gold," which had so long a run both in Paris and London, was produced with all the famous "Adelphi effects." Mr. Webster, having brought down his own scenery, dresses, and properties. The story of this piece is highly melo-dramatic and effective, and affords Madame Celeste an opportunity of displaying her peculiar talents better than any play in which she has appeared for some time past. She represents, at different periods of the play, an agnised mother, a savage Indian girl, and a fiore of French society in the year 1770, and in each character her powerful acting excited the utmost applause. Mr. Webster, as a melo-dramatic villain of the first water, had not an opportunity of displaying his great talents so advantageously. He shines more in characters requiring intellectual fiore; but he made as much of his part as was possible under the circumstances. The great hit of the piece, however, was the representation of the breking up of a huge iceberg, on which some persons sent adrift in an open boat have landed. The gradual cracking and disintegration of the huge icebergs was most admirably managed, and the agonising screams of the performers, as the treacherous ice breaks beneath their feet and while they sink into the sea, created a sensation of perfect horror amongst the audience. So naturally, in fact, was the "effect" managed, that, if it were not for the vast clouds of dust raised, the spectators could scarcely credit their senses that the whole was a mere triumph of theatrical skill, and not a painful reality. The afterpiece of "Good night, Signor Pantaloon," has been played almost nightly, with increased effect. This is not to be wondered at, for, in addition to some pretty music and amusing situations, nothing could be more pleasing than the acting of Miss Woolgar, Miss Mary Keeley, and Mr. Paul Bedford. Miss Woolgar represents a gay and gallant cavalier, of the Don Juan description, with most laughable nonchalance, and sings a serenade with exquisite taste. Miss Mary Keeley surprised us by the archness and vivacity with which she played the intriguing waiting-maid, Columbine. Her style of acting closely resembles that of her mother, than which nothing could be better; while a sweet voice, and a graceful and expressive style, make her singing of a little air, "Cupid's eyes," composed by Alfred Mellon, a vocal triumph, well meriting the enthusiastic encore with which it has always been received. "Tartuffe" and "Two Loves and a Life" have also been repeated; and, last night, the evergreen "Green Bushes" was revived, with the customary success, for Madame Celeste's benefit.—Liverpool Mail.

OPENING OF ST. GEORGE'S HALL, LIVERPOOL.—The interesting ceremonies to be observed at the opening of St. George's hall have been at length definitively agreed to, subject, of course, to the final decision of the council. A meeting of the committee, to whom the arrangements have been intrusted, was held on Saturday, at which the mayor announced that he had received intimation of an official character, to the effect that, consequent on the unsettled state of public affairs, and the intended visit of the Prince Consort to the French camp at St. Omer, it will not be consistent with the royal arrangements for her Majesty to grace the inauguration of St. George's hall. This decision will, without doubt, be learnt with regret, not unmingled with disappointment, by the population of Liverpool, and for many miles around. All reasons for deferring the intended arrangements, consequent on the expected royal visit, being thus removed, it was recommended that the hall be opened on Monday, the 18th of September, instead of Tuesday, the 19th, and that, after the formal opening by the mayor and council, the oratorio of the Messiah shall be performed, provided Sir Henry Bishop can succeed in engaging the services of a sufficient number of competent artists to do full justice to Handel's chef d'œuvre. A grand miscellaneous concert will be given in the hall in the evening. On Tuesday Mendelssohn's oratorio of Eljah is to be performed, and on Wednesday Haydn's Creation, each oratorio being followed in the evening by a concert; the admission to that on Wednesday evening being fixed at 2s. 6d., in order that the general public may have an opportunity of being present. The prices of admission to the other musical performances have not yet been decided upon, but due notice of the final arrangements will be given through the usual sources. It is also proposed that the week after the meeting of the British Association five or six evening musical performances shall be given in the hall, to which the charge for admission shall be 1s., so that all the inhabitants of the town may have an opportunity of assisting at the inauguration of this splendid municipal structure, generally admitted to be one of the finest edifices in Europe.—Liverpool Standard.

EXETER.—We understand the theatre will be opened on the 14th proximo under the management of Mr. Alfred Davis. Miss Priscilla Horton of the London theatres, who has before appeared and been well received on the Exeter boards, has been engaged for a short time. We doubt not but that success will attend Mr. Davis by the usual good production of novelties which characterises his management.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—Return of admissions for six days ending Saturday, August 19: Numbers, including season tickets, 63,166; received for admissions, £3,377 11s. 4d. Monday, August 21: Admission at the doors, 11,861; admission by season tickets, 460; total, 12,321. Tuesday, August 22: Admission at the doors, 11,146; admission by season tickets, 743; total, 11,889. MACBETH'S CASTLE, DUNSMINE-HILL.—Workmen are still busy, we understand, in laying open the covered remains of this ancient and classical building, and have lately made some discoveries, which will tend to confute the statements made by Dr. George Buist, that the remains upon this hill at least were nothing but the remains of beacon or signal towers, and that there never was any regular building upon the hill. We shall endeavour to get a description of the progress of the excavation. We are glad that it has been proved that a castle has at one time been on Dunsmine-hill; and whether bringing to the usurper or not, it will be no easy matter to separate his name from the ruins, and, besides, Scotchmen do not like their old traditions uprooted by any antiquarian pundit, however learned. Shakespeare says Macbeth was killed at Dunsmine, but Dr. Buist is perhaps more correct in saying that he was killed at Forres or Mortlach, or some castle he had in the north, but still Dunsmine may have been his residence.—North British Mail.

PROVINCIAL.

HELL ELECTION.—Close of the poll: Seymour, 1,820; Watson, 1,806; Dickson, 1,600.

FALL OF A WORKHOUSE AND LOSS OF LIFE.—On Sunday morning, during the hours of divine service, the greater portion of the workhouse at King's Lynn fell to the ground with a tremendous crash. One old man named Coney was taken out of the ruins dead. The building which has fallen dated from about the fourteenth century, and though supported by enormous buttresses, apparently of vast strength, fears had been for some time felt with regard to its stability. On Saturday last an examination of the building had taken place, at which it had been resolved to call in an architect to make a further inspection. During the night some of the inmates heard a crackling noise repeatedly occurring. In the morning the clock stopped, and an old man who saw pieces of mortar falling, went out into the yard, and persuaded the other inmates to follow him. At this time the girls were at church, and the boys sitting in front of the building, whilst the women were in the modern part. Mr. Nelson, the governor, attended by Mr. Andrews, clockmaker, went up to the clock-tower to see what was amiss, and while they were there the fall took place. They were carried down among an immense mass of material, with several old men, who were extricated comparatively uninjured, and whose escape was almost miraculous. As it was the loss would have been far greater, except for the circumstance of the Rev. J. Brunley, the chairman of the board of guardians, having caused the most dangerous part of the building to be cleared of its inmates that morning.

ESCAPE.—A convict cleverly escaped from Woolwich dock-yard on Monday, by changing his clothes in a horse-box, and walking boldly out of the gates. Of course he must have had one or more confederates.

BREAKING INTO WOOLWICH ARSENAL.—On Wednesday evening a party of prizefighters having met in the marshes belonging to the Ordnance at the east-end of the grounds of the Royal Arsenal, for the purpose of witnessing a fight, and failed in their object, about fifty of them made their way into the Royal Arsenal. The police constabulary secured three of the parties, and the next day they were brought before the magistrate and ordered to find two sureties as bail for £20 each, that they would keep the peace for three months.

DISTRESSING DEATH.—On Thursday last the Rev. Wm. Presgrave, M.A., head master of Queen Elizabeth's Grammar School at Sevenoaks, died there, after a short illness. His effects had been taken in execution by the sheriff of this county, the sale being fixed for Wednesday; but the deceased's over-wrought mental faculties gave way before the day, death putting an end to his earthly sufferings.—Sussex Express.

SUDDEN DEATH.—On Friday afternoon a gentleman who was waiting in the booking-office, Leves, probably to take a ticket, suddenly fell flat on the floor of the office. He was immediately picked up, gasped twice, and expired. On his card was "Mr. George B. Marshall, 45, Connaught-terrace, Hyde-park," and his pocket-handkerchief bore corresponding initials.—Sussex Express.

MURDER AT ROCHESTER.—On Tuesday morning the neighbourhood of Troy Town, Rochester, was thrown into considerable consternation owing to a murder having been committed at the residence of Mr. Holden, Union-street, Troy Town. It appears that Mr. George Henry Smith, who is postmaster at Jersey, came to Mr. Holden's with his wife on Saturday last, and took furnished lodgings for the benefit of her health. Everything seemed to go on very comfortably, and during the time that Mrs. Holden was cleaning the step of the door, about eight o'clock on Tuesday morning, Mr. Smith came down stairs and told her that he had killed his wife, and desired her to send for a policeman and a doctor. Mrs. Holden was much frightened at such a request, and immediately sent to her neighbours. Mr. Bevan, a surgeon of Rochester, was quickly in attendance, and also Storey, of the Rochester police. The surgeon, on entering the bedroom, found Mrs. Smith in bed, with the bedclothes not the least disturbed, and to all appearance asleep. On moving them he found that she had been shot in the back of the neck, and that her skull was fractured. There was very little blood in the bed. Mr. Smith was present, and he told Mr. Bevan that he would find the pistols under the mattress, and there they were found. One had been recently discharged, and the other was loaded with powder and two bullets. The prisoner is about forty-five years of age, rather bald, with very little hair in front, and of very respectable appearance. He wears moustaches, and looks like a foreigner. It is stated that he was placed in Hanwell Lunatic Asylum about six months ago, and he was considered perfectly harmless. His deceased wife was about fifty years of age, and is said to be very respectably connected.—Globe.

RACKETS.—GREAT MATCH AT BIRMINGHAM BETWEEN THE ERWOODS, AGAINST MITCHELL (THE CHAMPION) AND YOUNG.—On Tuesday last Frank Erwood's benefit took place at his own court, Bath-street, Birmingham. The great event of the day was the return match between the four best players in the world. On a recent occasion Mitchell and Young were vanquished by George and Frank Erwood; Mitchell and Young have now, however, succeeded in recovering their laurels. A third and conquering match will, in all probability, be played at some future period in the Belvedere court, to determine which pair of these celebrated players is entitled to the pre-eminence. The first, and only match, originally arranged, was the first three games out of five; this was won by the Erwoods; Mitchell and Young winning the first game, and losing the three following. Here the contest would have terminated, but for the importunity of the admirers of the game, who prevailed upon George Erwood to defer his departure to London, and play a second match (the first two out of three games), which was won by Mitchell and Young, by two games to one. This closed the first day's sport, leaving the players the winners of one match each respectively, the Erwoods having won during the day four games, and scored ninety-one aces, Mitchell and Young having won three games and scored eighty-six aces. The players being thus left so nearly level, it was determined that a third match should be played the following day, at the Fireway's court, Islington; but owing to the unfavourable state of the weather, the company were obliged to return to Frank Erwood's court, in Bath-street, which, being a closed court, is available in all weathers. The third match was won off by Mitchell and Young. This victory gave them the ascendancy over their competitors. It is but justice to the Erwoods, however, to observe that the result of the second day's play was materially affected by the circumstance of an illness on the part of Frank Erwood, which altogether incapacitated him from playing in his usually fine manner, and which fine play he needed against two such powerful opponents.

SUICIDE IN A RAILWAY CARRIAGE.—LINCOLN, August 21.—At the inquest on view of the body of a gentleman who was found dead in a first-class railway carriage, on Thursday afternoon, nothing has been elicited from the numerous inquiries set on foot by the coroner, Mr. Hitchins, tending to throw any light on this extraordinary case. The open razor, covered with blood, the plait of female hair, the blood upon the clothes of the deceased, together with the fact of there not being a single abrasure on any part of his person, suggests a train of details which have yet to be accounted for. The coroner has received the following letter, which he read to the jury:—"Sir,—Your correspondent is too ill and crushed down to attend the inquest on the body found in the railway carriage at Lincoln, and the exposure would but wound a large and respectable circle. Though not legal evidence, the grievous facts are simply these: The deceased, against long remonstrance, had injured his health and shattered his nerves by a habit of excessive reading at night, supported by a large use of strong stimulants—coffee, tea, and tobacco—to keep off sleep. He was very generous, and rather careless and expensive, and thereby in some little degree embarrassed. He became suddenly nervous, although treated with tenderness. He turned very religious. He seems to have imbibed a wild notion that he ought not to live any longer. A letter sent circuitously came to hand only yesterday, stating that he must die, and would, when near Derby, by night-train. It was a sudden derangement, for a more excellent-hearted man, or more full of information and high feeling, could hardly be found. The enclosed £5, with whatever he may have had, will suffice for the last rites. Pray let the officiating clergyman be requested to accept £1. Is. More money would he sent if it were at hand and needed; but what can funeral rites do?" A Bank of England note for £5 was enclosed. The jury returned a verdict of "Found dead in a railway carriage, but by what means deceased came to his death there is no evidence to show." The body of the unfortunate gentleman was interred at five o'clock this evening, in the presence of a great crowd of persons.

IRELAND.

ACCIDENT TO THE LORD-LIEUTENANT.—The Lord-Lieutenant met with a slight accident on Saturday last at Baron's-court, county of Tyrone, the residence of the Marquis of Abercorn. While riding with Lord Clunne Hamilton, his Excellency's horse put his foot into a hole hidden by the grass and fell, throwing his rider to the ground, by which his thumb was dislocated and his face considerably bruised. Happily, however, no serious injury was sustained. Dr. Hamilton, of Mount Stewart, was in prompt attendance, and it is believed that in the course of a few days his Excellency will have quite recovered from the effects of the fall.

Foreign Intelligence.

FRANCE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, THURSDAY, August 24.

Their Majesties at Biarritz—Rumours of peace—Ravages of cholera in the army; ridiculous exaggerations—French Republicans at Madrid—The weather—Summer travelling—The old diligence versus railway—M. de Foudras.

THEIR Imperial Majesties continue to enjoy themselves most agreeably in the south. The Empress, happy in the society of her family and friends, never appeared more cheerful nor in better health. The Emperor is described as in somewhat less spirits than at first; doubtless the intelligence of the ravages of cholera in the army contributes to render him anxious. But in domestic politics there is nothing to cast the shadow of a shade upon his brow; on the contrary, France never was more prosperous, happy, and contented, than at this moment.

There are flying reports about Paris of a serious desire on the part of Russia to come to terms, on the basis laid down in the notes of M. Drouin de Lhuys and Lord Clarendon, namely, the evacuation of the Principalities, &c., &c. Russia is so slippery a customer that there is no confidence to be placed in what she appears disposed to do. But unquestionably the announced attack of her stronghold of the Crimea, and the dangerous vicinity of the fleets to St. Petersburg, after their late facile success at Bomarsund, may have so far shaken the confidence of the Czar as to lead him to lower his pretensions. Should an accommodation take place, it would much disappoint the public, who desire to see the pride of Russia humbled; but the unhealthy state of the allied armies, and the insalubrity of the Crimea, which is to be the seat of future operations—(here it was that the Emperor Alexander caught the fever which carried him off)—may, it is thought, lead the allies to agree to terms less urgent than they would have done had the state of the armies been more satisfactory.

The proclamation of the Emperor to the army, in which he darkly alludes to the dreadful visitation of the cholera and recommends fortitude to the soldiers, has, on the whole, produced a painful impression, as it countenances the sad reports of the losses experienced from the pestilence by the troops, all mention of which had, by special orders, been suppressed in the accounts published by Government. It is, however, consoling to learn that the terrible scourge was considerably declining at the latest advices. In the meantime, this fatal calamity has altogether neutralised the gratification arising from the success of the allies at Bomarsund. The loss of 3,000 brave men, without drawing a sword, is naturally most disheartening; but what can one think of the cold-blooded infamy of those who exaggerate this frightful mortality to the amount of 7,000 in the French army alone? Surely the reality was sad and terrible enough without adding to the evil, and carrying distress into thousands of families. When such mischievous falsehoods are forwarded, is it to be wondered at that commanders are averse to the presence of correspondents in their camp? Among other infamies of the kind sent to France was the news of the deaths of four French generals (Canrobert, Trochu, D'Alberville, and Thierry), named in full, as having been among the first victims of the epidemic. They are all happily alive, and at their duties. The false account of the death of Mr. Hale, of rocket celebrity, is another of those fabrications, all of which are fraught with agony and affliction to so many. Surely the treadmill would be too light a punishment for such offenders.

It is affirmed that no less than three hundred adventurers, known in Paris for their connexion with the revolution of 1848 and the subsequent street insurrections in France, are at present in Madrid, and among the chiefs of the revolutionary clubs, in which they advise or dictate everything that is done in that city. Hence the sudden skill exhibited by the Madrilenos in the erection of barricades, and hence all the difficulties of well-meaning, honourable Espartero, who is far too good and too humane a man to deal with or understand such scoundrels. Pity Navarez is not of his party! He is like one of themselves, and his misprising mode of doing business would smooth all the difficulties that now beset the path of the Duke de la Victoria at one blow.

Our weather, which has been occasionally shaky, has settled down into lovely skies, bright sunshine, and in fine delicious travelling camps by day or night. The latter by the way being rather preferable, seeing that the provoking railways in every part of the world, invariably on arriving at any point in a landscape one is particularly desirous to see, bring their passengers deep between two rascally embankments, from which they only emerge upon some barren flat, leaving all that is beautiful or picturesque far behind. Rapidity of motion has certainly been obtained, but at the expense of all that gives its chief charm and variety to travel. So much has this been felt and complained of by a large class of railway travellers, that it is proposed to give facilities for seeing all celebrated spots, by placing public carriages at various stations, and to rearrange the present regulations, so that the voyagers may stop where and when they please without additional expense. This will mend a great evil; for at present you rush through the heart of the most beautiful parts of France without seeing more of it than tantalizing glimpses, which make one wish for the rumble of the old diligence, and its not to be replaced banquette, which, ill-favoured and lumbering as it looked, afforded means of seeing the surrounding country, with a comfort and convenience not to be surpassed.

Last week's obituary contains the name of M. de Foudras, a man, the secrets and history of whose life would form a chapter in biography which would throw even St. Simon's famous memoirs into the shade. In 1810, when M. de Rovigo became Minister of Police, M. de Foudras was employed in a humble capacity in his office; but soon the sterling stuff of his nature made its way and spoke for itself. M. de Foudras was appointed to organise the system by which the working classes are regulated in France, and to him is due the establishment of the levet system, by which all workmen, artisans, labourers, and man-servants are all registered, and receive a license in the shape of their levet (a little book, containing an attestation from employers of their conduct and character) without which they can find no employment, and which, on due cause being shown, may be temporarily suspended, or altogether withdrawn. Sad to say, that one of its most important consequences is that it renders strikes next to impossible. But verena est nos montans. One day, in 1810, M. de Rovigo learnt, through one of his spies, that a young student living at Frankfurt on the Maine had formed the design of assassinating the Emperor, and had started for Paris with that object. No further indications were given. M. de Rovigo entrusted Foudras with the difficult task of finding and arresting him. The next morning the young enthusiast was arrested as he was leaving his hotel—pistols were found upon his person, and he freely admitted his intention of shooting the Emperor as he rode out of the court yard at the Tuileries. The Emperor had Young Vandervelsch lodged at Vincennes, where, bating the want of liberty, he had all he could wish for; and when he was released on the arrival of the allies, he expressed his regret on being obliged to leave the comfortable quarters he had for four years occupied in the Donjon. M. de Foudras remained in office under the first restoration and the Hundred Days; and when Louis XVIII. re-entered the capital supported by the allies, he was still at his post; and though he freely accepted the new régime, he never imitated the meanness and ingratitude of many Bonapartists who strove to win favour with the Legitimist party by bespattering their former patron with mud. He remained in office until the ministry of M. Thiers, in 1835, when he retired, declaring that that giddy, clever, insouciant little minister would render another revolution inévitable! How true a prophecy! In 1848 the violence of the popular tempest alarmed him to such a degree as to induce him to destroy all his papers and correspondence. Many valuable documents for the history of the last fifty years have thus been lost to posterity.

THE EMPEROR NAPOLEON'S PROCLAMATION TO THE ARMY OF THE EAST.

The Moniteur says:—"The Emperor has just addressed the following proclamation to the army of the East:—"Soldiers and Samens of the Army of the East.—You have not yet fought, and already you have obtained a signal success. Your presence and that of the English troops have sufficed to constrain the enemy to recross the Danube, and the Russian ships remain shamefully in their ports. You have not yet fought, and already you have courageously contended against death. A redoubtable scourge, although transitory, has not checked your valour. France and the Sovereign she has given herself do not see, without deep emotion, without making every effort to come to your aid, so much energy and self-denial."

"The First Consul said, in 1799, in a proclamation to his army:—"The first quality of the soldier is constancy in enduring fatigues and privations; valour is only the second." The first you now display; who can deny you the second? Therefore, our enemies, spread from Finland to the Caucasus, strive anxiously to know how far France and England will deal those blows, which they clearly foresee will be decisive; for right, justice, and military inspiration are on our side.

"Already Bomarsund and two thousand prisoners have just fallen into our power. Soldiers, you will follow the example of the army of Egypt; the conquerors of the Pyramids and of Mount Thabor had like you to fight against hardy soldiers and with disease; but, despite the plague and the efforts of three armies, they returned honoured to their country."

"Soldiers, have confidence in your General-in-Chief and in me. I watch over you, and I hope, with the assistance of God, to see your sufferings soon diminish and your glory increase. Soldiers, (till we meet again) adieu."

"NAPOLEON."

The Moniteur publishes the following telegraphic despatch, dated Vienna, August 18:—"The Austrian corps which is the first destined to enter Wallachia has been ordered by telegraph to commence its march. It is believed that the frontier was crossed this very day, at the Rother-Thurn Pass, by two brigades advancing from Hermannstadt. This movement has been combined between General Hess and Omar Pasha, conformably to the Austro-Turkish treaty."

A CONSTANTINOPLE LETTER states that some of the officers of the staff of Omar Pasha had arrived in that capital to present to the Seraskier a boy only twelve years old, who fought at Silistria by the side of his father, when the latter was killed. Some English officers who had witnessed his bravery and filial love took him under their protection, and mentioned him to Omar Pasha, who sent him to the Seraskier, and at the same time recommended him to the Sultan.

AT THE HEAD OF THE MOHAMMEDAN CLERGY IN PEASIA stands the chief mollah, who is always a descendant of the sacred family of Ali, the son-in-law of Mohammed. Before the last Persian war, Aga Mir Fatah was invested with this hereditary dignity, and resided in Tabreez. When Fakhro-witsch appeared before that place Aga Mir Fatah entered into negotiations for its surrender. Having thus incurred the enmity of the Shah, he went to Tiflis, but a few years after he returned to Persia, a now mustachid having usurped his authority. In Isfahan he was poisoned, from the effects of which, however, he recovered. He drove away his enemy, and now resides at Tabreez, the Shah not daring to oppose him. His eldest son, Hajji Aga, lives on his father's estate near Tiflis; he has also two younger sons there, with five of his wives. He often visits his family at Tiflis, and receives a pension of 20,000 roubles from the Russian Government.

ADVICES FROM ST. PETERSBURG reach to the 15th inst., but they contain nothing new, except that Archangel was effectually blockaded on the 13th inst. As this would be the 1st inst. according to the old or Russian style, the delay in establishing the blockade, which excited surprise after it had been notified for the 1st, seems to be explained.

THE ALAND ISLANDS are no longer under the Russian domination, but are placed under their own administration. On Sunday, the 13th inst., a proclamation, signed by General Burgamy D'Hilliers, and countersigned by the Crown Bailie Jägnell, announcing that the Aland Islands were independent, and placed under the protection of England and France, was publicly read in all the parish churches of the islands.

WE LEARN FROM BERLIN that a sergeant-major and a sergeant of the Guards Artillery have received the King's permission to proceed to Egypt as instructors to the Egyptian artillery. The eminent practical services rendered to his special arm by Prussian officers in the Sultan's service have induced the Viceroy to make application to his Prussian Majesty. The two non-commissioned officers, both young men of great theoretical and practical knowledge, are engaged for six years, under the promise of a respectable pension should they not re-engage. The two non-commissioned officers will doubtless prove themselves worthy of their comrades in the Sultan's service, and, like Colonel Grach, obtain for themselves a distinguished and most honourable name throughout Europe.

MADRID ADVICES give the following as a text of the remarkable speech made by General San Miguel at the dinner given to the Ministers by the press of Madrid:—"Gentlemen,—As an old journalist myself, and as the patriarch of journalism, unfortunately, by my advanced age, I drink to a free press. I drink, gentlemen, to an institution which neither irons, nor laws, nor transportation, nor exile can destroy—(bravo, bravo!)—[A voice: Long live General San Miguel!]"—because thought is an emanation from the divinity, and there is no power in the world, there are no laws which can extinguish its powerful voice. The press has no other corrective than itself. (Bravo! "True.") The press has no other corrective than itself, the good sense of the public, and public education. It is only by this that the press is elevated and great. This is what we see in England, the classic country of liberty. A free press is a press that thinks, a press that administers, a press that does the work of diplomacy; it is in a word a great social lever which sets upon the interests of the state. Gentlemen, I flatter myself that the epoch we have all wished to see for the press, has now arrived. ("Yes, yes!") I hope the press will be found worthy of its high mission, that journalists will so exercise their calling that they may be supplanted to continue in the performance of their exalted task. I have been a journalist in times of danger and revolt, and to have been a journalist is for me the brightest recollection of my life; it is the title on which I most pride myself. I drink, then, to a free press, to a noble press, which does not descend to vulgar things, which condescends not to insults and personalities, to the press which respects the secrets of families. (Thunder of applause.) I drink, finally, to the men who have invited us to this banquet, which will be famous, because it will inaugurate a new era, in which the free and independent press of Europe will show to the entire world that there are in Spain journalists who know how to write, to think, and to interest themselves in the public cause. (Immense applause. Several journalists approach to embrace the venerable general.)

LETTERS FROM NAPLES, in the Monitore Toscano, of the 16th, state that two thirds of the inhabitants of Naples have emigrated, on account of the cholera. Among the victims of the epidemic are the Duke of Lieto, General Nunziante, and the Prince of Aci.

THE CALIFORNIA MAILS bring us the usual news of fire and destruction. San Francisco has been again visited by a conflagration, which has destroyed whole streets. The fire began in the Golden-gate Hotel, and burnt $200,000 worth of property. Sacramento city has met with a still greater loss. On the 13th of July a fire broke out there, which consumed property to the amount of £500,000 before it was checked. In reading these accounts, it is to be remembered that property is estimated in these new countries at a value far beyond that which it could have in New York and London.

FOREIGN MISCELLANY.

CUBA.—At Havannah the yellow fever was raging at our last advices. The intendente, and a number of other Spanish officials, had fallen victims to the disease. A slave vessel of 200 tons, called the Grey Eagle, of Philadelphia (cargo huddled), had been captured off the island by her Majesty's ship Espigle, and left at Havannah for condemnation.

TRIAL OF STEAM FIRE-ENGINES.—An American paper informs us that a committee of the board of aldermen of the city of New York having arrived at Cincinnati to examine the fire apparatus of that city, a trial of the engines was made one Friday afternoon. Fire was applied under the boilers of the "Uncle Joe Ross" just as she was leaving her depot, in Ninth-street, and in nine minutes and three seconds she was at the cistern throwing water through the hose. Eight streams were afterwards thrown at one time from each engine. After their powers were thoroughly tested, by a concerted signal every engine in the city left their respective houses, and, in nine minutes by the watch, all were on the ground. The exhibition of speed and efficiency proved most satisfactory to all.

EGYPT.—We had not thought it right to mention the rumours which were afloat after the death of Abbas Pasha; but, at present, information obtained from a good source does not allow any doubt to be entertained that his death was one of violence. Two of his Mandukes, who had recently witnessed the execution of several of their comrades, the victims of the cruel caprice of their master, and who had been menaced themselves with a similar fate, strangled him in the midst of his debauches, and then immediately fled, carrying with them all the jewels that they could lay hands on. It was said that one of them had been discovered in his hiding-place and arrested. On the 5th, the Egyptian steam-frigate Nil arrived at Alexandria from Constantinople, having on board Ferid Effendi, first secretary of the Sultan, bearer to Said Pasha of the firman of investiture.

ASSAULT ON THE AMERICAN PRESIDENT.—The Washington correspondent of the New York Daily Times, writing on August 5, says:—"Immediately after the adjournment of the Senate this afternoon, as President Pierce was leaving the Capitol, at the northern door, under the eastern arcade, he was followed out and addressed by James M. Jeffards, of Charleston, S.C. Jeffards was considerably intoxicated at the time, and was in company with J. S. Duke, of St. Louis, and F. Wiggins, of New York, all of whom had been drinking. The President shook hands with him, and Jeffards asked the President to take a drink, which he declined, and turned to enter his carriage. As he was doing so, his hat was knocked off by a hard boiled egg. Jeffards returned into the Capitol, saying the President was a d— fool. The President spoke to one of the police, asking if he had authority to make an arrest. Captain Dunnington and officer Wailes shortly after arrested Jeffards, who denied throwing the egg. An examination was had before Captain Dunnington, when one witness testified that he saw Jeffards with an egg in his hand a few minutes previous to the assault; another testified that he saw him throw in the direction of the President; and another that he saw him throw an egg at and hit the President. The justice decided to hold Jeffards to bail, and the accused sent for Senator Evans, who declined becoming bail. He then sent for another. In the meantime, becoming more sober, he cried bitterly, declaring that if sent to goal he would not be living. He then took out a small knife, and stabbed himself in the leg, just above the knee, saying he was determined to bleed to death. As the blood flowed profusely, he became alarmed, and allowed it to be examined, and was dismissed. The Attorney-General then communicated to Captain Dunnington the desire of the President that the prisoner be not prosecuted, and he was accordingly discharged."

COLONIAL.

CANADIAN POST-OFFICE.—The annual report of the Post-master-General of Canada shows that the low rate of postage in that province, or the uniform system, as it is termed, works as well as it was expected. The postage revenue for the year amounted to £84,866. 6s. 11½d., while the expenditure, including £14,348. 18s. 4d., balance due to England for British packet postages collected, was £40,034. 16s. 2½d., leaving a balance of £5,168. 9s. 3d. to be provided for out of the Consolidated Fund. As, however, £15,000 had been voted in favour of the postal revenue for the year 1852, and a balance of £2,450. 4s. 10½d. of this sum remained unexpended, with £5,000 voted for 1853, the deficiency for the past year was amply provided for.—New York Daily Times.

AVAILABLE CAPITAL IN VICTORIA.—From the returns now presented, the amount of money at the command of the people must appear truly amazing. The circulation and deposits amount to £8,076,166, which, for a population amounting, in the first quarter of this year, to about 250,000, would give upwards of £32 for every man, woman, and child in the colony. Comparing with Scotland, the birthplace of model banks, we find that in that country the circulation of notes, in 1851, was £3,350,000, for the population of 2,900,000, or about £1. 3s. per head; while in Victoria the circulation is £2,089,911, for a population of 250,000, or more than £8 per head.—Australian and New Zealand Gazette.

ARRIVAL OF THE CLEOPATRA FROM CANADA.—The Canadian Royal Mail screw steam-ship Cleopatra, Captain Salt, arrived at Liverpool on Tuesday morning, from Montreal and Quebec, from the latter of which ports she sailed on the 9th instant. She brought a full cargo and 192 passengers. A proclamation had been issued in an extra edition of the Canada Gazette of the 9th, convoking Parliament for the despatch of business on the 5th proximo. The Quebec Chronicle of the 9th says:—"The election returns of 123 constituencies have been received, leaving only the counties of Chicoutimi and Gaspé to be heard from. The following may be considered as accurate a statement of the result of the general election as it is possible, under the circumstances, to procure:—Ministerialists, 47; Anti-Ministerialists, 81; majority against ministers, 34. Mr. Clymer has defeated the gentleman commonly known as 'Cicero Rose,' in the county of Dundas."

Ceylon.—The question of gold at Newera Ellia (the mountain sanatorium of Ceylon) is again being discussed in the papers. It seems strange that neither there nor at Ratnapora did we ever hear gold in connexion with deposits of precious stones until European research has proved their simultaneous existence. Did nuggets of any size exist it is difficult to conceive how the gem-diggers missed them—although, to be sure, they never effected deep digging. The present operations, it is satisfactory to contemplate, are carried on in a climate exceedingly congenial to European life and health, if we except a tendency to dysentery in those who work long in the wet, from which Australia and California equally suffer. As calculated to interest our readers, we take from the Examiner a portion of an article on the gold discovery at Newera Ellia. "By Friday afternoon, at half-past three o'clock, the shaft had reached a depth of some thirty-six to thirty-eight feet. The soil penetrated was—first, thick, black, and peaty-looking; next, coarse yellow clay, with sand and stones mixed with it; then, very fine pipeclay; afterwards, coarse loose gravel and large stones, with a larger pipeclay below; and, lastly, fine gravel and decomposed rock. The stones found in this layer had evidently been exposed to the action of some rapid current, all being rounded from the smallest to the largest. Although it was not considered that the shaft was deep enough, it was determined, as our commissioner had to leave the following morning, to try a few pans of soil, and about four cwt. was washed. The result was highly satisfactory, a sufficient proportion of gold being produced to pay the working expenses. The gold is very fine and small, and there is no doubt that, with the rude appliances used, must have escaped. No nugget, nor anything in the nature of a nugget, was found, nor could it have been expected by any one who saw the nature of the soil from which the four cwt. were taken, only the smallest and lightest portions of as heavy a metal as gold being retained in it. On the request to wash some of it, the diggers at first objected that it would be useless, and it was only done to satisfy those who could not wait for the deeper digging. We shall receive a report in a day or two of the result of deeper sinking, which will be immediately published. Gold has been found in this (Newera Ellia) district over an immense extent. It has been found as you enter the plain on Mr. Selby, the Queen's Advocate's land, on the side of the hill at the back of Sir A. Buller's, on the low swamp in front of Mr. O'Connor's, at Messrs. Baker's saw mills, on the high land close by, on the Moonstone plains where the diggers are now working; and lastly, Mr. Baker, having learned how to prospect from the diggers, went some three miles lower down, on the Badulla-road, and, in every place that he tried, found gold. How much farther it may extend cannot, of course, at present be known; but here is an extent of six miles and a half over which it is known to be spread, and that, too, so thickly that even an unskilled washer find it in every pan of surface soil."

AUSTRALIANA.

OUTWARD BOUND.—The departures from the port of London for the Australian colonies during the past week have comprised altogether eleven vessels, of which three were to Port Phillip, with an aggregate burden of 1,656 tons; two to Sydney, with an aggregate burden of 1,304 tons; two to Adelaide, with an aggregate burden of 672 tons; one to New Zealand, of 761 tons; and one to Hobart Town, of 648 tons. Their total capacity was 6,216 tons. The rates of freight present no material variation.

FATAL ACCIDENT ON THE LONDON AND BRIGHTON RAILWAY.

CROYDON.—A double inquiry took place in this town on Tuesday relative to the circumstances attendant upon the fatal accident on Monday. The magistrates opened their investigation, and the coroner commenced his inquest, but it will be, in all probability, a considerable time before either of them are brought to a close. Two were killed and 100 were wounded.

MAGISTRATES' INQUIRY.

The magistrates assembled in the Town-hall, there being present Mr. E. R. Addams, the chairman of the bench, Captain Kemmiss, Mr. J. W. Sutherland, and Mr. T. Byron.

The four men who had been taken into custody were placed in the dock. They were Robert Simpson, the driver, and James Sladden, the fireman of the excursion train, and Edward Boynett, the driver, and Edward Knyvett, the fireman of the ballast engine, into which the excursion train ran.

Mr. William Brown stated that he was the superintendent of the Bricklayer's Arms railway station, and had charge of the excursion train which left Dover at 8.30 on Monday morning. As the train approached Croydon he saw that the auxiliary signal, 600 yards distant from the station, was all right, and the driver proceeded with the train, although at a reduced speed. When he turned the corner down train was passing, the steam from which obscured the station-signal, which almost immediately after he found indicated danger. He then saw the ballast-engine in front of him on the same line, but had not time effectually to turn off his steam before the fatal collision took place. The accident was entirely attributable to the fact that the auxiliary signal was not as it should be.

Mr. Everest, of Epsom, who appeared for Boynett and Knyvett, asked what was the charge against his clients? The Chairman said the four men were charged with having caused the death of James Gammon on the occasion of the accident referred to.

Mr. Everest contended there was no evidence, and it was not pretended there was any, against his clients. Whatever might have been the fault of other persons they were in their proper place taking in water. They could not be said to be negligent, and unless there was some evidence to attach blame to them he submitted that they ought to be discharged. There was not a tittle of evidence to support the charge.

Captain Kemmiss: We are here to go into the evidence, whatever it may be.

Mr. Rawlins contended that if the blame rested anywhere, it rested on the Brighton people.

James Clanner was then called: He said he was signalman on the London and Brighton Railway, at the Croydon station. He had charge both of the station-signal and the auxiliary signal.

Mr. Burgen, who, with Mr. Rawlins, attended for the driver and firemen of the excursion train, said as the witness was the man who ought to have attended to the signal, it was not the right course to examine him at that stage of the proceedings.

Mr. Church, who appeared for the South-Eastern Company, said the witness stood in as suspicious a position as either of the prisoners.

Mr. Inspector Ludd said that he took the four men into custody. In an ordinary case of a man running over another on a road he should have been obliged to detain him, and he thought his duty was the same in a great railway accident. He had that afternoon been directed by Sir Richard Mayne to produce what evidence he could before the magistrates, but he could not state at present what that evidence would be. He must, therefore, apply for an adjournment.

The Chairman said that the inspector had acted quite properly, and the inquiry must be adjourned.

Mr. Everest: Will you admit my clients to bail?—The Chairman: Certainly not; certainly not.

Mr. Everest: Will you not take evidence?—The Chairman: No.

Mr. Everest: Then I will apply to a judge at chambers, on Wednesday. The Chairman: Very well.

The inquiry was then adjourned until Friday, the 25th inst.

THE INQUEST.

Mr. William Carter, the coroner for East Surrey, opened the inquest on the body of Mr. John Gammon, of East Peckham (the earliest sufferer in this unfortunate collision), at the Railway Tavern, East Croydon. The other deceased passenger was the Rev. Mr. Wallace, the rector of Horsemenden, in Kent. The rev. gentleman at his own request was sent to St. Thomas's Hospital. Mr. Allingham, the house surgeon, attended upon him and did all that was necessary, but he never rallied, and died in twenty minutes after his admission. The unfortunate deceased was only twenty-six years of age, and had been married about six or seven weeks.

The Jury having been sworn, the Coroner simply repeated that his only object for opening the inquiry was to have the body identified, preparatory to its removal for interment. He did not propose to go further into the case on that occasion. He knew nothing of the circumstances attending it, except what he had read in the newspapers, and no doubt they (the jury) were all familiar with the fact that the deceased came to his death owing to a collision on the railway; and the question would be, after ascertaining the cause, whether any person or persons were responsible from any cause, whether negligence or otherwise, in causing the death of the deceased. He would not then offer any further observations, but ask the jury to go with him to view the body.

On their return, the only evidence was that of William Gammon, a labourer, residing at East Peckham, Kent, who identified the body of the deceased as that of his father. The deceased was a gardener, and aged sixty-three. He resided with his wife at East Peckham, and the last time witness saw him alive was between seven and eight on Monday morning; he was then getting ready to go by the excursion train from Parrock Wood station to the Crystal Palace. He was then in good health. He first saw his father dead at the Railway Tavern on Monday evening.

Alfred Batters, a porter at the station, who removed the body of the deceased from under the carriages, identified that viewed by the jury as the same.

The Coroner said he did not propose to go any further.

After some conversation, the inquest was adjourned until Wednesday next, the 30th inst.

On inquiry it appeared that of three cases entered at Guy's Hospital neither had proved fatal. Anne Saunders, the unfortunate female who suffered amputation of the right leg, was going on well, and the other patients were proceeding very favourably. Caroline Harris, who was conveyed to St. Thomas's Hospital, and who underwent a similar operation, died shortly afterwards. An officer has been despatched to Dover to institute inquiries.

Police Intelligence.

GUILDHALL.

ASSAULT.—Dennis Horringer, a most repulsive-looking fellow, described as a prizefighter, was brought up for assaulting a female, and also for assaulting a policeman in the execution of his duty.—Elizabeth Harris, a very pretty-looking young woman, said she saw the prisoner intoxicated and trying to pick a quarrel with her sweetheart, and because she advised the latter to get out of the way, the prisoner struck her a violent blow on her mouth.—The officer said the prisoner was very violent at the station, and knocked him and another policeman down.—Alderman Humphrey expressed his surprise that a little fellow like the prisoner should be able to throw two such powerful men as the officers evidently were. The officers said that the prisoner had a knack of entwining himself round their legs in the form of a figure of 8, and the strongest man could not stand when he got in that position.—The prisoner was then fined 10s. for the assault on the girl, and in default seven days' imprisonment; and for the assault on the constable he was committed to prison for twenty-one days, without the option of paying any pecuniary penalty.

CLERKENWELL.

THE MOUSE TRICK.—George Grant, an "artful dodger," fifteen years of age, was put at the bar, charged with having picked the pocket of Mrs. Eliza Richards, a lady residing in the neighbourhood of Islington.—The prisoner was in the habit of going about the town with a machine, containing three white mice, which he had trained to crawl up a ladder, and to perform other antics. He was possessed of the "gift of the gab," and would attract a crowd of persons by loudly describing the merits of the "performers," while he was otherwise engaged with other young thieves who were in the crowd picking the pockets of women, &c. The prisoner was observed to pick the pocket of the lady, who was watching eagerly the "acting of creeping Jenny," one of the mice, and he was taken into custody.—The prisoner denied the charge, but he was sentenced to six weeks' imprisonment, with hard labour, in the House of Correction.

LAMBETH.

ALLEGED ILLEGAL DETENTION OF AN HEIRESS AND WARD IN CHANCERY.—A gentleman, accompanied by a young lady of prepossessing appearance, attended before Mr. Elliott, when the former, who represented himself as the proprietor of a ladies' boarding-school at Clapham, handed to the magistrate a weekly paper, and begged to call his attention to the particulars of an application made to his worship on Saturday last on behalf of the father of a young lady, wherein it was alleged that the daughter of the applicant had been illegally kept away from her parents, with the improper and sinister purpose of getting her married to a poor relation, and a person much inferior to her in property and station. Mr. Elliott having read the report to which his attention had been called, observed that the representations made to him were most faithfully given, but having no jurisdiction in the matter he referred the parties to a judge for a habeas.—[See "THE FIELD," p. 780].—The gentleman said that the parties who had made the application had not stated the facts as they should have done. The young lady on whose behalf the application was made was then present, and could contradict him if he stated anything but the truth. In the first place, he wished to say that the lady had not been placed at his school by her father, but by an order of the Court of Chancery, of which Court she was then a ward. In the second place, she was not prevented from seeing her father on the day in question; but the fact was, she was not at home when her father called, and he was told so. She was, however, sent for, and on her return, and on her father calling a second time, she had an interview with him. With regard to her not leaving the school and going home to her parents, the young lady herself would state her reasons. The young lady then referred to, said her principal objection to going home was an evident desire on the part of her father to obtain a control over her fortune, which was £5,000, and not £2,000 as stated. This disposition was to her quite apparent, from the fact of her father's desire that she should put her name to bills and stamped papers. Mr. Elliott remarked that the parties who had made application to him had entirely omitted to state the important fact that the lady had been a ward of Chancery, and was placed at the school by an order of that Court. On the contrary, he was led to believe that she had been placed there by her father, and he thought it somewhat strange that he (the father) should have been refused to see her. The gentleman solemnly assured his worship that this was not the case, and that the reasons for her not seeing her father were those he had before stated, and nothing else. Mr. Elliott remarked, that in the notice which appeared in the paper before him of the former application, the names of the parties, and the school, were, with a proper feeling of delicacy, omitted; and this being the case, he (Mr. Elliott) wished to know what could be the object of the present application? The gentleman replied, it was a mere anxiety on the part of the young lady and himself to set the public right on the subject, and they therefore hoped that the same public notice would be taken of their explanation as that given to the former application. Mr. Elliott had no doubt this would be done, and the parties having expressed their thanks to the magistrate for the attention given to them, left the court.

CAMBERWELL FAIR.—On Monday the sitting magistrate at this court, Mr. Elliott, was engaged for upwards of three hours in hearing charges of felony against a shoat of practised pickpockets, brought together from all parts of the metropolis by that annual nuisance, Camberwell fair.—Sergeant Quinlan, of the P division, informed his worship that on Saturday night, when darkness favoured their operations, scarcely anything could be heard on the fair green but the cries of females, exclaiming, "You young devil, vagabond, &c. (as the case might be), you have had, or you have, your hand in my pocket. I shall well box your ears;" and many of them suited the action to the word, and thumped them soundly. The sergeant said it was really quite shocking to see the number of little thieves, some of them merely children, who were clinging about the dresses of the females for the purpose of picking pockets; and observed, that amongst the persons apprehended were two or three who were never known to do anything of the sort before, but were tempted to pick pockets by the example set them by others.—Mr. Elliott observed, that this fair of Camberwell was nothing better than a sink of iniquity, and it was most disgraceful that it was not put an end to.—Of the persons charged, there were Hugh Lewis, only nine years of age; William Wade, ten; Charles Wade, eleven; Joseph Collins, twelve; and James George, twelve. The first-mentioned child was handed over to his parents on their promising to correct him soundly; and the others were let off by a severe reprimand, and one of them a flogging from the gaoler, while the more practised of them were either remanded, or sent to the House of Correction for different periods.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE AND HEROIC CONDUCT.—Mrs. Leech, a married female, was charged with jumping off one of the penny boats at Westminster Bridge.—The prisoner, it appeared, had some words with her husband in the course of the afternoon, and had determined to destroy herself. A man, named Davis, who has just returned from India, having been discharged there from the 24th regiment, and who is a candidate for the appointment of a constable at Scotland-yard, jumped in after her, and at great risk to his own life saved her.—Mr. Elliott commended the heroic conduct of Davis, and expressed a hope that he would succeed in getting his appointment in the police.—The prisoner was remanded.

THE ASSAULT AT BEULAH SPA.—Wednesday having been appointed for the further examination of the Messrs. Newton, on the charge of savage assault, committed by them on the person of Stewart Ker, Esq., in the pleasure-grounds of the Beulah Spa, on Friday, the 4th instant, the court was crowded.—Mr. Francis Robert Newton was brought from Horsefonger-lane gaol, and his brother, William Philip Newton, being in attendance in discharge of his sureties and recognizances, the case was called on.—Mr. Wontner was in attendance for the prosecution, and Mr. Depree, the solicitor, and Mr. Clarkson, the barrister, were present for the defence.—Mr. Wontner, addressing Mr. Elliott, observed that when the present charge was last before his worship, three medical gentlemen had been called and examined, and all deposed to the then state of Mr. Ker, and declared also that they could not, from the condition the sufferer was then in, take it on them, within a fortnight, to pronounce any opinion on his case. From that time, and up to the present moment, he was sorry to say that no favourable change was perceptible in the condition of the unfortunate gentleman. On the contrary, he understood that Mr. Ker was much worse, and that symptoms of an unfavourable nature began to present themselves, and therefore he did not think it necessary to trouble the medical gentlemen to attend. He produced a certificate, of which the following is a copy:—"We certify that since our last report, on Wednesday, the 16th inst., Mr. Stewart Ker's condition has been, and still is, such that we are unable to pronounce him out of danger. HENRY CHARLES JOHNSON, JOHN STANLEY CHRISTIAN, 56, Brompton-crescent, August 23, 1854."—Mr. Clarkson said he had the honour to appear on behalf of the family of the young men who were unhappily implicated in this affair, and observed that, however eminent and respectable Mr. Johnson and Mr. Christian might be, the certificate produced and signed by them was such that he could not understand. Applications had been made by the parents of the defendants that Mr. Ker, who, he was sorry to say, was the sufferer in the unfortunate rencontre, might be seen by one of two medical men they had named, so that their natural anxieties might be satisfied as to the real state of that gentleman, but this was refused. The certificate produced did not say that the patient was in a state of absolute danger, and he (Mr. Clarkson) would beg that the magistrate would interpose and give an order that an eminent surgeon—say, Mr. Ferguson, or any other gentleman that might be fixed on—might be allowed to see Mr. Ker, and the family would be but too ready and willing to pay all expenses attendant on such a visit. This request he (Mr. Clarkson) considered but reasonable, and he trusted the magistrate would consider it within the scope of his duty and grant the order.—

Mr. Elliott did not think he should be justified in giving such an order, particularly as it had been alleged that such a step might be attended with danger. He had no wish to keep one of the parties in prison beyond the period when the suffering gentleman was pronounced out of danger. Indeed, he had stated that whenever a certificate reached him to that effect, he should cause the prisoner to be brought before him for the purpose of being discharged on the necessary securities.—Mr. Wontner remarked that from inquiries he had made it was his opinion that Mr. Ker would not recover, but should be in a condition to be seen, or the slightest improvement take place, he should suggest to the medical gentlemen at present attending him to call on Mr. Ferguson as requested.—Mr. Elliott repeated he felt it to be his duty to remand the prisoners for another week, but should take bail as before for the younger brother, William, in the former sum of himself in £1000 and two sureties in £500 each.—The former bail was enlarged, and the younger prisoner set at large, and his brother sent back to Horsefonger-lane gaol.

Hits and Spurs.

WORK AND KNOWLEDGE.—The King of Bavaria has decreed that no children aged less than ten years at least, and who have not received elementary and religious instruction, shall be employed in manufactories; that they shall not be occupied more than nine hours a day, and that of them three shall be passed at school; that the children shall be continually under surveillance; and that, if possible, the two sexes shall be kept separate.

DR. CUMMING.—A pleasant characteristic of Dr. Cumming's writings is the frankness and, indeed, boldness, with which he announces sentiments such as timid men would shrink from uttering, or would express with reserve or equivocation. For instance, he does not hesitate to declare his persuasion in reference to the much vexed interpretation of Mark ix. 13, as to the identity of the prophet Elijah with John the Baptist. On this subject Dr. Cumming expresses himself as follows:—"I believe before the second advent of our blessed Lord in glory and Majesty, Elijah will literally come and restore all things. There is nothing strange in supposing that, as John the Baptist came to precede Christ to suffer, so Elijah will come to precede Christ to reign in glory. That Elijah lives is plain from the fact that he appeared on the Mount of Transfiguration; and that he will come and restore all things is not only the promise of our blessed Lord, but the reiterated prophecy of the Old Testament Scriptures."

BASHI-BAZOUKS.—The title means literally, it seems, disorderly head-gear. Every rank and profession was formerly designated by its peculiar turban (very curious some of them are), and those persons who had no calling, and therefore, no special head-dress, were called Bashi-Bazonka.—The Builder.

AN AMUSING MISTAKE.—A gentleman of Douai was going out in his carriage to make some calls with his wife when he discovered that he had left his visiting cards. He ordered his footman, recently come into his service, to go to the mantelpiece in the sitting-room and bring the cards he should see there. The servant did as he was ordered, retained the articles to be used as he was directed, and off started the gentleman, sending in the footman with cards wherever the "not at home" occurred. As these were very numerous, he turned to his servant with the question—"How many cards have you left?" "Well, sir," says the footman very innocently, "there's the king of spades, the six of hearts, and the ace of clubs!" "The dounce!" exclaimed his master. "That's gone," said John.

CHEESE AS A DIGESTER.—As a digester, as some not appropriately call it, cheese—that which is decayed and mouldy being preferred by connoisseurs—is often eaten after dinner. The action which experience seems to have proved it to possess, in aiding the digestion of what has previously been eaten, is both curious and interesting, and has had some light thrown upon it by recent chemical research. When the curd of milk is exposed to the air in a moist state for a few days, at a moderate temperature, it begins gradually to decay, to emit a disagreeable odour, and to ferment. When in this state, it possesses the property, in certain circumstances, of inducing a species of chemical change and fermentation in other moist substances with which it is mixed or is brought into contact. It acts after the same manner as sour leaven does when mixed with sweet dough. Now, old and partially decayed cheese acts in a similar way when introduced into the stomach. It causes chemical changes gradually to commence among the particles of the food which has previously been eaten, and thus facilitates the dissolution which necessarily precedes digestion. It is only some kinds of cheese, however, which will effect this purpose. Those are generally considered the best in which some kind of cheese mould has established itself. Hence, the mere eating of a morsel of cheese after dinner does not necessarily promote digestion. If too new, or of improper quality, it will only add to the quantity of food with which the stomach is already overloaded, and will have to await its turn for digestion by the ordinary process.—Chemistry of Common Life.

A WEALTHY TAILOR.—Mr. Brunskill, a tailor, at Exeter, who, in early life, was without a shilling, has died, leaving a fortune of £200,000 to three children, boys of tender years. For the first seven years of his life as a tradesman, he worked seventeen hours a day, Sunday included. He boasted that he "was the only man in Exeter who could ride forty miles a day, and cut out for forty men." In addition to his large tailoring business, which returned above £25,000 a year, he was a money-broker, and made speculative ventures occasionally with "young men of expectations," realising large interest thereby.—Liverpool Standard.

A FINE OLD IRISH GENTLEMAN.—The Feenian says:—"Owen Duffy, of Monaghan county, is 122 years old. When 116 he lost his second wife, and subsequently married a third, by whom he had a son and a daughter. His youngest son is two years old—his eldest ninety. He still retains, in much vigour, his mental and corporal faculties, and frequently walks to the county town, a distance of eight miles."

EARLIEST MENTION OF PORTER.—You were kind enough, in your eighth volume, to give me some information as to the first introduction of this beverage. I have since found the passage to which I referred, in Nicholas Amherst's "Torre Pilus" for May 22, 1721, somewhat earlier than the date you have mentioned:—"We had rather dine at a cook's shop upon beef, cabbage, and porter, than tuck at an oven, or rot in a dark, stinking dungeon." This is probably the very earliest mention in print of porter.—Notes and Queries.

HARVESTING IN BULGARIA.—Two things strike the stranger in the Turkish Bulgarian manner of getting in the harvest. One is, that on the left hand of each reaper is fixed a wooden finger at right angles to his middle fingers. By this means he is enabled to grasp a much larger handful than he could otherwise. The other is the manner of chopping the straw. It is laid out in a circle, and a wooden framework, like the bottom of a cart, having sharp flints let into the wood, is dragged round the circle by bullocks, while the driver stands on it adding his weight to that of the framework. This process divides the straw into bits an inch long, suitable for feeding cattle. The fields, or rather plains of barley and wheat, are remarkable for a nearly total absence of weeds, a quality which would rejoice the heart of an English farmer. The straw is in general short, but the ear appears full.

THE MAYOR AND THE JUDGE.—In a neighbouring city, at the late assizes, when Chief Justice Monahan entered the Crown Court, the mayor, who had not been in time to meet him, suddenly appeared rebellious, and as hurried as it is possible to be. "My lord," said he, "I must apologise to your lordship. Your lordship has been too early for me, but I really have come in a great hurry." Chief Justice: "So I perceive, Mr. Mayor—in such a hurry that you've left your robes behind you." The reply was excellent—"My lord, it's not to our robes, but to our brains, we owe our present position."—Leicester Express.

THE THEORY OF RAPTURE.—Dr. Schiff, of Frankfurt, read a paper lately to the French Academy, in which he professes to have discovered the mystery of spirit-rapping. His attention was called to the case of a young girl near whose person noises attributed to the spirit-rappers were produced. Dr. Schiff's observations led him to conclude that the knocking had taken place within the body of this young girl, not outside; and he has shown experimentally that such noise can be produced by the reiterated displacement of the tendons of the long muscle of the shin bone (muscle long peronier), from the sheath in which it glides in passing behind the external ankle bone (malleole externe).

A JACK SHUFFARD.—One Thomas Drysdale broke out of the Kintross prison some years ago and escaped the vigilance of the authorities. A few weeks ago he was again caught, brought back, and lodged in the same prison, to take his trial for his old offence. On Friday last, whilst on examination before Sheriff Syme, the Fiscal, and others, he made a dash to the window of the room, which was up to admit air, and leapt out, a depth of thirteen feet. While in the act of leaping, the sheriff caught hold of his jacket, but was not able to hold on, and so the prisoner got down, leapt a stone wall of six feet, got clear off, and has not yet been heard of.—Edinburgh Courier.

SOYER'S PLAN FOR MAKING CHOCOLATE.—Scrape two ounces of the cake, which put into a stewpan, with a wine-glass of water, upon the fire, keeping it stirred with a wooden spoon until rather thick; then work it quickly with the spoon, and stir in half a pint of boiling milk by degrees. Serve very hot.

HEALTH RESTORED. HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—An Extraordinary Cure of Dropsy, after suffering for eighteen months.

Copy of a Letter from Mr. G. Briggs, Chemist, Goole, dated February 15th, 1853.

TO PROFESSOR HOLLOWAY.

Sir,—I have much pleasure in informing you of a most surprising cure of dropsy, recently effected by your valuable medicines. Captain Jackson, of this place, was afflicted with dropsy for upwards of eighteen months, to such an extent that it caused his body and limbs to be much swollen, and water oozed as it were from his skin, so that a daily change of apparel became necessary. Notwithstanding the various remedies tried, and the different medical men consulted, all was of no avail, until he commenced using your Pills, by which, and a strict attention to the printed directions, he was effectually cured, and his health perfectly re-established. If you think this worthy of publicity, you are at liberty to use it.

I am, Sir, yours respectfully,

(Signed) G. BRIGGS.

PIPES.

"The above engraving represents accurately a section of a leaden pipe, which was employed for a short time in conveying water from a well on the grounds of Mr. DICK, of Bonchurch, Isle of Wight. The original section of pipe is 84 in. long, 21 in. diameter, and 5-16 in. thick. A great part of the internal surface is corroded by the action of the water, but, as shown in the drawing, four deep excavations have been made, and another is shaded out of view by the manner in which the section of the pipe has been cut. The water has cut these deep pits almost through the pipe, and not only upon the portion which we have illustrated, but have formed similar chasms throughout the entire length."—Expositor.

N.B.—The corrosive water of the Isle of Wight has no effect on Gutta Percha Tubing. See Testimonial below.

DURABILITY OF GUTTA PERCHA TUBING.

Many inquiries having been made as to the durability of Gutta Percha Tubing, the Gutta Percha Company have pleasure in giving publicity to the following letter from Sir RAYMOND JARVIS, Ventnor, Isle of Wight.

(Second Testimonial)

March 10, 1852.

"In reply to your letter received this morning, respecting the Gutta Percha Tubing for pump service, I can state, with much satisfaction, it answers perfectly. Many builders and other persons have lately examined it, and there is not the least apparent difference since the first laying down, now several years; and I am informed that it is to be adopted generally in the houses that are being erected here."

THE MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fill) forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the manufacturer.

LIGHT BROWN COD LIVER OIL.

PREPARED FOR MEDICINAL USE IN THE LOFFODEN ISLES, NORWAY, AND PUT TO THE TEST OF CHEMICAL ANALYSIS.

The most Effectual Remedy for Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma,
Gout, Chronic Rheumatism,

AND ALL SCROFULOUS DISEASES.

Approved of and recommended by Berzelius, Liebig, Wochler, Jonathan Pereira, Fouquier, and numerous other distinguished scientific Chemists in Europe.
Prescribed by the most eminent Physicians, and supplied to the leading Hospitals of Europe.
Specially rewarded with Medals by the Governments of Belgium and the Netherlands.
Has almost entirely superseded all other kinds on the Continent, in consequence of its proved superior power and efficacy—effecting a cure much more rapidly.
Contains iodine, phosphate of chalk, volatile acid, and the elements of the bile—in short, all its most active and essential principles—in larger quantities than the pale oils manufactured in England and Newfoundland, deprived mainly of these by their modes of preparation.

EXTRACTS FROM OPINIONS OF THE MEDICAL JOURNALS.

"THE LANCET," July 29, 1854.

"In the preference of the Light Brown over the Pale Oil, we fully concur. We have carefully tested a specimen of the Light Brown Cod Liver Oil, prepared for medical use under the direction of Dr. de Jongh, and obtained from the Wholesale Agents, Messrs. Ansar, Harford, and Co., 77, Strand. We find it to be genuine, and rich in iodine and the elements of bile."

"THE MEDICAL CIRCULAR," May 10, 1854.

"The almost reluctance may be placed upon the experimental researches of Dr. de Jongh, who is one of the most eminent of European chemists; the oil prepared by him enjoys all the additional sanction of the opinion of Baron Liebig and the late Dr. Pereira, in favour of its genuineness and efficacy. Our own experience practically confirms their judgment, and we enthusiastically recommend the Light Brown Oil as the best for medicinal purposes, and well deserving the confidence of the profession."

"THE MEDICAL TIMES," August 5, 1854.

"We believe that the profession is much indebted to Dr. de Jongh for his laborious researches into the composition and properties of this oil; and we have the high authority of Baron Liebig and the late Dr. Pereira in testimony of the value of these labours."

Sold wholesale and in retail, in bottles, labelled with Dr. de Jongh's Stamp and Signature, by ANSAR, HARFORD, and CO., 77, Strand, Sole Consignees and Agents for the United Kingdom and the British Possessions, at the following prices:—

her to assist her off. She was going to join Admiral Plumridge but keeping too close to the right shore, stuck on a mud bank opposite the largest fortress of 72 guns. The barge's crew of Termagant were among those who distinguished themselves in rendering aid. I hear that one of the officers in that boat, Mr. Alfred Marescaux, had a narrow escape or two. The third shot at Penelope cut a man near him in two, the same shot bounded into a boat alongside and killed a Freuchman. Another shot knocked over four hands on the quarter-deck, one of whom had bobbed, and thus lost his head; and the next man was cut in two, while Mr. M. was struck by a splinter, but not hurt. In twenty minutes thirty shot bulled the Penelope, but she was got off safe amid tremendous cheering. A red-hot shot struck within two feet of her magazine. Had the shot not have been arrested, Penelope would have been blown up with all hands.

A French seaman killed belonging to the Duperré.

A poor marine, of the Duke of Wellington met his quietus in a very summary manner. He was lying asleep in a tent, when a round shot from the large fort fell into it, striking the unfortunate man on the chest. He never woke again in this world.

Commander Anderson, of the Cressy, is dead. The news came in by the Vulture, which has just arrived from the Gulf of Finland, and will return thither again as soon as she gets out of the brig Harlequin some stores intended for that portion of the fleet under the command of Rear-Admiral Martin. The vacancy will doubtless be given to Lieut. Agnew, "Old Charley's" flag-lieutenant. Commander Anderson was only promoted on the occasion of Captain Foster's death. He did not enjoy his rank long.

The steamers engaged, ranged in a semi-circle opposite the principal fort, were two French steamers, with Valorous, Hecla, Amphion, Phlegathon, Driver, Edinburgh, and Arrogant; four or five fired within 400 yards' range. Sir Charles Napier and the French admiral's divisions were anchored just out of range, in front of the fort.

Intelligence was received in London on Tuesday, under date Dantzic, August 19, that her Majesty's ship Basilisk had just arrived from the capture of Bomarsund, bringing Lieutenant Agnew, bearing the despatches relative to the event from Sir C. Napier to her Majesty's Government. The Imperial steamer, the Reine Hortense, also arrived with an officer conveying the official dispatches to the French Government.

REAR-ADMIRAL CHADS TO VICE-ADMIRAL SIR CHARLES NAPIER.

"Edinburgh, off Bomarsund, Aug. 12.

"Sir,—In obedience to your directions to give every aid from the four ships of my squadron named in the margin* to Brigadier-General Jones, to form a breaching battery, I consulted with that officer, who proposed to compose his battery of six thirty-two pounders of forty-two cwt., which guns you had forwarded in the Belleisle, when the following operations were undertaken:—

"Each ship having previously prepared two sledges, after a pattern made by Captain Ramsay, for dragging the guns, four were landed on the morning of the 10th, to convey three guns and the carriages and the gear, with 150 men to each sledge, under their respective senior lieutenants, the whole being under the command of Captain Hewlett, of my flag-ship, encouraged occasionally by their own captains.

"The situation selected for the battery from the landing-place was four and a half miles distant, over exuberant ground, the greatest portion of steep rocky hills and ploughed fields.

"At five o'clock the boats left the ships, erected shears, landed the guns, and had them in the General's camp by one o'clock. The exertions and goodwill of the officers and seamen created much astonishment in the encampment of the French troops, who cheered them in passing, and on some of the most difficult ascents went in voluntarily and most cheerfully to the drag-ropes, and gave their assistance.

"On arriving in camp the men were much exhausted, and lay down to rest and prepare their dinners, when an order arrived that they were to embark immediately, as the Penelope was on shore under the fire of the enemy, and their ships might be required. The order was received with cheers, and, forgetting dinner and fatigue, they rushed down to their boats in three quarters of an hour by a short route, but close under the enemy's fire.

"On the next morning the same number of guns were landed, but on this occasion with 200 men from each ship, as the parties the previous evening were much fatigued; these guns were in the camp by half-past ten.

"The bands of the ships attended the parties, and the whole march was one of triumph over difficulties that previously had been considered almost insurmountable; the spirits of the men were occasionally excited by a dropping shot from the enemy.

"It is unnecessary for me to expatiate on the merits of Captain Hewlett, the officers, and seamen, in performing this arduous service, but to express my admiration of their great zeal and perseverance, as from personal observation on the spot you will have formed your own judgment.

"I have, &c.,

"H. D. CHADS, Rear-Admiral, &c.

"Vice-Admiral Sir Charles Napier, K.C.B., &c."

Immediately after the surrender of Bomarsund, General Baraguay d'Hilliers and Mr. Grey, Secretary of the English Legation, started for Stockholm, it is supposed with a view of inducing the Swedish Government to join the Western Powers.

ADMIRALTY, Aug. 23.—Lieutenant John De Courcy A. Agnew, Flag-Lieutenant to Vice-Admiral Sir Charles Napier, K.C.B., has this day been promoted to the rank of commander.

ADDITIONAL MEMORANDA AND INCIDENTS.

(From various sources.)

The principal fort surrendered on Wednesday, the 16th. The English flag was planted by Mr. Bogel, of H.M.S. Amphion, on the first Russian fort, amidst the cheers and huzzas of the combined fleet. The Bulldog got on shore; she was got off by the assistance of the Amphion and Vulture.—On Wednesday, the 9th inst., stores were landed. In the evening a detachment of Russian soldiers was observed in Praesto Channel. Some boats endeavoured to take them. The Russians made their escape, leaving five or six small boats in the hands of the English.—There were many very narrow escapes. The ground was ploughed up in all directions by shot and shells; and it appears almost miraculous that so few casualties occurred among the English and French. The rifle practice of the French Chasseurs was admirable. After the Tzee Fort had surrendered, it was the object of great curiosity. The sides of the embrasures, and the opposite walls, were thickly dotted with marks made by the rifle balls, which struck so closely and so quickly, that it had been impossible for a Russian to show himself and escape a wound. Several slight casualties happened, and one poor fellow of the Blenheim broke his leg.—During the attack, Lieutenant Cameron Wrottesley, R.E., was killed. He was stooping down, in obedience to signal, when a shot, after striking the trunnion of one of the guns, bounded against him, inflicting a dreadful wound. His side was crushed, and his hands, which were folded together at the time, were torn to pieces; he died very soon afterwards.—The British camp was a strange scene, round shot and shell plunging and bursting over it; some of the officers seated in their tents at breakfast, others making their toilets on dressing tables of granite boulders, some writing letters on the same rude sort of table; and although the whole affair was fraught with danger, yet it was the source of much merriment, some diving, as a ball whizzed over their heads, and popping it up again to resume their occupations, whether toilet, letter writing, or breakfast.—The Russian General Bodisco is an old man, apparently eighty years of age. He was very anxious that the French general in chief should certify that he had done his duty. General Baraguay d'Hilliers returned the Russian general's sword, and at the same time extolled the valour with which he had defended his trust and the prudence which had surrendered it when further resistance could have done no more than cause an useless loss of life. The Russian general then sent a priest to the officer in command of Praesto Fort, with orders to surrender. The order was obeyed; thus the four forts of Bomarsund fell into the possession of the allies.—As the Russian commandant passed the debris of the first round tower, he looked up and exclaimed to an officer, "Oh, England, England, we did not expect this from you." They had breakfast in the English camp, and were then marched three miles to the boats under the charge of Captain Sayer, Lieutenant Bent, and a large party of Marines with loaded muskets.—At eight on the morning of the 16th, the prisoners, to the number of 118, were put on board the Ternagant.—A gallant exploit is told of Lieutenant Bytheson, H.M.S. Arrogant. This officer having been informed that the Russian mail, with despatches from St. Petersburg to the commander at Bomarsund would pass in a particular direction, determined to intercept it. He disguised himself, and, with an interpreter, concealed himself in a house by the roadside. After their night's watch, they perceived four men with the letter-bags. He and his companion, armed each with a revolver, called out on the four Russians, and summoned them to surrender. The Russians gave themselves up. No public despatch, however, was found. Only private letters were in the bags.—One of the officers of engineers, named Cowell, unfortunately shot himself in the thigh whilst putting his pistol in the holster. The ball passed down the centre of the thigh; but, luckily, missed the artery. Prompt medical aid was secured, the ball extracted, and he is now doing well.—Lieutenant Bond, of the Royal George, was accidentally shot while examining a revolver.—When Penelope was ashore, a French boat that was carrying hawseers, &c., received a shot, that killed the midshipman and one man. Another account says, the Russian battery fired some red-hot shot, by which two men were killed and three wounded. One shot passed completely through the ship, killing a man, and then falling into a French boat, killing another. The names of the men killed are George Privett, petty officer, and Thomas Barber; and three wounded—Robinson, a marine, and two men of the Ternagant and Belleisle.—A hot shot having passed through a midshipman's chest in the steerage, it was lifted on a shovel, placed on three cold ones, and allowed to expend its heat harmlessly.—At night, on the 11th, the two men killed on board the Penelope were carried by torch-light to a small island, and the funeral rites performed: they were silently buried. In the morning a boat's crew landed there, and erected head-posts, and planted some small fire over their graves, and on a tree at the foot they carved the words, "Woodman, spare that tree."—Before the capture of the Martello tower, it appears the Russians had all been in indulging rather freely in the spirit line, and were uncommonly jolly. The medical officer of the Imperial forces was found hid under an empty cask in a corner.

—The interior of the circular fort captured by assault in the night presented to view a most appalling and disgusting spectacle; everything was in the greatest state of confusion possible. The dead, to the number of sixty, were deposited in casks of lime water, piled all round, one above the other, and the stench emitted was suffocating in the extreme. Numbers of wounded men were strewn about unattended and seemingly uncared for, amidst piles of masonry, ammunition, and dismounted guns.—An unfortunate mistake occurred among the advanced guard of the French on Friday night. A party of soldiers fired into their comrades, mistaking them for Russians (they not having the right parole), and the mistake was not discovered before one officer and six men had been killed and several others severely wounded.

—In order to effect a landing the battalion of Royal Marines had been conveyed, together with the French marines, on board her Majesty's ship Driver, to the north shore of the island at the back of the forts. By eight o'clock the work of disembarkation had finished, and the celerity of this operation must be considered most marvellous, for, in the space of three hours and a half upwards of 11,000 troops had been safely landed in the forests of an enemy's country, and where every opposition might have been expected, taking into consideration the nature of the roads they had to traverse, and the well-known guerilla practice of the Russian rifleman. It reflects the highest credit upon all concerned, and must ever remain as a record of singular energy and rapidity.—As each French regiment landed, they formed into order on the rocky shore, and marched through the thick pine forest and over the heights, their bayonets and red caps glistening in the morning sun. The centre wing of the army encamped for the night in and around a large village, at a distance of less than two miles from the tower which they were destined to attack.—On the morning of the 11th the work of transporting heavy guns continued, and the sailors, with a band at their head, hauled away at these cumbersome weapons, marching through the village and to the camp of the Royal Marines. The first round tower kept up a fire at intervals upon them whenever in view. Sir Charles Napier, in a rough car, drove through the encampment, and, with General Baraguay d'Hilliers, arranged the disposition of the forces.—A Russian spy was taken in the camp, in female attire, and a Russian officer, in the garb of a priest, ventured through in a carriage with a lady by his side. They observed his face newly shorn, and on putting questions he appeared confused, and drove away, taking a turn in the road leading to the forts.

Two French soldiers rushed after him, but without avail, so they levelled their rifles, and have either killed or wounded this spy, the horse going at full gallop into the fort.—At Bomarsund, as at Odessa, the Russians care not for a flag of truce. At Bomarsund a flag of truce was put out from a port-hole. General Baraguay d'Hilliers proceeded up to within ten yards of the fort, together with a company of Chasseurs as his guard. The enemy demanded two hours' respite to bury their dead. The general gave them one hour only, and the use they made of this was to gain reinforcements from the forts below, and to obtain a further supply of ammunition. The fire now recommenced with redoubled fury, the shells being most effective in their descent, and the riflemen on the rocks poured into the embrasures a deadly shower of bullets. The second tower to the east of the first was now compelled to come to its assistance, and sent shells completely over the besieged fort into the camp of the allies. At 8 p.m. another flag of truce was offered, and the Commander of Artillery of Chasseurs rushed in breathless haste to the quarters of the Commander-in-Chief to inquire if the battery was to cease firing. He found the general in the village, leaning against some palings, conversing with a knot of officers. "Cease firing!" he exclaimed with much gesticulation; "certainly not, sir. These men have not respected the object of their truce, and they shall not receive the slightest consideration. Continue your bombardment the whole night long."—In order to take one of the towers, a detachment of the 20th Regiment and a number of volunteers of the Chasseurs de Vincennes came to the front and offered to march straight up to the fort. They went up, and entered the fort, and on their approaching the room in which the principal officer was, the Russian officer resisted, and drew his sword for mortal combat. The French soldier gave him the bayonet in the ribs, and was about to fire when the Russian offered him his sword.—Captain Wilnot, an amateur, late commander of the Harlequin, had a narrow escape of his life. On observing one of the forts hoist a flag of truce he declared he would be the first Englishman in that fort. He approached, and was in speaking distance with the enemy. "What are you doing here?" said a Russian officer to him in French—"Do you know the truce is in again?" "No!" was the reply; "Then be off immediately, as I intend cannonading again; but, on my honour, I will not fire on you if you make off as soon as you can;" and so Captain Wilnot marched off untouched.—A private letter, which we have been permitted to see, thus graphically describes the effect of Captain Pelham's "beautiful fire":—"Three or four shots set the great stones visibly chattering, as I could mark by a pocket telescope; one block then fell out, then another, then a third, fourth, &c., and these were followed by an avalanche of loose rubbish, just as you see macadamising stones pour out from the end of a cart when the back-board is removed." This corresponds precisely with Mr. Oliphant's account of the material of the Odessa fortresses, except that a soft calcareous stone, or concrete of shells, is at Odessa substituted for granite, and we believe that this is also the case at Sebastopol. Be the facing stone, however, which it may, there is no reason to suppose the construction of the works at Sebastopol better than at Bomarsund or Odessa, or more capable of resisting "the beautiful fire" of our ten-inch guns.

OUR FRENCH ALLIES.

ALAND ISLES.—One thousand Russian prisoners, forming half the garrison of Bomarsund, have been embarked on board the Cléopâtre and the Syrène, in order to be taken to Brest. The other 1,000 prisoners were disposed of by Admiral Napier. Many Russians were suffocated in the Bomarsund casemates by the smoke of their own fire. After the surrender there were great rejoicings in Aland, and prayers were offered in the churches for Queen Victoria and the Emperor Louis Napoleon. The fortress was found to contain ammunition and provisions for one year.

BALTIC.—Messrs. Dunbar's noble new troop-ship, the Hougoumont, of 1,000 tons, Captain R. J. Downes (late of the Poitiers), proceeds to the Baltic for the conveyance of French troops. In compliment to our allies, the Government, with the sanction of Mr. Dunbar, has altered her name.

THE DOWNS.—The French steamfrigate Indefatigable, from the Baltic, left the Downs on Monday for Brest.

TURKEY.—Notwithstanding the sickness which desolated their ranks, the French gallantly continued their march, and arrived in the neighbourhood of Kustendje about the 1st of August. There, for the first time, they fell in with the enemy, who, having got notice of their approach, were falling back, driving before them an immense flock of sheep and oxen, and having previously destroyed all the standing crops round the town. Only the left flank of the advanced French guard came up with the Russians, who numbered about 8,000 infantry, four regiments of Cossacks, and two regiments of regular cavalry. Against this superior force the Chasseurs d'Afrique and Zouaves instantly made a dash, and a slight skirmish ensued; the enemy all the while continuing their retreat under cover of their cavalry, with such precipitation as might justly be termed a flight. The Chasseurs d'Afrique overtook the Cossacks and broke their ranks on the first onset, killing and wounding about sixty, and making a small number prisoners. The whole of the enemy's cavalry then took to flight, leaving a large portion of their cattle in the hands of the French, who only sustained a loss of three men killed and eighteen wounded. The French encamped round Kustendje, while the Russians fell back with all haste upon Hirsova, where it is said they crossed the Danube, thus freeing the Dobrukscha of their presence for this year, at least. There were very few inhabitants remaining in Kustendje; the town, in fact, was deserted. The country round it was covered with a number of high earth mounds, which the villagers, in reply to questions from the French, said were the places where the Russians had interred their dead. From the size of these mounds they appear to cover pits containing 100 bodies; and there are scores and scores of such melancholy memorials in all directions. If what the inhabitants said be true, and as it is confirmed from other sources there is no reason to doubt it, the Russians have lost at the lowest computation 40,000 men since they first occupied the Dobrukscha.

SAILING OF TROOPS.

DEPARTURE OF THE 34TH FOOT FOR CORFU.—The Mauritius, steam-vessel, received on board the 34th Regiment on Monday, less one company, which was kept back to accommodate seventy-nine sappers and miners (5th company), which arrived by the two o'clock train, and proceeded to Corfu. The 34th were much cheered on their way to the dockyard, and the band of the Colossus, 80, Captain Robison, gave them the favourite "Cheer, boys, cheer," with such effect as to produce an out-and-out "cheer" from the gallant regiment, whose exemplary conduct has commanded universal respect from the inhabitants of Portsmouth garrison.

The 4th Queen's Own Light Dragoons left Constantinople in the Simla at five p.m. on the 1st inst., and cast anchor at Varna at eight a.m. on the following morning, where they landed, and went into camp on the high ground on the south side of the bay. The regiment continued to be in good health on the 8th of August, and anxious for a move to the Crimea.

HAMBURG, Aug. 21.—Reinforcements of French troops continue to arrive in the Baltic. On Wednesday three English transports, with French troops on board, arrived at Copenhagen, and cast anchor in the roads. The English club yacht (as they call it), the Orinoco, also cast anchor there.

TROOPS ON THE MARCH OR UNDER ORDERS FOR FOREIGN SERVICE.

THE 92ND HIGHLANDERS.—A draft of this regiment, consisting of three sergeants and seventy rank and file, commanded by Lieut. Leith, with Ensigns Parkinson and Nevell, arrived in Dublin on Tuesday from Belfast, and proceeded to Cork to join the service companies at Gibraltar. The Manitius, screw-ship, is expected to put into Cork for drafts of the 14th, 60th Rifles, and 57th Regiment for conveyance to the East.

SOLDIERS' WIVES AND FAMILIES.

THE RELIEF FUND.—It was stated at the weekly meeting of the Leicester Board of Guardians on Tuesday, that relief from the fund recently subscribed for the wives and children of soldiers in the East was only administered to those who received parochial relief. The Vice-Chairman said that Col. Hawker, of Leicester, gave only to those who were relieved from the poor-rates, and gave just the same sum as their pauper allowance. This practice was considered a great evil by the guardians, who held it to be adverse to the wishes of those who had subscribed to the funds. It was asked by a guardian whether this arrangement was general or local, but the vice-chairman, who had introduced the subject, could not say. The board appointed three of their number to wait upon Colonel Hawker in reference to the subject.

CAMP MONASTIR, NEAR VARNA, August 8.—The 33rd regiment has lost no less than six of the soldiers' wives, who came out with them, and who have died of cholera since the disease broke out in Derna.

NURSES FOR THE FRENCH SOLDIERS IN THE EAST.—The Moniteur says:—"The Marshal Minister of War has made an appeal to the devotion of the sisters of St. Vincent de Paul to go and nurse the French soldiers in the hospitals of the army of the East. This appeal has been heard; twenty-five of these holy virgins are going to embark at Marseilles, on board the fastest sailing vessel; twenty-five more will follow shortly after, and the worthy superior has encouraged the hope that the number may be raised to a hundred."

THE TURKS AND RUSSIANS.

In one of my previous letters I alluded to the ameliorations on the eve of being introduced for the welfare of the inhabitants of this country. The Supreme Council, encouraged by Lord Stratford de Redcliffe to fresh efforts, has ever since been in close deliberation, with a view of concocting some grand and important measure for the full development of these ameliorations, and of devising some mode of putting them forward without hurting the national feelings of the Turks, who are still fanatic at heart. In this sense they have come to a decision which is something quite new in Ottoman politics. Immediately after the Courban Bayram (towards the latter part of this month), orders will be sent to each province throughout the empire to elect two representatives, one a Mussulman, the other a Rayah, from among the local administrators. These two are to repair to Constantinople, and are there to be fully examined by the Supreme Council, in order to discover through their testimony the best method of improving the agricultural, commercial, and natural resources of their respective provinces, in such a way as will augment the true prosperity of the population. Their evidence given, it may be concluded that their duties cease. They will have no voice in the council, and are called merely to give evidence, nothing else. The expenses of their journey are to be defrayed out of the local treasury, and during their residence at the capital they are to be guests of the ministers and employes, who are to entertain them without charge. If the object for which this new measure is designed succeed, by strengthening the resources of the Government and the people, such deputation will probably be repeated, until a kind of Chamber of Deputies be formed; but at present it is quite an experimental trial, which may or may not have good results. It will, however, have one good effect, which is to prove to the inhabitants of the provinces far and near that their welfare is cared for; and it will give them a feeble idea of the popular advantages of a representative government, of which they have at present no notion whatever. It will be one of the seeds of liberty sown which may possibly in the end produce fruit.

THE WAR IN EUROPE.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 10.—The Orinoco, with the 1st battalion of the Rifles on board; the Colombo, with the 20th; the Avon with the 3rd, and a detachment of the 46th; and the Himalaya, with the Scots Greys, are here, expecting orders to proceed to the Crimea, or any other point that may have been decided upon. This is a wise measure, as, if the troops were sent to Varna, where the cholera exists, we might have had to deplore the loss of scores of our best men. Two French and one Turkish steamer have brought down about 500 invalids, natives and Europeans. The Victoria and Medway, with the 68th and 46th, are daily expected from Malta. Twenty-two transports, with 2,601 troops, and 255 horses, from Tunis, have arrived at the Dardanelles. The Begy and Mejidid steamers have proceeded in that direction, for the purpose of towing them up. These troops are under orders for Circassia.

VARNA, August 9.—The French troops have received orders to be ready for embarkation between the 10th and 12th, but probably they will be allowed some days' rest to recover from the sickness and fatigues of their reconnoissance in the Dobrukscha. The night they returned (Sunday), a serious fight broke out between them and a party of Turks and Bashi-Bazouks. It seems that three or four men of the line, and Zouaves, were smoking and drinking in a little Turkish coffee-house, where about thirty of the faithful, principally Bashi-Bazouks, were assembled. The conversation, such as it was, was amicable enough until the touchy Frenchmen got offended at their Mahomedan confreres speaking of them—as, without a single exception, they always do speak of Christians—as dogs and infidels. The dispute passed from bad to worse; blows were struck; the Turks attacked the French in a body, shot one, and, after a fierce struggle, in which two more of the French were wounded, succeeded in pitching them all into the street. Of course a number of the French soldiers instantly collected, and prepared for a regular attack upon the house. As they were advancing towards it for this purpose, the Turks, who had securely barricaded all the lower windows, received their assailants with a regular volley of small arms, which killed one and wounded three of the Zouaves. Thoroughly maddened and infuriated by the loss they had sustained, the soldiers, whose numbers were increasing every moment, retired to organise an overwhelming attack upon the café from all points. There is little doubt that they would have taken the place, though not without serious loss of life; for the Bashi Bazouks were well armed and desperate—and, then, Heaven knows how the matter might have ended; perhaps, in the massacre of half the Turkish population of the town—certainly, in the instant death of every man found in the café. Most fortunately, however, the serious nature of the fracas got wind, and a number of superior officers, with a strong guard, arrived at the scene of action before the intended attack was put into execution. With some difficulty the street was cleared, and the French persuaded to disperse, when the door of the café was forced, and the occupants, to the number of about thirty, marched off under a strong escort. In this row the Turks were, beyond all doubt, in the wrong. They gave the first provocation, such as it was, and were the only parties who used fire arms. I have often wondered why the English and French military authorities here do not insist upon the inhabitants of the town being disarmed, or, at least, prohibit them from wearing their weapons in the streets. It is perfectly ridiculous to see even the little shopkeepers armed to the teeth, selling a pecke of calico or an oke of tobacco. Everyone carries a brace of long, old-fashioned pistols, a large broad-bladed dagger, and double-edged yataghan, all of which in their disputes among themselves they use without the least hesitation. Since I have been here two or three Turks have been shot in such extemporaneous brawls, which will become of a very sanguinary nature if, as in the late instance, they ensue between the population and the men of the allied armies.

THE WAR IN ASIA.

VIENNA, August 16.—This morning, at nine, a telegraphic despatch of the 14th from St. Petersburg was sent along the electric wire. It was an account of the defeat of the Turks in Asia on the 1st of this month. Lieutenant-General von Wrangel advanced from Erivan "with a detachment," and attacked and totally defeated a Turkish corps posted near Bayazid. 3,000 Turks were left on the field of battle, and the Russian trophies of war were four guns, seventeen flags, and "two camps." Bayazid, the capital of Turkish Armenia, is principally inhabited by Armenians, who, after the defeat of the Turks, sent an invitation to General Wrangel to take possession of the city, which he naturally accepted. Such is the Russian account of the affair, and some time must elapse before we shall have the Turkish bulletin. Now that the electric telegraph is working between St. Petersburg and Vienna, the first news of what occurs in Asia will invariably come from Russian sources, and the British public will do well to bear this in mind.

Letters from Trebizond of the 30th ult. state that a French lieutenant-colonel, charged by the Emperor Napoleon with a private mission to the Ottoman army of Anatolia, landed there on the 18th. The Erzeroum mail, which arrived at Trebizond on the 27th, announced that the belligerent armies were still confronting each other in the neighbourhood of Kars.

NAVAL OPERATIONS IN THE BLACK SEA.

A line of steamers is about to be established between Constantinople and Varna by the Messageries Impériales, under an engagement with the Ministry of War. The service, which is to consist of six voyages per month, going and returning, will be performed by two steamers of 120-horse power; and the departures will be so combined, that the boats leaving for Varna will always carry despatches for the army brought to Constantinople by couriers from Marseilles.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 10.—A friend, who has just arrived from Trebizond by the British merchant steamer Phœbe, says that they met a large steamer about fifty miles west of Sinope, on the night before last. On perceiving her, they immediately put out all their lights, which manoeuvre they saw repeated by the enemy, for they presumed her to be a Russian. They were, however, evidently the one as much afraid as the other; and the Phœbe, putting on all steam, soon lost sight of her. That the Russians do occasionally take a cruise in the Black Sea, they have proved by the destruction of three Turkish brigs near Heraclea.

THE WLADIMIR.—It appears that it is not altogether certain that the Vladimir, paddle-frigate, had made good her return to Sebastopol after her daring cruise in the Black Sea. If she has not, the chances are that she will never see Sebastopol again under Russian colours. It would be a most singular circumstance if the screw-corvette Hi. liflyer were to pick her up, both men-of-war having been built at Blackwall by Marc and Co.

Naval.

SHEERNESS, Friday.—The Royal Albert, 120 guns, Capt. Little, having completed her fittings, is to be taken out of dock on Saturday, Aug. 26, gallantly decorated, in honour of his Royal Highness Prince Albert's birthday.

BREACH OF DISCIPLINE.—On the gunner of the Janus returning on board of the said vessel, after the decision of the court-martial held upon him on a charge of desertion, the foremast men assembled at the gangway, and cheered him, which he (the gunner) returned from the boat. On the same being reported to the Commander-in-Chief a representation was immediately made to the Admiralty, the result of which is, every man is ordered to be immediately draughted to the Indefatigable flag-ship at Devonport, much to their annoyance, as the Janus is daily expected to proceed out to the Baltic, with every chance of prize-money for her crew.

THE GRAPESHOT AGAIN.—The Grapeshot, which was reported some time ago in the English Channel as a privateer, has just cleared in a most mysterious manner from New Orleans, and has gone to parts unknown with its cargo of muskets. The New Orleans Delta of the 2nd inst. gives the following account of her:—"The Grapeshot, heavily armed, under Captain Baxter, cleared yesterday in a sudden and mysterious manner. She had been anchored off the mouth of the river for the last two months, during all of which time her astute and active captain has been moving about our city and neighbourhood in a manner to excite much curiosity and some alarm. One evidence of this was afforded by the Spanish consul, who despatched a vessel and messenger to Cuba immediately on the arrival of the Grapeshot, and has made her the subject of several subsequent communications. We hear it whispered that a fast schooner has already been chartered, by the same vigilant official, to proceed immediately to Havana, to caution the authorities there to be on the look-out for the Grapeshot. No doubt the said schooner will get there by the time the Grapeshot has made the circuit of the island and accomplished her mission, which is doubtless one of immense importance to Cuba and to the cause of freedom. There are others, however, who intimate that Captain Baxter's sudden departure is connected with the arrival of the special Russian ambassador in New York. It is darkly hinted that so neat and fast-sailing a craft, so heavily armed, and commanded by so sturdy and determined a skipper, could never be intended for peaceful and commercial purposes. Why should not privateering be as honourable and profitable now as it was in 1814-15, and why is not the Russian as good a flag for that purpose as any other? On one point we feel pretty confident—that there is not a vessel in the English or French service that could ever catch the Grapeshot, if she should show her heels to them; and not one of her size that would ever grapple with her in a fight. Those 35,000 muskets would be terribly effective in a close encounter. We cordially recommend her to the Emperor Nicholas's agent's favour as the very little saucy craft he requires; and as for the muskets, we have the authority of Major Kelly, who tried them in Cuba, for saying that they are good enough for any people who want to fight. But these are random ideas. We are utterly in the dark as to the design and movement of the Grapeshot, and content ourselves with announcing her departure, and the secession from a circle of adoring friends of her gallant and amorous captain."

DANTZIC, Aug. 19.—La Reine Hortense, the yacht of the Emperor of the French, arrived here about halfpast eleven last night. It appears that Lieutenant Agnew, by desire of Admiral Napier, requested a passage to Dantzig in this steamer. He was informed that La Reine Hortense was proceeding to Copenhagen. He then requested a passage to Copenhagen, and was told that La Reine Hortense was an Imperial yacht, and could not take a passenger. Admiral Napier then despatched the Basilisk. Great surprise was felt by the English officers, when, upon their arrival here, they found La Reine Hortense at anchor in the Bay of Dantzig. The officers in charge of the despatches in La Reine Hortense refused to give the slightest information, even as to the name of the vessel.

THE WHITE SEA.—Telegraphic advices from Archangel to the 13th inst. state that the blockade had commenced. The Moniteur (Paris) says:—"It has always been the benevolent intention of the Allied Powers, that the blockade of the ports in the White Sea should offer no impediment to the commercial relations existing between the inhabitants of Norwegian Finnmark and those of the coasts of the White Sea, a people in either case so little favoured by nature. The Minister of the Marine and Colonies has just confirmed to our cruisers in those latitudes the instructions given to them for this purpose in the month of May, previous to the declaration of the blockade."

CAPTURES FROM THE RUSSIANS.

On Monday the Froya and Fama, two Russian ships taken by her Majesty's revenue cutter Argus, were towed from Gravesend to the West India Docks, to be sold for the benefit of the officers and crew of the Argus.

The Russian ships Carolina, prize to her Majesty's ship Amphion, of which Ehlers was late master, and the Carl, taken by the Avon, of which Carl Bernatt Back was late the master, have both been condemned by the Court of Admiralty, and ordered to be sold for the benefit of their captors.

Her Majesty's ship Archer was at Melmel on the 18th of August, making arrangements for sending home the fourteen prizes anchored in that port, taken by her Majesty's cruisers for breaking the blockade of the Russian ports in the Gulf of Finland, fifty-seven naval coast volunteers having come out to work them home to England.

On Tuesday another prize-ship, the Jonge Albert, of which Van der Zee was late the master, taken a prize by her Majesty's st. amer Conflict, for breaking the blockade of Riga, arrived in the Thames in charge of Mr. Dickens, from Hurlingen, where her cargo was landed by the Dutch authorities. She has since been taken into the West India Docks for condemnation.

THE BLACK SEA.

Two Russian agents who set Varna on fire on the 10th inst. have been arrested. The fire destroyed a number of houses appropriated as quarters for the troops, together with stores and magazines. Several Greeks have been arrested upon suspicion of being among the authors of the conflagration. The cholera is on the decline, but the 1st battalion of Rifles, and the 20th and 23rd Regiments, all three in the Bosphorus, have lost men by the epidemic. Officers have gone home inviolated from almost every regiment.

Great preparations are making here for embarking the troops, which it is said will take place on the 20th. The bay is filled with vessels, 500 in number, and a fleet of large transports is lying at Baltchick.

Great numbers of flat-bottomed boats for landing troops and heavy guns have also arrived.

AMERICA.

ADVICES FROM WASHINGTON state that, on the 11th inst., the United States Navy-yard Foundry was totally destroyed by fire.

FROM CHILI we learn that the French war-steamer Phoque, Commander de Rosais, had started from the port of Valparaiso in pursuit of a Russian vessel, and although slightly disabled, had succeeded in capturing her and towing her into the harbour. The prize was a brig of about 500 tons burthen.

IN THE VALPARAISO PAPERS we have an account of the burning of the ship Townsend at sea, and the subsequent loss of twelve lives. The ship was discovered to be on fire at nine p.m. on the 15th of May. Finding it impossible to subdue it, the captain and crew abandoned her, and in three hours thereafter she was reduced to a floating hulk.

CAPTAIN PENNY'S DAVIS'S STRAITS EXPEDITION

ABERDEEN, Wednesday.

Accounts have just come to hand from Captain Penny, of the Lady Franklin, that this expedition to Davis's Straits, in furtherance of a project of a resident whale fishery, has been most successful. He is now at Orkney, with the Lady Franklin full of boiled oil, and the Sophia is expected to follow, also a bumper ship.

It will be remembered that the crew of an American whaler, wrecked in Davis's Straits three years ago, had succeeded in killing, during their residence at Kumsooka, some eight or nine whales. This fact, coupled with Captain Penny's large experience in the Arctic regions, led him to propose that a resident fishery should be established there, and that a commercial company, under royal charter, should engage in the enterprise. It was intended also to work some plumhago mines which were known to be in the district; but the project was not sustained by Government, and fell through. Captain Penny, however, was supported by a few commercial gentlemen who had the fullest confidence in his speculation, and the Lady Franklin and Sophia, Arctic exploring ships, were purchased and fitted out in Aberdeen for the expedition last year. Both ships were supplied with tanks for the oil, and the necessary arrangements were made for encountering a winter's residence in the Straits, in order to be ready for the first opportunity of getting at the fish in the spring. Two hardy crews were engaged, and provision was also made for the moral and spiritual good of the natives, among whom Captain Penny expected to have to reside. The ships sailed in July last year, and this is the first news we have of them since that time. In a commercial point of view, the speculation will be a most profitable one, the oil alone being worth £8,000, while a large sum will be realised for some ten or twelve tons of bone. The Lady Franklin is expected up to-morrow, when we shall get all particulars regarding this very interesting and important expedition.

THE ACCIDENT ON THE BRIGHTON RAILWAY.

ADJOURNED INVESTIGATION BY THE MAGISTRATES.

CROYDON, Friday.—This morning at eleven o'clock the magistrates assembled at the Town Hall, Croydon, for the purpose of continuing the investigation they commenced on Tuesday. Mr. E. R. Addams was the chairman of the Bench, and the other magistrates present were Captain Kemmiss, Mr. Byron, and Mr. Sutherland. The four prisoners sat in the middle of the court, there being no apprehension on the part of the authorities that they would attempt to effect an escape. A slight change in the legal arrangements was made to-day. Mr. Burgon appeared for Simpson, the driver, instead of Mr. C. J. Rawlings, and Mr. Rawlings acted for Sladden, the stoker of the excursion train. Mr. Clarkson, the harrister, appeared on behalf of the South Eastern Company. Mr. Everest asked that the evidence which had already been taken should be read. This was agreed to, and the evidence was gone through. Mr. Burgon requested that the prisoners might be proceeded against separately, as there was no concert between them. If the magistrates did not think fit to adopt that course, perhaps they would allow the case of the two South Eastern men to be severed from that of the two Brighton men. Mr. Rawlings made an application that the witnesses should not remain in court, as it was evident that the two companies were bringing up witnesses the one against the other. The Chairman said that, as this was an inquiry, and not a trial, he could not accede to the request made by Mr. Burgon. The suggestion made by Mr. Rawlings was, he thought, a very proper one. Mr. Everest opposed the application of Mr. Rawlings, and, after a long discussion, the Chairman said the bench would be glad if the witnesses would retire, but had no power to order them to do so. Mr. Superintendent Hind wished to ask Mr. Brown, the Superintendent of the Bricklayers' Arms Station, who was recalled, whether the train was divided at Ashford, and if so, for what purpose, and by whose authority.

—Mr. Brown: It was divided because the train was too heavy, and by his direction he had instructions to do so if necessary.—Mr. Everest asked Mr. Brown whether he had charge of the excursion train.—Witness: Not exactly. He was with it.—Examined by Mr. Rawlings: He certainly had the direction of the working of the train. He was not on the engine with the driver and stoker, but was in the break-van, next to the engine. He kept a good look-out all the way. It was at all times necessary to pay particular attention to the Addiscombe-road signal, and as the excursion train of Monday passed it was all right. Witness gave evidence in reference to the signals similar in character to that given before the coroner yesterday. He added that the ordinary speed of an excursion train was about thirty-five miles an hour, but he did not know of any regulation as to the rate at which the train should pass a station. The driver slackened the speed of the train as he approached the station. The train was forty-five minutes behind its time when it left Ashford. The last half of the excursion train, with twenty-four carriages, left Ashford at 10.30. Directly the driver saw the signalman at the station hold up his hands, which is a signal of danger, he at once reduced his speed and the breaks were put on as hard as they could. He distinctly saw Sladden put on the break, and do all he could to stop the train. The engine was reversed immediately. The line was on a descent towards Croydon. Witness proceeded to describe the practice of placing a red board on the back of a train when a special train was to approach, and was examined at great length on other points, which are already before the public. Mr. Wm. Parker, the London and Brighton Company's station master at East Croydon, described the signals along the line. A driver was not allowed to pass a signal under any circumstances. Witness was at dinner when the accident happened, and he did not know whether or not the signal was up; he believed that a message came from Stoot's Nest to Croydon, announcing that the excursion train was approaching; but the telegraph clerk did not communicate the fact to him, as he had no instructions to do so. By the Chairman: There was a board on the first part of the excursion train, indicating that there was another train coming, but he did not make any inquiry about it. He thought four trains passed between the first and second parts of the excursion train. There was no board on either of those four indicating that anything else was to follow. The first half of the train passed about eight minutes past twelve. No notice had been given to him of the time it would pass, but he was looking out for it. He did not know at what time the accident occurred, because he was not on the station. He left the station at eight or ten minutes before one, his dinner hour being immediately after he had done with the Dover up-train.—Inspector Lund wished to ask Mr. Parker whether, immediately after the accident, he went to one of the prisoners and made any remark. If so, what was it, and what was the reply.—Witness said he went to Simpson, the South-eastern driver, and asked him how he came to run by the signals. He said he must tell the truth between God and man—that he had run by two of them. He expressly used the word signals. Immediately afterwards witness's attention was directed to a clergyman who had been injured, and he went away. A person named Smart was close by when the conversation between him and witness took place. He was sufficiently close to hear the conversation which passed. Other persons were near at the time, but he did not know their names. The Chairman considered that it was the station master's duty to wait for the extra train when he received notice that it was coming. He was informed that an extra or special train was coming up, and yet he did not take any notice of it. If he had attended to the notice the accident would not have happened. George Smart, an engine-fitter in the company's service, deposed to the conversation spoken to by Mr. Parker. He added that he saw that the signals were right, and that the driver of the excursion train disregarded them. When the excursion train reached the station, it was going at twenty or thirty miles an hour. After a lengthened discussion, and the examination of several unimportant witnesses, the Chairman intimated that the court would not sit later than half-past five, and at that time adjourned the investigation.

AQUATICS.

BRIGHTON AND HOVE REGATTA.

This regatta will not come off this year, in consequence of a combination of circumstances. A great change has taken place in the government of the town, from a Charter of Incorporation having been granted; great agitation in local matters has hence ensued, and party feeling has distracted the general attention from other than business matters, till so late in the year that the appointments of other regattas precluded the possibility of securing yachts this season. Unanimity is now restored, and under the auspices of the mayor, and other influential gentlemen, the committee justify anticipations of an event next year which will eclipse their last display. The rumour, of the dearth of sailors at the commencement of the summer in consequence of the "war in the East," gave a material check to the efforts of the committee at the onset. One word of encouragement—your exertions last year were most praiseworthy; the weather only was unpropitious. One word of advice—form yourselves into a club; the London clubs will be but too glad to assist you. Moderate subscriptions and unanimity will do wonders.

The annual local regatta comes off this day (Saturday), in honour of Prince Albert's birthday.

NEWPORT REGATTA.

This regatta, says the Fife-shire Journal, came off on Saturday. The Tay Ferry steamers were decked out in their holiday garb, and plied half-hourly between the Craig and Newport piers; and as the hour at which the races commenced approached, closely-packed cargoes of human beings were ferried over, until the jutting rocks and other most favourable positions for having an uninterrupted view of the races were fully occupied. Besides Dundee, Perth, the Carse of Gowrie, Broughty Ferry, Arbroath, Ferry-Port-on-Craig, St. Andrews, Cupar, Fife, &c., contributed to swell the throng of happy faces. The prizes offered for the various races were not so high as those awarded at the last two years' regattas, but sufficiently valuable to bring forward some good boats, particularly to compete in the third race. The commodore's cutter, starting-boat, was moored near Craighead, at no great distance from the shore, and near the station occupied on a similar occasion two years ago, and the rounding-boat about two miles up the river, a little to the west of Woodhaven. The signal-gun to make ready was fired by the commodore at a quarter before three p.m., when the boats entered for the first race took up their positions, and at three p.m. the signal-gun to start was given. The following is the order in which the regatta came off:—

FIRST RACE.

- Ships' Boats.—First prize, £4; second ditto, £2.
1. Broughty Castle..... 30 min.
2. True Blue..... 31 do.
3. Mary Waugh..... 34 do.

SECOND RACE.

- Four-oared Gigs, pulled by Amateurs.—First prize, £3; second ditto, £1.
1. Allie Gray..... 25 min.
2. Waverley, some distance behind, and did not come in.

Tallyho also entered, but objected to in consequence of the crew not being composed of amateurs.

THIRD RACE.

- Six and Four-oared Gigs.—First prize, £10; second ditto, £4; third ditto, £1.
1. Jeanie Gray..... 15 min. 0 sec.
2. Mountain Maid..... 19 min. 30 sec.
3. Arab Maid..... 19 min. 36 sec.

FOURTH RACE.

- Fishing Boats.—First prize, £3; second ditto, £1.
1. Deil ma Caro..... 33 min. 0 sec.
2. Betsy..... 30 min. 10 sec.

FIFTH RACE.

Four-oared Skiffs, to be pulled by Females.—First prize, £4; second ditto, £1. 10s. Second Prize to be given by the winning boat. No lady competitors coming forward, the race was merged into one with juveniles, which was gained by the Wba Daur, after a comparatively easy pull.

SIXTH RACE.

- Four-oared Gigs.—First prize, £3. 10s.; second ditto, £1. 10s.
Arab Maid..... 1
Waverley..... 2

On Saturday Messrs. Henderson, of Renfrew, launched an iron yacht, named the Pawn, for Lord Burleigh, M.P.

POOLE REGATTA.—The subscriptions received towards the annual regatta of the Poole Yacht Club, have exceeded the expectations of its best friends, and the committee have fixed the sport for two days, viz., the 29th and 30th inst. On the latter day, a prize of fifty sovereigns, added to a sweepstake of five guineas each, will be sailed for by schooners, subject to no restriction as to sails or men, and the course to be outside the harbour. The first day's sport will comprise several sailing matches, and other amusements within the limits of the harbour. Subscriptions have also been collected for a display of fireworks at the conclusion of the racing.

LONDON MODEL YACHT CLUB.—We have elsewhere reported the match in this club. We are now informed that the Levant, a Blackwall-built boat, is the first of very many which have been built there that has been successful against the West end builders. At the close of the race on Monday, a private match was beautifully sailed over the Serpentine and back by the Atlantida and Nil Desperandum (both Blackwall-built), which was won by the Atlantida by about two or three lengths. The two silver cups will be presented to the winners at the club house (Anderton's Hotel) on the next monthly meeting, Tuesday, September 5, when the members are particularly requested to attend with their friends.

ROYAL VICTORIA YACHT CLUB.—RYNE, Aug. 24th.—Yachts at and off the station: Brilliant, Geo. Holland Ackers, Esq., commodore; Arrow, Thomas Chamberlayne, Esq., vice-commodore; Gem, Sir John Barker Mill, Bart.; Georgiana, Captain Thellusson; Cygnet, Hedworth Lambton, Esq.; Themis, J. Scott Russell, Esq.; Emetic, Major Mountjoy Martin; Eugénie, John Wardlaw, Esq.; Violet, George Hohson, Esq.; Surprise, E. W. H. Scherley, Esq.; Scagull, A. H. Davenport, Esq.; Wildfire, Frederick Thynne, Esq.; Aurora, Le Marchant Thomas, Esq.

LIVERPOOL.—During the present festive week, the Royal Harwich Yacht Club has been worthily represented, in the Mersey, by the schooner-yacht Vice-Commodore Arcedekne, one of whose boats was pulled in the match for £6 against that of the schooner-yacht Rosalind, T. Birchall, Esq., owner. Though starting at a moment's notice, and unaccustomed to the river, the novice only lost the match by barely three seconds. The "Lion Rampant" had therefore no reason to drop his tail from its usual erect position.

THURSDAY.—The Cup, value £30, was won by Mr. Dunn's Prieste, s, beating Electric and Spirit.

THE ALL-ENGLAND ELEVEN v. TWENTY-TWO OF DUDLEY.—This grand match will be played at Dudley, on Monday, the 28th instant, and following days. The preparations are on an extensive scale, by the kind permission of the Right Hon. Lord Ward. There will be fêtes in the castle, with illuminations in the caverns and castle walks, and ruins, with variegated lamps, and a grand display of fireworks. The following are the names of the players:—England: W. Clarke, Box, Parr, Caffyn, Cesar, Anderson, Guy, S. Parr, A. Clarke, Bickley, C. Tinley. Dudley: Aston, Armitage, Berry, Bothryde, Buttress, Brampton, Cresswell, Davies, Dakin, Dudley, Gilbert, Greathhead, E. Hollier, E. Hewett, Kerr, Morris, Moore, May, Sideway, Tyler, S. Wilkinson, G. Wilkinson.

THE ALL-ENGLAND MATCH AT READING is postponed from the 31st instant to the 14th September, on account of the shooting interfering with several of the members.

CRICKET FIELD DISASTER.—On the evening of the 23rd inst., Mr. C. Bradbury, a member of the Binster Cricket Club, broke his left wrist by a fall on the cricket field.

RACING.

"On the green, green turf."

MR. EDITOR.—The Knavesmire has been the scene of some stirring events. Old Ebor maintains her racing fame. Many of the best horses in training have taken part in the various contests, and something like thirty races in three days ought to satisfy the most craving appetite. In fact, there was a perfect feast of running, and the sport may, on the whole, be pronounced first-rate. Among the remarkable circumstances may be mentioned the defeat of the apparently invincible Virago, by Ellermire, for the County Plate. But this ought not to affect the reputation of the fair Virago, as many of the speediest animals will scarcely get into their full stride in the short space of five furlongs. Captain Harcourt is fortunate in having two such clever youngsters as the Ellerdale and Ellerdale's dam fillics. The latter, now named Dame Judith, won the Filly Sailing Stakes, and was second for the Gimcrack. She is entered for next year's Oaks, but Ellermire is not. Nettle, a filly by Sweetmeat out of Wasp, also distinguished herself by beating a good field. Jack Sheppard has improved, and will be heard of hereafter. Riflemen's performance, though good, was hardly up to the high estimation that had been formed of him. Rambling Katie did a good thing in bagging the "Black Duck," if she never accomplishes another. Neither Flatterer nor Saraband sustained their previous high character. Bonnie Morn did not greet us with his presence, and Graculus Esuriens, or "Gracious Eacens," as some of the outsiders will have it, was still an absentee. Nevertheless, the cunning little Greek contrives to keep his place as first favourite for the Derby. Having thus taken a hasty survey of the doings of the juveniles, let us turn towards their elders. It was fully expected that York would throw some light on the coming Sitting, but the sun had already cleared the horizon on the previous Monday. The knell of the luckless King Tom had scarcely sounded, Derwish following as chief mourner, when the anxious turfites, in quest of a fresh favourite, were promptly presented with the almost forgotten Boiardo. Once made acquainted with his merits, the upward tendency was rapid. Bookmakers would have thanked you to take 30 to 1 last week—Boiardo's present price is 5 to 2. Acrobat has been making a slow but steady advance to the fore, and is not unlikely to maintain his ground, while the chances of several others who have received support at long shots may now be considered as hopeless.

On referring to my last letter, I find that I sent you more winners than losers for York. I gave you Meteora, who was then in little favour, for the North and South Biennial; and the only two I mentioned for the Great Yorkshire were Acrobat and Ivan—first and second, as I named them. The result of the Ebor Handicap proves the disadvantage one labours under in making a selection so long before the time, or I should never have coupled Heapy with Tros; the unmistakable demonstration in favour of his stable companion, Grand Inquisitor, had not then been made. My opinion of Tros was, however, borne out by that of the ring, who created him, at one time, a better favourite than his successful rival.

A word or two about Chelmsford and Derby.

THE MARKS HALL STAKES, I fancy, will be won by St. Faith.

THE MEMBERS' PLATE, John o' Bruges.

BRENTWOOD STAKES, Guitar.

THE CHELMSFORD HANDICAP, Miss Bolton—Nutpecker.

CUP STAKES, Rackapelt.

DERBY presents a very good list of sport for its two days' meeting. I have but time to glance at the principal events. PRODUCE STAKES.—My choice must be Orson or St. Clair. THE TRADESMEN'S PLATE shows a capital acceptance of twenty-six; Nancy, however, has since paid forfeit. Grand Inquisitor is among the lot, but his showing may be doubtful. Should he appear at the post he ought to be near winning, even with his 7lb. penalty. But I am inclined to select the best of Dawson's lot, probably Amalgamation, and the representative of Taylor's stable, Pumicestone or Jacqueline.

CHATS WORTH STAKES.—I may be near the mark with Calot or Le Juif.

THE CHESTERFIELD STAKES.—The reward, possibly, of Pole Star or Clotilde.

YARMOUTH RACES.

The races this week were quite equal to former years, and attracted as large a concourse of people as on any former occasion. J. Cherry, Esq., Mayor, B. H. Caldwell, Esq., M.P., J. Balne, Esq., and Captain Douglas Lane, were the stewards. The committee raised a good subscription, about £100, and therefore had an opportunity of adding somewhat to the stakes. The entries were tolerably well filled, with one exception; and the programme for each day promised plenty of sport. After the arrival of the different trains mingled masses of human beings marched along the quay to the scene of amusement to witness the sports of the day.

A Handicap Plate of 50 sovs. For 3-yr-olds and upwards. One mile and a quarter.

Mr. J. Le Craz's h b Aponte, 6 yrs, 7st 3lb, ... 1
Mr. Armstrong's ch f Red Deer, out of Miss Hampton, 3 yrs, 6st 9lb, ... 2
Mr. B. Land's Bourdeaux, aged, 8st 7lb, ... 3
Lord W. Powlett's b g Nibolas, 3 yrs, 6st 4lb, ... 4

They went off nearly together, Aponte taking a slight lead round to the monument. Then Bourdeaux went in front to the last turn at the south end of the course. The straight running was contested by Aponte and Red Deer, and a neck and neck race ensued between those two. Aponte won by only half a neck.

The Great Yarmouth Nursery Handicap of 10 sovs each, h ft, with 50 added. For 2-yr-olds. T.Y.C.

Lord W. Powlett n Freckle, 7st 12lb, ... 1

Mr. Holland's f Easy, by Coningsby, 8st 7lb, ... 4

They went off in fine style along the straight part of the course, three-quarters of a mile. From the distance there was a capital race between Freckle and Matilda, the former winning by a length.

Mr. Barnes n f by John o' Gaunt, out of Blanche, 3 yrs, £50, bolted

On starting John o' Gaunt very quickly bolted with his rider. Aponte had the lead as far as the monument, but soon after Chorus passed him, all three being close together to the last turn, when a hard race ensued between Aponte and Chorus, the former winning by a couple of lengths. Oxus a bad third.

The Theatre Stakes of 3 sovs each, with 30 added. T.Y.C. Heats.

Mr. B. Land's ch g Oxus, 3 yrs, £30, ... 2 1
Sir E. Gooch n Vixen, 3 yrs, £40, ... 1 2
Mr. Holmes's Basquin, 3 yrs, £20, ... 3

Vixen went off with the lead, and was never headed, winning by three lengths. Basquin was withdrawn in the second heat. The other two started on the wrong side of the post, and Vixen came in first. Oxus went back and started right, but Vixen did not. In consequence, Vixen was considered distanced and could not go again. Oxus therefore walked over for the third heat. The winning horse was put up at £80; no one advanced on that price, and he was not sold.

The Norfolk and Suffolk Handicap of 10 sovs each, h ft, with 50 added. One mile and a half.

Mr. Turner's b f Ilydia, 4 yrs, 8st 7lb
Capt. Lane's b f Tester, 3 yrs, 7st 10lb
Mr. Rogers' na Miss Bolton, 3 yrs, 7st 2lb

There being only three entries, the public money was not added; and the owners of the three mutually agreed not to start for their own money. Thus the sports of the day finished without the principal race.

The contest was entirely between John Bruges and Adeline, and, after a very quick run, the former won by a length. In the second heat Basquine was withdrawn. Adeline had the lead at starting, and kept it to the ropes, when a neck and neck race ensued between her and John Bruges, who again won by a neck. Dartford was well up.

SPORTING MISCELLANY.

The whole of Mr. Meiklam's stud, advertised in our last, was put up for sale at York, on Friday, by Messrs. Tattersall, but none of the lots were disposed of.

Mr. Knowles's brood mares and foals will be brought to the hammer in October next.

Mr. Howard's colt by Surplice out of Ferina has received the name of St. Hubert.

Lord Londesborough has sold Don John to go to America.

Mr. John Scott's 2-yr-old colt by St. Lawrence out of Azimut, engaged in the Seventh Triennial, at Newmarket, and St. Leger, 1855, broke its leg a few days ago and had to be destroyed.

CHANGE OF QUARTERS.—Scythian, Apollonius, and Prince Arthur have left John Scott's for J. B. Day's stables at Findon.

Several horses left the Littleton stables three or four days ago, and Mr. W. Dilly being about to retire, the establishment will be broken up. The horses are all gone into Dockeray's stables at Mickleham.

RETIREMENT OF MR. MEIKLAM.—This gentleman, one of the oldest and largest masters of Mr. Thomas Dawson, after a long and successful career on the turf, has declined racing, from the state of his health, which has for some time been in a most precarious condition, and the whole of his stud is to be brought to the hammer at York this day (Friday), by Messrs. Tattersall. Although Mr. Meiklam cannot boast of having carried off the Derby, St. Leger, or Oaks, yet in the great handicaps he has been particularly successful, having won the Metropolitan with Stilton, with whom he ran second also for the Chester Cup, the Cambridgeshire with Rahy, the Liverpool Cup with Lightning and Inheritress, the Great Yorkshire Handicap with Snowstorm, the Northumberland Plate with Inheritress and Stilton, the Great Yorkshire Stakes with Poynton, and the Champagne Stakes at Doncaster, with the Italian.

RETIREMENT OF MR. GREVILLE.—This gentleman, who for the last quarter of a century has been one of the chief supporters of the turf, and was associated as the confederate of Mr. Payne, gives up his racing stud in a short time, and will confine his attention to breeding, having a magnificent stud of horses and mares at Hampton Court, including the stallions Alarm and Orlando, and the brood mares Industry, Jamaica, Duvernay, Barcelona, Little Finch, &c. During his career on the turf, Mr. Greville won the St. Leger with Mango, and in all probability would have carried off the Derby with Alarm, but for an accident at starting. He also won the Cambridgeshire, and Emperor's Vase at Ascot, with Alarm; the Ebor Handicap and the Goodwood Stakes, with Adine; the Suffolk Stakes, with Murrillo; and numberless other races which we have not time to enumerate. In his early years, Mr. Greville had the management of the late Duke of York's stud, which, under his direction, was remarkably successful on the turf.

Medical.

PREMONITORY DIARRHŒA.—[From the Morning Post.] Sir,—It cannot be too generally known that nothing is so important during the visitation of cholera as at once checking the premonitory diarrhœa which invariably precedes it.

This is often neglected, from being frequently unattended with pain, or any alarming symptoms, till the attack has assumed a malignant form, when experience shows how little frequently medical aid can avail.

The premonitory diarrhœa, however, if properly attended to, usually yields without any difficulty. The treatment I have found to be, without an exception, successful is, the dilute sulphuric acid in half-drachm doses, combined with fifteen drops of laudanum and eight of the tincture of capsicum, taken in a glass of water—one or two doses being usually sufficient.

The second evening after, I would recommend five grains of calomel to be taken, followed in the morning by the ordinary black draught, which serves to restore the system to its proper tone.

The avoidance of fruit of all kinds cannot be too much enjoined, no less than temperate and regular habits.

R. AUSTEN ALLEN, M.D., Somerset-street, Portman-square.—[From the Times.] Sir,—I was in the habit of giving the following medicine in 1849, and am also at the present time, to persons attacked with diarrhœa (the premonitory symptoms of cholera), and in no case have I known it to fail:—30 drops of laudanum, one ditto oil of peppermint, a teaspoonful prepared chalk, in a wine-glass of water; to be repeated every hour, if necessary.—I am, Sir, yours truly, HENRY COLEBROOKE, 39, Moorgate-street, Aug. 12.—P.S. My plan is to have the medicine always ready, and not to seek it when required.

DIARRHŒA.—The following has been recommended as an efficacious cure for diarrhœa:—Confection of opium, 20 grains; essence of peppermint, 12 drops. To be taken in a wine glass of water every two hours until relieved.

RAILWAYS AND TELEGRAPHS.

HARWICH.—OPENING OF THE RAILWAY.—It having been suddenly announced by the directors of the Eastern Counties Railway Company that this new line would be opened for traffic on Tuesday week, some demonstration was deemed necessary on the part of the inhabitants on an occasion of a character so important to the town and district.

Accordingly a meeting was held on Monday, at noon, at the Town-hall, when it was considered that there should be a public dinner and other matters of rejoicing, and a committee was formed to make arrangements for the same.

The bells of the parish church rang a merry peal, two triumphal arches with evergreens and suitable inscriptions were erected, the station was adorned with flags, &c., and a band of music was in attendance.

The first train started at eight a.m., consisting of eight carriages, which were well filled.

On the arrival of the first train down from London at the Dovercourt station, the Mayor with some friends entered the carriages and proceeded to Harwich, where a gay and numerous assemblage awaited their arrival.

The band stationed on the top of the arch by the terminus welcomed their approach with "See the Conquering Hero comes," and the populace loudly cheered.

Four trains went out and the same number returned during the day, which was observed as a general holiday, and the weather being very fine, all passed off most agreeably.

At six o'clock about seventy sat down to a sumptuous entertainment at the Three Cups Hotel; J. Patrick, Esq., mayor, presided, and Edward Chapman, Esq., the town clerk, occupied the vice-president's chair, the company including J. Bagehaw, Esq., M.P., John Disney, Esq., Capt. Jesse, — Reeves, Esq., Messrs. Horton, Hales, Freshfield, Williams, George, Corderay, Vaux, Heseltine, Durrant, Dacken, W. Nalborough, Wilson, Capt. Stephen, R.N., Lieut. Gutzmer, R.N., R. Stephens, Esq., collector of customs, Handfield, Church, Graham, Cottingham, Freeman, Lee, Waights, Daniels, Baines, Dore, Leonard, Jackson, Gilling, Malpas, Griggs, &c., &c. Loyal and other toasts, with speeches appropriate to the occasion, followed, and sociability was kept up by a large party to a late hour.

NEW FUEL.—The Munich journals state that there is at Hasseimoor, in Bavaria, a manufactory where a sort of peat is made which possesses almost the qualities of coal, and is used by the engines on several of the railways in that country.

This manufactory last year supplied 10,000,000 of cubic feet of the fuel. The Austrian Government has sent Professor Gurnsey to examine the works in detail, in order to establish similar ones in the neighbourhood of Latach.

SCOTLAND AND IRELAND.—The Asp, surveying steamer, Lieutenant Aldridge, has been in the north, employed in assisting to lay down the electric cable between the Scottish and Irish coasts at Port Patrick and Donaghadee.

The Earl of Kenmare has made a free gift of fourteen miles of the land for the Tralee and Killarney Railway, following the footsteps of his noble predecessor, who gave twenty-three miles to the Killarney junction.

AGRICULTURE.

IMPROVED FACILITIES FOR CROSSING THE MERSEY.—On Friday a deputation, consisting of Mr. H. Nichol, of Spital-hall; Mr. Zeigler, of Landican; Mr. Turner, of Stourton; Mr. Russell, of Hlinsage, members of the Wirral Agricultural Improvement Society, with Mr. Burdham, the honorary secretary, had an interview with the ferry committee of the Birkenhead commissioners, relative to an improved mode of transit across the Mersey.

The members of the deputation having been most courteously received, Mr. Nichol explained the object of their visit. He said that he and his friends were anxious to impress upon the authorities of Birkenhead and Liverpool the absolute necessity for improved ferryage across the river for agricultural live stock and produce.

He alluded to the complaints of cattle jobbers, who, he said, had assured him that they often sustained a loss of 1s. per head on sheep by detention all night in Liverpool—sheep suffering considerably in health and appearance from town confinement.

In regard to the mode by which the facilities required might be given, the deputation referred the committee to the plan of transport now in operation across the Delaware, at New York, a river equally as broad and busy as the Mersey at Liverpool.

There horses harnessed to vehicles, as well as live stock of every description, are, it appears, safely conveyed across the river in large flat-bottomed boats, and the facilities given to the public are all that can be desired.

The members of the ferry committee listened attentively to the statements made to them, and admitted the reasonableness of something being done to meet the requirements of the agricultural traffic.

They stated that they had of late been paying more attention to the goods traffic, which had specially doubled itself, and they had every confidence that the anticipations of the deputation would be fully realised if adequate means of conveyance could be provided.

The difficulty, however, they said, was with Liverpool; and they assured the deputation that if Liverpool gave proper accommodation on her side, nothing should be wanting on the part of Birkenhead.

The deputation then thanked the committee, and withdrew, well pleased with the attention that had been paid to their representations.—Liverpool Mercury.

LAMBS FOR THE NORTH.—About 20,000 lambs passed through here last week, from the south country markets, to stock the hills in the north.—Perth Courier.

THE WHEAT HARVEST IN WILTSHIRE.—In several parts of the county the wheat harvest has commenced, and in the neighbourhood of Warminster considerable quantities of corn have been cut, and some harvested in good condition.

Though hail in some parts, and thin in others, the crop will, on the whole, it is expected, should anything like favourable weather continue, turn out a full average.

The potato crop has, during the past week, in some localities, proved to be much more diseased than was hoped would have been the case; and the onions, for which the district round Warminster especially is famous, have suffered to a great extent from the ravages of maggots, which destroy the bulbs.

THE HARVEST IN DEVONSHIRE.—Harvest operations in Devonshire, especially in the south of Devon, have proceeded rapidly during the past week; and many fields of wheat have been saved in splendid condition.

In the neighbourhood of Exeter, there are some crops of wheat that will yield from forty to fifty bushels an acre; and the crops generally throughout the county, if the late weather of the past fortnight should continue, will be abundant.

The barley and oats are most luxuriant, and the turnip, mangold-wurzel, and other root crops, were never more promising.

The disease has attacked the potato crop with great violence in many places, but up to the present time the potatoes have been very good and plentiful.

The apples are not so plentiful in the orchards of the county as they were last year; indeed, in many places the crop is a failure.

This will very much affect many who are in the habit of producing large quantities of Devonshire cider for the London and other markets.

IMPORTANT SALE OF NEW LEICESTERS.—Harvest over, the autumn is usually marked by agricultural gatherings. The great event of this kind in the midland counties will, we anticipate, be the sale of the Dodford flock, to come off on the 7th September.

The history of the breed of new Leicester sheep, perhaps the most useful and profitable of our domestic animals, is an interesting feature in agriculture. It was commenced and perfected by one man, the renowned Bakewell, who, from combining the merits of the best animals he could select, and devoting to his object the energies of a master mind, effected an improvement in the breed of sheep which has immortalised his name, and conferred upon his country a benefit which, although highly, has never been sufficiently appreciated.

From Bakewell's day to the present time, these sheep have been considered a distinct breed, and held in great estimation. At one period, some forty years ago, so great was the competition for them that they were let out to hire at what would now be considered fabulous prices.

They have been used to improve most of, if not all, the other breeds, and have been exported to almost every part of the world.

Mr. Hewitt is one of the very few original breeders now left; he has steadily and perseveringly kept to the primitive blood, availing himself, with much judgment, of a cross with the best flocks of the day; and those who were present at his sale last year were unanimous in their praises of the beauty and excellence of the flock.

Even amateurs could see what care and skill had been exercised in their breeding, so plainly was it to be seen they were all of one family.

Very good judges were of opinion that so valuable a flock had never been offered to the public, but, we are informed on very good and impartial authority, that Mr. Hewitt will, at his coming sale, outdo himself, and that this, which is the finale of his breeding career, will excel his last and all former exhibitions.

The sale of these sheep is a rare and interesting circumstance in the farming world. We shall be anxious to mark the result, and, while we regret that such a flock should be broken up and lost to the neighbourhood, we hope, for the sake of the good old cause of agriculture, they will be the means of improving the breed of sheep in every other district.—Northampton Herald.

COMMERCE.

THE TEA TRADE, August 21.—The deliveries in London for the week were 631,153 lb., being an increase compared with the previous one.

The Piedmontese Gazette of the 19th announces that a treaty for the reciprocal freedom of the coasting trade has been just concluded between England and Sardinia, and that a treaty of commerce has also been concluded between Sardinia and the Sublime Porte.

A letter from Rome of the 14th states, that a convention was signed in that city, June 28, between the Neapolitan and Roman Governments, establishing for eight years an exact reciprocity between vessels of the two countries in all dues of navigation, anchorage, pilotage, customs, &c. The fisheries and coasting-trade are not comprised in these arrangements.

BALTIC.—The export of flax, hemp, linseed, and wool, from Russia by way of Memel, both by land and river conveyance, continues on the same increased scale as hitherto. The extent of increase since the re-opening of trade this spring under the liberal auspices of the English and French concessions to neutral powers, may be estimated by stating that the turnpikes in the neighbourhood of Memel take ten times as much toll now as is usual at this time of the year. One of the Prussian custom-houses on the Russian frontier sometimes takes as much as 1,000 thalers a-day for import duties. The difficulty and slowness of land carriage from the interior of Russia to any neutral port have of late caused many Prussian products to find a ready sale, where the patience of purchasers was too sorely tried from the above causes; thus almost all the hemp in the province of Prussia has been bought up, for want of Russian produce. Hitherto it was Riga that sent the most goods to Memel for the purpose of the European market; but just of late, as the Bight trade slackened, the goods from St. Petersburg have taken their place. Water carriage to Memel is now almost entirely superseded by land transport, on account of the saving of time. Freight rates are going down very rapidly, while prices for land carriage continue to rise. The demand for harvest labour has of late, however, made the conveyance into Russia of the quantities of goods lying in Memel impossible at any price. The fear of being surprised by the English cruisers has driven the land traffic further southward from the coast, so that now goods are generally sent through Lithuania, by way of Gardien, instead of through Courland, by way of Polangen. The articles that Russia exports just now by the assistance of Memel come for the most part from the neighbourhood of St. Petersburg, by way of Kowno, and consist of flax, hemp, oil, tallow, wool, yarn, &c. What she takes in exchange are cotton, sugar, wheat, coffee, spices, and other colonial produce. The demand for articles of luxury and fashion is very much less now than in former years. From April 1 to July 1 of this year there were forwarded to Memel, via Taurigen, no less than 126,070 pods (40lb.) of hemp, 169,493 pods of flax, and 53,791 pods of hard: so that it is reckoned that on this road alone 300,000 silver roubles had been expended for the carriage of the above. Many streets and open spaces in Memel have at times been quite covered with flax and hemp laid out to dry or to be dressed, for the state in which these articles arrive, damaged from rain and from faulty preparation previous to packing, renders them very dangerously combustible neighbours. Every species of warehouse, coachhouse, stable, or outhouse, in the town and its neighbourhood is pressed into the service at fabulous prices. In the latter half of May there frequently arrived per day as many as 500 cart-loads of hemp and flax from Russia. On the 4th of that month there were 166 vessels lying in the harbour and the Danga river, unable to discharge their cargoes on account of all the landing places being occupied.

Markets.

MONEY MARKET.

MONDAY.—Consols for money, which left off at 94½ to 94¾, opened this morning at 94½ to 94¾, and subsequently touched 94¾. The final prices, however, were 94½ to 94¾ for money, and 94½ to 94¾ for the 13th of September. There were no particular influences observable to affect the course of prices, and the business of the day presented nothing for remark. A further fall was announced in the corn-market; but the weather, although not unfavourable, was dull. Bank Stock left off at 208 to 210; Reduced, 94½ to 94¾; Three-and-a-Quarter per Cents, 94½ to 94¾; Long Annuities, 4½; India Stock, 226 to 230; India Bonds, par to 4s. premium; and Exchequer Bills, 1s. discount to 1s. premium.

TUESDAY.—English funds opened steadily at Monday's prices, but subsequently became rather heavy. Consols for money were first quoted 94½ to 94¾, whence they receded until there were sellers at 94. The final prices were 94 to 94½ for money, and 94½ to 94¾ for the 13th of September. There were no particular influences observable to affect the course of prices, and the business of the day presented nothing for remark. A further fall was announced in the corn-market; but the weather, although not unfavourable, was dull. Bank Stock left off at 208 to 210; Reduced, 94½ to 94¾; Three-and-a-Quarter per Cents, 94½ to 94¾; Long Annuities, 4½; India Stock, 226 to 230; India Bonds, par to 4s. premium; and Exchequer Bills, 1s. discount to 1s. premium.

WEDNESDAY.—Consols for money, which left off at 94½ to 94¾, were first quoted 94½ to 94¾, whence they subsequently receded, without any noticeable cause, to 94½. They then recovered to the opening quotations, and after regular hours there was an improvement of an eighth, transactions having been entered into at 94½ to 94¾ for the account. Bank Stock left off at 208 to 210; Reduced, 94½ to 94¾; Three-and-a-Quarter per Cents, 94½ to 94¾; Long Annuities, 4½; India Stock, 229;

India Bonds, par to 5s. premium; and Exchequer Bills, 1s. discount to 1s. premium.

THURSDAY.—The English Funds opened this morning at a fractional advance. Consols were quoted at 94 to 94½ for money, and 94½ to 94¾ for the account. The rumoured defeat of the Turkish army in Asia was calculated to create considerable heaviness. Bank Stock left off at 208 to 210; Reduced, 94½ to 94¾; Three-and-a-Quarter per Cents, 94½ to 94¾; Long Annuities, 4½; India Stock, 225 to 230; India Bonds, 2s. to 5s. premium; Exchequer Bills, par to 2s. premium; and Exchequer Bonds, 98½ to 99.

FRIDAY.—The English funds have been steady to-day, the continuance of good accounts with regard to the harvest having been sufficient to counteract the effect on the market of a rather full supply of money stock. Consols remained throughout the day at the prices of Thursday evening, namely 94 to 94½ for money, and 94½ to 94¾ for the account, with buyers at that quotation. Bank Stock left off at 208 to 210; Reduced, 94½ to 94¾; Three-and-a-Quarter per Cents, 94½ to 94¾; Long Annuities, 4½; India Stock, 225 to 230; India Bonds, 2s. to 5s. premium; Exchequer Bills, par to 2s. premium; and Exchequer Bonds, 98½ to 99.

SATURDAY, 12 o'clock.—Consols, 94½ to 94¾.

SMITHFIELD.

MONDAY, August 21.—We had again a good supply of beasts, and trade was dull. Prices on the average were scarcely as good as on Friday, but rather better than on Monday last. The supply of sheep was much smaller, but the demand was by no means large; consequently we could not quote much higher prices. Trade was heavy for lambs and calves at late rates. From Germany and Holland there were 1,960 beasts, 4,100 sheep, 208 calves, and 180 pigs. Scotland, 90 beasts; and 2,600 from the Northern and Midland counties.

FRIDAY, August 26.—Although the number of beasts is not quite so large as on Friday last, it is fully adequate to the demand. Trade is by no means brisk, and Monday's quotations are scarcely realised. We have, for the time of year, a fair supply of sheep; trade for them is very dull, and inferior qualities are rather lower. There is more inquiry for good lambs. Calves are selling about the same as on Monday. From Germany and Holland there are 278 beasts, 1,430 sheep, and 274 calves; Spain, 32 beasts; 400 from the north and midland, and 89 milch cows from the home counties.

COUNTRY CATTLE.

DERBY, August 22.—There was but a short supply of fat beasts, for which there was a good demand. The number of sheep and lambs was about the average, without any alteration of price. Fat calves were again scarce and well sold. The supply of fat pigs was large. Beef made 6d. to 6½d.; mutton, 6½d. to 7d.; lamb, 7d.; veal, 6½d. to 7d. per lb.; pigs, 9s. to 9s. 6d. per score; rough fat, 6s. 3d. per stone, commencing July 12; hides, young, 9d. and above, 3½d. per lb.; ditto, young, under 9d., 2½d.; old cows, all weights, 3d.; cut hides, 2½d.; calf skins, 10lb. and under, 4d.; above 10 and under 16, 4½d.; above 16, 3½d.; all cut calf skins, 3½d. less.

LIVERPOOL, August 21.—There was an average show of cattle and sheep at market this morning, but the demand for both was slow. A good many sheep and a few cattle were left unsold at the close of business. Beef, 5d. to 6½d.; mutton, 5½d. to 6½d.

SALFORD, August 23.—There was a greater number of beasts than last week, and there was a fair clearance made. Mutton and lamb about the same as last week; calves, fully 3½d. dearer; beasts, 14s. 6d.; sheep and lambs, 10s. 8d.; calves, 4½; best beef, 7d. to 7½d.; middling, 6d. to 6½d.; cows, 5d. to 5½d.; best wethers, 7d. to 7½d.; ewes, 6d. to 6½d.; calves, 6d. to 7d.

MARK LANE.

MONDAY, August 21.—The arrivals of wheat and flour from abroad during the past week have been small, and those from our own coast moderate in the extreme. The trade has been of quite a retail character, and prices of old wheat have declined 2s. per quarter, and flour could not be sold so well, by 1s. per sack and 6d. per barrel, as on this day se'night. There was rather more new wheat at market this morning, quality and condition various, and prices ranged between 60s. and 7s. per quarter. Barley was dull sale, and is per quarter cheaper. Oats, notwithstanding only moderate receipts, continue to give way in value, and must be noted 6d. to 1s. lower. Beans and peas were also procurable on rather better terms.

FRIDAY, August 25.—The arrivals of wheat and flour have been moderate this week. The attendance of buyers in Mark-lane this morning was small, and they had no difficulty in purchasing the little they were disposed to take of foreign wheat and flour at Monday's rates. New English wheat must be quoted at 1s. to 2s. cheaper. The oat trade was without activity, and prices were with difficulty supported. Barley, beans, and peas were a dull sale at former prices. London Averages: Wheat, 67s. 11d.; barley, 32s. 5d.; oats, 27s. 9d.; rye, 41s.; beans, 43s.; peas, 46s. 6d.

COUNTRY GBAIN.

ISWICK, August 22.—Our annual sheep and lamb fair being held to-day, diverted the attention of farmers and others from the corn market, that the attendance was very small. A few samples of new white wheat were shown of very good quality, which were readily sold. Of new red the quality was more varied, causing prices to range from 50s. to 58s. per quarter. No new barley at market to-day. We have had occasional showings; still harvest work is proceeding rapidly. Old white wheat, 60s. to 65s.; new ditto, 58s. to 65s.; old red wheat, 55s. to 58s.; new ditto, 50s. to 55s.; barley, 28s. to 30s.; beans, 41s. to 48s.; peas, 28s. to 40s. Averages for the week ending August 22, 1854: wheat, 704 quarters, at 68s. 8d.; peas, 45 quarters, at 43s. 1d.

LEDS, August 22.—(From the Circular of Messrs. J. Scott and Co.)—Our supplies continue very small. A few samples of new red wheat from the eastern counties were shown, which realised 65s. to 68s. per quarter (weight 60 lb. a-bushel), the condition tolerably good. Fresh old wheat maintains the prices of this day se'night. We notice no alteration in the value of other grain. The harvest in this neighbourhood is just commencing.

SWINDON, August 19.—The weather for some time past has been showery and unsettled in appearance, causing many of the farmers great anxiety for their late hay crops, there being still a great deal out in the fields. The grain at market was soon cleared off at last week's prices, viz.: white wheat, 70s. to 76s.; red ditto, 65s. to 70s.; oats, 30s. to 35s. No other sorts of grain were offered for sale.

HAY AND STRAW.

SMITHFIELD, August 21.—Meadow hay, 55s. to 95s.; clover, 60s. to 115s.; straw, 35s. to 40s. per load.

CUMBERLAND, August 21.—Meadow hay, 55s. to 97s.; clover, 60s. to 112s.; straw, 36s. to 40s. per load.

WHITECHAPEL, August 21.—Meadow hay, 52s. to 95s.; clover, 65s. to 118s.; straw, 36s. to 40s. per load. New meadow hay realised 60s. to 84s.; and new clover, 70s. to 75s. per load.

HOPS.

BOROUGH, August 21.—The anticipated improvement in the hop plant proves fallacious; many of those grounds that appeared favourable are decidedly worse, and the impression is more against the duty this morning. There is rather more business doing at an advance of price. Duty, £50,000 to £55,000. Last week's imports of hops into London were very extensive, viz., 43 bales from Copenhagen, 95 from Ostend, 85 from Antwerp, 16 from Dunkirk, 69 from Rotterdam, 715 from Hamburg, and 3 from Limerick.

FOREIGN.

A LETTER FROM MEMEL of the 10th states that the harvest this year in Eastern Prussia, Lithuania, and in Poland, will be very abundant, and far exceed general expectation.

THE CROPS IN AMERICA.—Intelligence from all parts of New Jersey establishes the fact that the farmers of that state never had finer crops than during the present season. The wheat in Sussex and Warren counties is flourishing, and the corn yield will surpass that of any previous year. —New York Courier.

BALTIC.—The harvest promises to be magnificent throughout Finland. Bye-enting commenced on the 17th July.

BLACK SEA.—Advises from Odessa of the 11th inst. state that it was rumoured to be the intention of the Czar to remove the prohibition against the export of grain, which has existed at that port for the last six months. Looking at the extraordinary extent of the present wheat harvest in Southern Russia, this measure will be of considerable importance, if the total absence of blockade, which is still reported, should be allowed by the allies to continue. It is to be presumed, however, that the place remaining open is simply a temporary consequence of the arrangements in progress for the attack upon Sebastopol.

TURF TALK.

"The chosen sport of a great and a free people."

OUR SAILOR KING.

There has been no lack of sport during the week. Chelmsford and Derby held their meetings on the same days; but, though clashing, neither can be said, as a distinct interest was represented by each, to have been much injured by the collision. At the former place, Rogers's stable came in for the lion's share of the spoil. The fielders had but an indifferent time of it on Tuesday, for, out of five races, the winners of four started with the odds on them. St. Faith, well-riden by Mr. Bevil, carried off the Mark's Hall Stakes. In this mile and a half run, Old Bordeaux, who has often shown a fair turn of speed, unfortunately broke down. Guitar struck the right chord for the Brentwood Stakes, beating The Despised, after a good race, by a neck. Miss Bolton just managed to accomplish the Chelmsford Handicap by a head from Little Naughty, jeopardizing the 2 to 1 on her to the last moment. Rackapelt won the Cup Stakes easily from the favourite Vingt-un; and, Sharavogue, another of Rogers's team, was allowed to walk over for the Queen's Guineas. John o' Bruges placed the Town and Members' Plates to the credit side of Captain Lane's account. This son of the stout John o' Gaunt is evidently no mean opponent over a short distance. Derby lost nothing of its racing reputation in the sport provided for the two days' meeting. Falcon having won the Grand Stand Stakes, at the selling price of 100 gs, was bought in at 175 gs. The Tradesmen's Plate, with twenty-six acceptances, brought together but six competitors, including the late victorious names of Newbold, Amalgamation and Punnicestone. The prize was, however, awarded by an easy brace of lengths to the non-favourite Little Davie, proving that there are but few three-yr-olds, who can give a couple of years to any opponent of even the most moderate pretensions over a two-mile course. In the Produce Stakes, St. Clare made such an example of Ostrogoth, who started at 7 to 4 on him, as must have proved anything but a pleasant memento to those, who had at one time so freely backed him

TATTERSALL'S.—MONDAY.

Paying and receiving on the recent events at York was the principal feature of business. Betting was remarkably limited. The advancement of the St. Leger favourite, Boiardo, to 6 to 1, taken to upwards of £100, was the only important change—7 to 4 was, however, obtainable at the close. Acrobat and The Trapper were frequently inquired after, and a few investments were made at 6 and 7 to 1 about each, but Acrobat had evidently "the call." Scythian rose in favour, and some additional confidence was placed in Midsommer. Hannibal was backed for a pony at 40 to 1. Further comment is unnecessary.

THURSDAY.

Many members having proceeded from Derby to the meeting at Lincoln, the room was thinly attended, and very little business was transacted.

The principal bets were in reference to the St. Leger. At the commencement 200 to 100 was laid agst Boiardo, the layer offering to go on to some money, or to take 5 to 2. At this point the favourite stood, until some quarter of an hour after the layer had left the room, when two or three of the favourite's adherents took counsel together, and checked for the time the 2 to 1 movement, by investing, in the aggregate, about £150, at 7 to 4.

In the course of the afternoon The Trapper advanced to 5 to 1 (taken), and a strong disposition was manifested to back Midsommer. 7 to 1 was taken, to a small sum, about Acrobat; 20 to 1, laid to £75, agst Scythian; and 1000 to 30 agst Hannibal.

The betting on the other events named below was on a very limited scale.

DERBY RACES.

Upon the present occasion the programme contained five races for each day, the Grand Stand Stakes, a Produce Stakes, the Tradesman's Plate, the Berwick Stakes, being arranged for Tuesday, and the following fixed for Wednesday:—The Inkeeper's Stake, the Chatsworth Stakes, the Chesterfield Stakes, the Selling Stakes, and the Sudbury Stakes (a new race). The weights for the Tradesman's Plate have been for some time before the public, but we believe but little money was invested upon it until last week, it being presumed that the York meeting would furnish the truest criterion to the running here. On the first appearance of the impostors, Oracles, Little David, and Pumicestone, were "fancied" by the knowing ones. The Northampton joust brought fresh horses into the market, and Newbold and Amalgamation found friends at short odds. Subsequently, on the receipt of intelligence from York, that Grand Inquisitor, the gallant winner of the Ebor Handicap, would put in appearance at Derby, this horse was freely supported, and on Monday evening, we understand, he was backed at even against the field.

The weather was glorious on Monday, and it was with a feeling of certainty that the race-going community talked of their being favoured with a fine day on the morrow. The only thing which acted as a check upon the indulgence of too sanguinely formed expectation was the limited arrival of horses upon the first-named day, the following being the only animals stabled here on Monday night:—Sister to Bolton, Falcon, Little Tom, Iron, Ostrogoth, St. Clare, Brother to Grey Tommy, Little Fawn, Morning Star, Newbold, Pumicestone, Little David, Amalgamation, Carina, Pyrrhus, Kattinka, Vivid, Communist, Jealous One, Integrity, o by Orlando; May Day's dam, Blakeley, Fakeaway, o by Cotherstone; Polydora, Maid of Cadiz, Mrs. Rigby, and Le Pylion. Early on Tuesday morning, however, the rails brought accessories, and the total realised something like the expected number.

Early in the morning of Tuesday the town appeared unusually astir, hundreds of persons entering it by rail and by road, to witness "the first day's running at Derby races." The race-ground was in admirable order, and the arrangements betokened that every care had been taken by the clerk of the course and the committee to render them adapted to the requirement of the occasion.

Among others on the Grand Stand, we noticed the Earl of Chesterfield, Countess of Chesterfield and party, Earl of Harrington, Countess of Harrington, Viscount Petersham, Lady Geraldine Stanhope, Lord Wilton, Lord Maldstone, Lord Stanhope, Sir W. Coltrington, Captain Little, Captain Storey, Captain Marsland, H. Forrester, Esq., Drinkald, Esq., G. Payne, Esq., J. B. Storey, Esq., J. Evans, Esq.; Messrs. H. P. Gisborne, J. H. Mousley, H. F. Hunter, C. W. Hunter, S. W. Cox, S. Poyser, T. Yates, E. Parr, &c. &c.

The first race was

The Grand Stand Stakes of 10 sovs, added to a Sweepstakes of 5 sovs each. One mile and a half.

Mr. E. Parr's Falcon, 3 yrs, £100 Quinton 1
Capt. Christie's Little Tom, 4 yrs, £100 Cliff 2
Mr. Sheppardson's Liberty, aged, £100 Wells 3
Mr. Ridley's Sister to Bolton, 4 yrs, £50 Corny 6
Mr. Phillips's Le Juif, 6 yrs, £100 Knott 6
Lord Chesterfield's Uncle, 4 yrs, £50 Ashmall 6

Betting—6 to 1 on the field, 2 to 1 agst Falcon, 3 to 1 agst Sister to Bolton, 3 to 1 agst Le Juif, and 5 to 1 agst Little Tom. A beautiful start was effected, Little Tom jumping off with the lead, closely followed by Le Juif, Uncle, and Liberty, and the others laying close up. At the first turn Le Juif went in front, and maintained the lead to the back of the course, where it was taken up by Little Tom, who other horses being still in close attendance. No change occurred for a short distance in the straight run in; but at length Falcon drew forward, and after a splendid set-to with Little Tom, won cleverly by a length; Liberty a good third. The winner was put up by auction after the race by Mr. E. Smith, and knocked down to Mr. Wood, of London, for 175 guineas, seventy-five of which go to the race fund.

A Produce Stakes of 10 sovs each, h f, with 50 added. One mile and a half.

Mr. Wadlow's St. Clair Charlton 1
Mr. Taylor's Ostrogoth Flaman 2

The following were drawn:—The Assayer, b f by Orlando, Bright May, the Field Marshal, Thessalia, The Medal, Jack Peck (late Julius Caesar), and Orson.

This was reduced to a match between Ostrogoth and St. Clair. The former was the favourite at 5 to 1 (taken freely). St. Clair made the running, keeping about three lengths in advance of the favourite to the distance, where Ostrogoth made his effort, but failed to reach St. Clair, who ran in a clever winner by two lengths.

The Tradesman's Plate of 100 sovs, added to a Handicap of 15 sovs each, 10 f, and 5 only if declared. Three horses to start, or the public money will not be added. Two miles. 49 subscribers. 23 having declared forfeit, pay 5 sovs each.

Capt. Marsland's Little David, 5 yrs, 6st 3lb Carroll 1
Lord Wilton's Pumicestone, 3 yrs, 6st 3lb Ashmall 2
Mr. J. Parsons Cook's Morning Star, 5 yrs, 6st 0lb Kendall 3
Mr. Thos. Dawson's Amalgamation, 3 yrs, 6st 0lb Bates 4
Mr. W. Robinson's Newbold, 3 yrs, 6st 3lb Quinton 5
Mr. Ebelly's Merry Monk, 3 yrs, 6st 3lb Maine 6

The following were drawn:—Typee, Oracles, Nancy, Ethelwolf, Revolver, Haco, Br. to Grey Tommy, Audubon, Heapy, Little Fawn, Jacqueline, Grand Inquisitor, D. O., Jack Frost, Austrey, Siletto, Lucien's Inn, Vixen, Lady Bird, and Farsa. Six horses weighed for the race, a less number than had been expected.

Betting—2 to 1 agst Amalgamation, 3 to 1 agst Little David, 3 to 1 agst Pumicestone, 3 to 1 agst Newbold, and 5 to 1 agst Merry Monk and Morning Star. Little David jumped away just after reaching the post before the other horses were in readiness, but was pulled back after going a few yards. The six then settled quietly into their places, and got off in a very compact form. Morning Star and Amalgamation made alternate running till reaching the bottom of the course the second time round, waited upon by Pumicestone and Newbold, Little David, who on passing the stand occupied the third position, lying off. As they entered the straight run in, Morning Star was in trouble, and simultaneously Merry Monk dropped into the rear and took no further part in the race. At the distance Little David, who had been gradually rearing his horses at the back of the course, took the lead, and after an exciting race with Pumicestone ran in a clever winner by two lengths, the same distance between second and third, the favourite a bad fourth, and the other two following at wide intervals.

The Derwent Stakes, a Sweepstakes of 2 sovs, with 20 added. One mile.

Mr. Irvine's Timotheus, 6 yrs, £20 Charlton 1
Mr. Goddard's The Governor, 3 yrs, £20 Quinton 2

Mr. Ridley's Sister to Bolton, 3 yrs, £20 dr
Mr. Bearup's Mirabeau, 3 yrs, £20 dr

Betting—7 to 4 and 2 to 1 on Timotheus, who made all the running, never was reached, and won in a canter by a length. The winner was put up by auction, and bought in for 75 gs.

The Maiden Plate of 30 sovs, added to a Sweepstakes of £5 each.

Mr. Humphrey's Pyrois, 3 yrs Midgley 1
Mr. Phillips's Vivid, 3 yrs, 6st 0lb Thorpe 2

Lord Chesterfield's Communist, 3 yrs Ashmall 4
Mr. Flintoff's b g by Gabler, 5 yrs Kendall 6
Mr. R. Choyce's Nimble, by Orlando, May-day's dam, 3 yrs (followed 6lb) Wells 6

Betting—5 to 2 agst Communist, 3 to 1 agst Pyrois, 4 to 1 agst Kattinka, 5 to 1 agst Vivid. Vivid made the running to the distance, where Pyrois challenged, headed him half-way up, and, after a very fine race home, won by a neck. Kattinka a good third; the others beaten off.

WEDNESDAY.

The Selling Stakes of 30 sovs, added to a Sweepstakes of 5 sovs each. For three-year-olds and upwards. Winners extra. Optional selling weights, &c. One mile, 4 fms.

Charlton weighed for Timotheus, and his number was displayed on the telegraph, but he did not go to the post.

Betting—2 to 1 on Mirabeau. Won cleverly by a neck; bad third. The winner was bought in for 62 gs.

The Chatsworth Stakes of 50 sovs, added to a Handicap of 10 sovs each, h f, and 3 if declared. Winners extra. One mile and a half. 36 subs, 13 of whom pay 3 sovs each.

for the Derby. The Jealous One, with no advantage of weight, won the Chatsworth Stakes, in a style that gives promise we shall hear of her again before the season is over. In the Chesterfield Stakes, Fakeaway made ample amends for the disappointment at York, and obviated her noble owner's intended donation, by acquiring the fifty sovs for herself.

The sport at Lincoln and other places is still in progress; but, Jetty Troff has been telegraphed as the winner of the Lincolnshire Handicap, and Jack Sheppard has added to his exploits by carrying off the Granby Stakes.

The weights for the two great autumnal handicaps are now fairly before the world, and will no doubt occasion much difference of opinion. In the Cesarewitch, Rataplan holds the unprofitable post of honour at 8st 7lb, while Rododendri stands alone in the ignoble position of the extreme rear—the precise place he occupies in the Cambridgeshire—at 4st 7lb. This colt, of high lineage, was a competitor for the Derby and 2,600 Guineas; he is treated now, and perhaps deservedly so, as the most ardent of impostors. Virago and Andover are at the same weight, 8st 13lb, and with but small chance of winning. Many years may elapse before a three-year-old can be found to excel Faugh-a-Ballagh's performance at 8st. Little David, the victor of the Cambridgeshire, has to concede 6lb to Haco, the winner of the race last year, their weights being 8st 10lb and 8st 4lb. The Trapper is held in high estimation by the handicapper, as he has to give two or three of his probable opponents for the St. Leger more than half a stone. Old Noll, too, at 8st, is placed in a situation that his previous running would scarcely warrant. There must be some terror even in a name. The foreigners, Voyageur, Stern, and Scherz, are certainly not treated with the tender allowance that is provided for them in the conditions of "The Goodwood Cup." Onyx has to give the winner of the Oaks 3lbs, Minceant being weighted at 7st 10lb; while El Dorado, who ran the favourite for the St. Leger to three-quarters of a length in the "Gratwicke," has 6st 7lb; Cumberland Statesman is honoured with 7st 12lb, agst Balrownie's 8st 1lb. Nancy, at 7st, can have no cause of complaint; an opportunity is now afforded her of retrieving her early fame. Fiddle is turned loose with 5st 12lb. But, among the light weights, we consider Jujube, Gamelad, Barrel, Tros, Caliph, and the Star of Surrey to be most favourably in. St. Andrew, La Belle, Jacqueline, Ammonia, Exact, and Koh-i-Noor, also appear to be leniently treated. Nabob, Little Harry, Adine, Balrownie, and Typee have none the worst of the top weights. Muscovite, however, at 8st 3lb, who is ever about to do a good thing, but always delays the performance, has been made the favourite at 30 to 1.

The Handicap for the Houghton Meeting seems to be the counterpart of that for the Second October; but, as the weights were not published till yesterday, sufficient time has hardly been afforded us to examine them attentively. We shall enter on the merits of both in our next.

The little that has been done on the Leger has effected no variation in the betting. Boiardo does not appear over firm in his position; and many venture to assert that he will be unable to maintain it many days longer. The Trapper has an upward look, but there are whispers abroad that the owners are not yet on. Midsommer is not without friends, and Scythian, despite his defeat at York, still finds supporters at an outside price. The change of trainers must, indeed, work wonders to enable him to snatch the coveted prize. Acrobat seems to be waiting on fortune; should his friend Boiardo decline in estimation, he may be expected to come with a rush. There are some who still "hope against hope" in regard to Dervish, and look to see him emerge from the obscurity that now enshrouds him. To all present appearance the field is likely to be a very limited one.

The Warwick Meeting commences on Tuesday, and its list of races is nowise inferior to those of former years, and must prove attractive to all who are within reach of this famed sporting place. The Leamington Stakes, even in these dull times, must prove a good letting race, and, from the excellence of the handicap, ought to furnish a large field. Lurley and Haco may here have a chance of distinguishing themselves. The Warwick Cup, the County Stakes, and indeed all the events marked out for decision, have large entries, and a capital gathering may confidently be anticipated. Warwick, from its close proximity to the Doncaster meeting, was for a time remarkable for the sudden and heavy blows dealt out against one or more of the favourites for the St. Leger. The custom, however, has of late fallen into desuetude; but, should any unexpected change take place in the betting, it is more than probable that the movement will be made on Tuesday or Wednesday next.

The well-known Hermit is announced for sale by private contract—the price, 1,500 gs; and the quite-forgotten Heart-Breaker, by Don John, who made some figure in the betting for the Derby and Leger three years ago, is to be disposed of by public auction at Doncaster, on the 14th, by Messrs Tattersall.

In addition to Warwick, meetings will be held in the course of the week at Cheille, Bungay, Weymouth, Lichfield, Rochester and Chatham, and Marlborough—not forgetting the Western Meeting in Bonnie Scotland.

IMPORTANT TO FARMERS.—A question having arisen in several districts of South Wales as to the liability of farmers to pay duty upon riding horses, the commissioners, in order to save trouble and avoid appeals, directed the following queries to be put to the Board of Inland Revenue:—First, whether any farmer keeping several horses, say four, and consequently riding, himself or family, one or more of such horses to fairs, markets, worship, &c. (such horses at other times being kept for farming purposes only), would be liable to any, and what duty? Secondly, whether such person keeping one horse only for his calling, and occasionally himself or family riding such horse, would be liable, and, if so, to what duty? The answers returned by the board were, that only one horse is entitled to be kept for the purposes before mentioned, at the duty of 10s. 6d., and if other horses are ridden by the farmer or his family they are liable, according to height, to the duty of £1 1s. or 10s. 6d. If one horse only be kept then the duty of 10s. 6d. is payable.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.—Sixty very fine horses have arrived in the garrison at Woolwich. These superior animals, for field-battery service, were purchased by Lieutenant-Colonel Wingfield, many of them at Horncastle and other large horse-fairs in Yorkshire. The demand for horses for military service is very great at present, and there were a considerable number of buyers for foreign governments at the recent horse-fair, which rendered it difficult to obtain good horses for the British artillery and cavalry services, except at high prices.

Betting—6 to 4 agst Florist, and 6 to 1 agst any other. Won by half a length; three-quarters of a length between the second and third. The requisite number of horses not putting in an appearance for the Innkeeper's Plate, it was declared void.

TURFIANA.

The Warwick Race Committee give notice, that no person notoriously in default in respect of stakes, forfeits, or bets upon horse-racing, will be admitted within the Grand Stand, or its enclosure, during any meeting at Warwick.

Mr. Fenning has called his filly by Orlando, out of Flight, her dam by Jereed, out of Elopeuent, dam of Bay Rosalind—Fly-away.

GOORKAH.—In consequence of having broken down, this horse was struck out of all his engagements on the 28th ult., at four p.m.

CARLISLE.—The following decision has been given relative to the dispute for the Carlisle Stakes:—"Mr. Thompson objected to Risk on the two counts: 1st, that Risk had not been in possession of the owner for three months; 2nd, that Risk had not paid his stakes before starting. The second count being proved, the Carlisle Stakes are given to brother to British Farmer; the bets go to Risk."—(Signed) CHESTERFIELD—H. ROUS."

WARWICK RACES.—The stakes to be competed for at these races are extremely well filled, and there is every probability of first-rate sport. For the accommodation of all parties, several extensive alterations and great improvements have been made at the Grand Stand; and the electric telegraph of the Great Western Company is fixed adjacent thereto. All are brushing up, and the good things of this world are abundantly laid in at the several hotels and inns, suitable to the taste and comforts of the most fastidious. Full particulars of weights, colours, and riders, with exact time of starting for each race, will be found on Mr. Rose's card of the day.

THE MOORS AND THE GROUSE.

The moors continue to yield abundant sport, and the birds never were in finer condition at this season of the year. We resume our notes of the sport at a few of the best northern moors. Mr. Akroyd and Mr. Edwards have had very regular and satisfactory sport at Glenshere during the last week, Mr. Akroyd having killed 280 brace, and Mr. Edwards 230 brace. On no day did they fire a shot before noon. Mr. Wynn Williams and his friends have had excellent sport on the Glen-Tulchen moors. They killed 736 brace in the first six days, and found the birds numerous, strong, and healthy. The best bag was made by the Hon. Mr. Mostyn, M.P., who killed sixty-five and a half brace on the 12th, and on the four following days bagged to his own gun 156 brace; on the 18th he bagged forty-eight brace, forty brace of which were bagged after two p.m. Mr. Wynn Williams got thirty-nine brace on the 15th; Mr. Peter Karr, twenty-four brace on the 16th; and Mr. Morris, fifty-seven brace on the 14th. M. MacKenzie of Muirton, shot at Scatwell Moor on the 19th, thirty-six brace grouse and seven mountain hares. Major Hist, Tulloch Castle, Dingwall, was out on the 12th, with the disadvantage of a heavy shower and high wind. He shot to his own gun that day seventeen and a half brace; on Tuesday, fourteen brace and a mountain hare. On the 16th the birds were very wild, and a constant drizzling rain fell. Beginning late in the day, the Major bagged eighteen brace of grouse, one teal, and one mountain hare. The weather has since been very indifferent, and there has been no shooting. At Muirton, Mr. Gordon, of Nethermuir, Dr. George Gordon, and Mr. Burnett, have been out pretty often. On the 15th, the two last shot twenty-three brace of grouse and five hares. Mr. Gordon and Mr. Burnett bagged thirty brace and three hares on the 18th; and on the 19th, Mr. Gordon, with Dr. George Gordon, shot seventeen and a half brace and five hares. Mr. Archibald Hastie, M.P., and Mr. Stevenson have been shooting on the Dunearn moors; on the 12th the former bagged thirty-two and a half brace grouse, and a hare, and the latter forty and a half brace and two hares; on the 14th, shooting together, they bagged thirty-six brace in a few hours; on the 15th Mr. Stevenson shot twenty-five brace, on the 16th, Mr. Hastie got twenty-two and a half brace in five hours, and on the 18th, the same in the same time; Mr. Stephenson, on the 17th, killed in a few hours seventeen and a half brace, one snipe, and three hares. The birds were strong and wild. Messrs. F. and C. Rodenham, Mr. Evans, and Mr. Meredith, who have been shooting over the moors of Free and Easter Kylachy, had bagged 318 brace of grouse, forty-two hares, seven plovers, and seven snipes, between the 12th and 21st. On Friday last the party at Dalehally-house, shot 175 brace of grouse and twenty-five hares. On the Dalmagavie moors, on the 17th Messrs. Kettle and Foster bagged sixty brace grouse. At Garbole, on the 17th, Mr. Morrison and Colonel Shirley got thirty-seven brace grouse, and five hares; on the 19th, Mr. Beech killed thirty-four brace grouse, and four hares. From Lagnalle we learn that, notwithstanding the wetness of the weather, the party there had fair sport—to wit, 14th ult., Lord H. Bentinck, eighty-four brace; Mr. Walker, eighty-three and a half; Mr. King, seventy-seven; Mr. Hall, sixty-two; 15th ult., Mr. Walker, thirty-one brace; Mr. Hall, thirty-two; and Mr. King, fifty-six; 16th ult., Lord H. Bentinck, forty-one brace; Mr. King, fifty-five; Mr. Hall, twenty-three and a half and a brace of snipe; Mr. Walker, thirty; 17th ult., Mr. Walker, sixty-four brace; Mr. Hall, sixty; and Mr. King, fifty-two; 18th ult., Mr. Walker, sixty brace; Lord H. Bentinck, twenty-seven; and Mr. Hall, thirty-five. The sport is much better than was expected. Lord Cawdor and friends (four guns) killed 500 brace of grouse in four days' shooting. The Duke of Richmond's party, at Glendiddich, shot 1,200 brace in seven days. Mr. C. Renton, at Highfield, shot thirty-five and a half brace on the 15th; nineteen brace of grouse, seven and a half brace of partridge, and four hares, on the 19th. On the same moors, Mr. Hawkins Fisher shot twenty-three brace of grouse and four hares, on the 16th, and thirty-seven and a half brace and three hares, on the 17th. The party at Carr-bridge—Sir H. Wilnot, Mr. Hurrell, Mr. Phillips, and Mr. Hall—killed about 800 brace of grouse, besides other game, during the first four days. Captain Hamilton and Mr. Hope, at Auchintoul, Helmsdale, killed fifty-two brace the first day, and thirty-nine brace the next. The Rev. James Holden, Mr. Wright, Mr. Close, and the Hon. E. Stanton, are at Cantray, and killed, besides a great many braces each day, on the 12th, seventy-seven brace of grouse; 14th, sixty-eight brace; 16th (Mr. Holden only), fifty-two brace; and on the 18th, fifty-six and a half brace. At Clunc, in boisterous weather, fifty-eight and a half brace were knocked over by two guns, on the 12th. Mr. Pryor, at Inverlail, and his brother, killed seventy-eight and a half brace on the 17th, in the afternoon. Mr. H. E. Adair and Mr. Hugh Adair, at Knockie, killed, besides snipe and hares, twelve brace grouse on the 12th; eleven brace after luncheon on the 14th; eight brace after four o'clock on the 16th; twenty-one brace on the 17th; sixteen brace in a couple of hours on the 19th; and seven brace on the next day. Mr. Barclay, at Struy, shot fifty brace to his own gun on the 17th. At Balmacann, the Earl of Seafield, on the 17th—the first day his lordship was out—bagged fifty-five brace grouse, one snipe, and four hares; the birds were strong and wild. The success offered to sportsmen on the moors has checked their ardour in making for the forests. Very few deer or stags have yet been shot. We have heard of the following only—Sir Edward Kerrison shot two stags, right and left, at Altnaharrow. The Master of Lovat, at Glenstruthfarar, shot two stags with horns clear of velvet—the earliest of the season; one of the heads was a royal one, and the other carried eleven points. Major Walker's party at Auchintoul, Helmsdale, have killed three deer, a stag, and a couple of hinds.

CUMBERLAND.—Game is found to be plentiful on most of the Cumberland and Westmoreland hills, but the birds are unusually wild. Grouse may now be bought in Carlisle at from 4s. per brace.—Carlisle Patriot.

NORTHUMBERLAND.—Owing to the wet weather, the grouse season in Northumberland opened very poorly, and the bags were lighter than has been the case for many years. Since about the 16th, the shooting has, however, greatly improved. Mr. Pape, game-dealer, in Collingwood-street, received no less than 200 brace in one day last week.—Newcastle Chronicle.

ROMFORD.—Accounts speak favourably of the prospects of the shooting season. The coveys of partridges are both numerous and strong, the fine season having proved of great benefit to the young birds. Hares are also more plentiful than in former years; of pheasants, the same may be said, and although thus early in the season, they are found to be numerous and large grown birds.

PARTRIDGE SHOOTING.—Many of the Yorkshire sportsmen have deferred partridge shooting until the 8th of September. The lateness of the low-ground corn and harvest operations on the top land, combined with scarcity of birds, have induced them to defer the use of the dog and gun a week.

THE PARTRIDGE SEASON.—The birds this season are generally very strong and fine, and upon many farms in great abundance. We never knew so few coveys destroyed, particularly in cutting the first crop of rye grass and clover, where so much destruction is generally committed; and where farms have been kept clear of the nefarious practices of the poacher, we augur some good sport for our friends of the trigger.—Monmouth Beacon.

THE FIRST OF SEPTEMBER.—The accounts from the Midland Counties represent the game as unusually abundant this season. Partridges are very strong, and the coveys are large, fourteen to twenty in a covey. This is attributed to two causes—the scarcity of last season leading gentlemen to abstain from shooting, and the unusually favourable season for hatching this year. Hares are plentiful—too plentiful for the farmers—and pheasants are strong.

THE DEVON AND SOMERSET STAG HOUNDS will meet on Tuesday, the 5th of September, at Brendon Barton; and on Saturday, the 9th, at Dulverton; each day at eleven o'clock. The Devon and Somerset Stag Hounds had a good run on Tuesday, the 22nd ult. The meet was Simonsbath, where the worthy captain in command of the pack received a hearty welcome from a numerous fold. A stag was reported by the harbourer to be on the north part of the forest, near the Warren, to which place the pack was ordered. It was thought advisable not to give the hounds a view, and the field trotted on to rouse the deer, which was laying in a rush bed, and was turned from his lair by F. W. Knight, Esq., the proprietor of Exmoor. The pack were now laid on the scent, and ran him over Pryaway to Black-pits—then on to the Chains, and over Cheriton-ridge to Farley; he beat the covert round Brendon Parsonage for some time, and then crossed for Seobell, and came to water just below Millsade; beat down a short distance, and broke on the Countisbury side, and over Farmer Litson's ground for the hill, which he crossed, no doubt making for the sea; but on descending to the heath not far from Countisbury Church, on getting over the rocks, he broke a fore leg, and on reaching the sea-shore was soon pulled down by his pursuers. Thus ended a chase of two hours and a half: the first part of it, from the rouse to Farley, was very fast, as most of the horses who tried to live with the hounds by their appearance testified.

WEYBRIDGE.

To the Editor of THE FIELD.

Sir,—I was glad to see a notice and sketch of Weybridge in your last Number. There are few better places for the angler. The elder Harris has fished the Thames for nearly fifty years. You do not mention that there are two preserves, one from the Wier to the Lincoln Arms, 840 yards long, the other, called the "New Deep," 160 yards long. The Messrs. Harris have taken, with two punts, 300lbs. of fish per week during the last two months.—Yours, &c.

AN ELEVEN OF THE HAMSTEAD CLUB & MR. WILLIAMSON'S ELEVEN.

This match was played on the Hampstead ground on Thursday, the 24th. It being rather late in the season the club did not muster very strong, playing two men short in the first innings; there was, however, some very good playing. The Hampstead eleven went in first, and the wickets fell fast to the bowling of Mr. Daly and Mr. E. Williamson, the nine wickets putting only thirty-four on the paper.

Mr. Williamson's side then went in to the bowling of Messrs. J. S. and H. Weston. Mr. Collyer and Mr. C. Williamson first appeared "within the crease," and could not be parted for a somewhat lengthened period. Both batted steadily and well. The former's style rather lacked "vigour," his stumps failed him when he had placed twenty-one on the score. Next came Mr. Walker and Mr. Dyson, and made some very free hits. Mr. E. Williamson followed, and batted well indeed, adding fifty-eight, the longest score. Mr. Francis made free with the bowling for a short time, getting one (inter alia) away to square leg for five, clean over the pavilion. Mr. Huxham made a good stand for eighteen runs. Mr. E. Williamson, who faced him, was almost "run up;" he, however, held his own to the last, carrying out his bat. The howling of Mr. J. S. Weston was exceedingly good. In the second innings there was some fine hitting by the club. Mr. Henfrey's style of batting was extremely bold; he could not be "got rid of" till forty-two from his bat had swelled the score. Mr. J. S. Weston placed "a score" save one on the paper, by good, upright batting. Mr. Hodgson ran up fourteen, when "a round shot" from Mr. Daly rattled down the timbers. Mr. Williamson's side were eventually put in for only four to beat, and won, with ten wickets to go down.

LILLYWHITE.

(To the Editor of THE FIELD.)

Sir,—I observe that in your last Number of THE FIELD, whilst announcing the death of the veteran Lillywhite, you attributed to him the introduction of round bowling. This, I believe, is not correct; but that the present style of bowling was introduced by Marsden of Sheffield. Whether Marsden be the correct name or not, I cannot say; perhaps some of your subscribers can settle the point.

Freemasonry and Masonic Intelligence.

CHURCHILL LODGE, OXFORD.—On Tuesday week the brethren of the Churchill Masonic Lodge, No. 702, assembled at the Harcourt Arms, Inn, at Nancham, when the lodge was opened, and amiable business transacted. Brother T. Joy, P. Prov. G.D.C., presided, and was supported by the Deputy Prov. Grand Master for Oxfordshire, Brother Captain Bowyer, Past Masters Thompson, Blake, Farley, Walker, Souter, Martin, Brothers Cartwright, Bleckerton, Shrimpton, J. Thorp, Hosken, Rev. T. Russell, Gardner, Brockles, Thurland, Bruton, Ramsford, Hope, Stronghill, Drinkwater, J. Round, &c. &c. The dinner was served up in excellent style by Mr. Ansell, the host of the Harcourt Arms, and, under the able presidency of the W.M., a very delightful evening was spent. The admirable manner in which the W.M. presides over this lodge, and the success which has attended his efforts, is evidenced by the fact that, since his election to the post, fourteen brethren have joined the lodge, and we understand that there will be a still further accession at the next meeting; altogether the lodge is in a very flourishing state, and reflects great credit on the province.

NEWPORT.—On Thursday, the 24th ult., the first stone of the new church of St. Thomas, Newport, J.W., was laid by H.R.H. Prince Albert, assisted by the Bishop of Winchester, and led in due and ancient form by the Provincial Grand Master for the Isle of Wight, T. W. Fleming, Esq., whose chaplain for the occasion was the Rev. F. H. H. H. Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. The procession moved from the Town-hall at one o'clock; it was headed by a body of 250 freemasons, their banners being borne by Highland brethren from the barracks, clothed in their picturesque kilts and masonic aprons. The principal streets were beautifully adorned with triumphal arches and flags, and the arrangements on the ground were highly satisfactory. After the ceremony was concluded, about 180 gentlemen partook of the mayor's hospitality, in the shape of an excellent luncheon at the Town-hall. The chair was taken by the mayor, supported by the Bishop of Winchester and General Lord Dunsay. The celebrated band of the Royal Marines, from Portsmouth, was in attendance, and enhanced the proceedings by numerous popular and masonic airs.

PERMITH.—A few days since, R. G. Hindson, Esq., the W.M. of the lodge of "unanimity" of freemasons, at Permith, gave the brethren belonging to the lodge, about thirty in number, a day's pleasure and entertainment at his estate at Sandwick, in Martindale, on the southern margin of Ulswater lake. The party, after enjoying the pleasing and romantic scenery of the lake, sat down to an excellent dinner, the W.M. presiding. On the removal of the cloth, several toasts and sentiments peculiar to masonry, and other toasts were given and drunk, amongst which was the health of Mr. Hindson. During the afternoon the W.M. went through the whole of the sections in the second degree of the craft, in a very correct and impressive manner. The lecturer was occupied nearly two hours in the delivery. This was an arduous task, for freemasons, by their obligation, are not allowed to "prize, paint, stamp, staid, indent, inlay, emboss," or in any other way delineate the mysteries belonging to the craft, save that by verbal expression from memory.

—the sportsman having to contend with high winds and heavy rains throughout the whole week, especially on Wednesday last, when from morning to night it blew a complete tempest. Still those who took the moors were amply rewarded. The Earl of Lichfield was out two days grouse shooting in Strath-cannon Forest, when his lordship killed to his own gun forty brace the first day, and sixty the second. On the following day his lordship went out deer-stalking, and brought down a noble stag, with a beautifully set head of twelve points, which is generally known by the name of a 'royal deer.' Captain Baring was also out deer-stalking at the same time, and was very successful, killing a stag of ten points, a very fine-looking animal; and on the same day, a roebuck. The Right Hon. Lord Ashburton, Lochluchart, who has been out only for one day since the opening of the season, killed twenty-two and a half brace of grouse, and two mountain hares. It is said his lordship intends giving all sorts of game in his newly-purchased forest a year of jubilee. F. Pryor, Inversoul, and party of three guns, killed, on the 22nd, eighty brace of grouse. The Fanich and Greenard party, on the 23rd and 24th, to two guns had fifty-five brace of grouse, besides other game. On Little Wyvis, on the 18th, the sport was extraordinary. V. G. Vaughan, Esq., killed twenty-three brace of grouse, and 250 mountain hares!

of Saturday, the 13th, she struck upon a reef and became a wreck. Capt. Dribble, with some of the crew and passengers, then left the brig, and having reached the island, found upon it a number of those who had escaped from the wreck of the Topaz. Some others on board the Hygeia succeeded, after great difficulty, in gaining the land, but twenty-nine poor creatures who had taken to a raft were carried out to sea, and no doubt perished. On the schooner reaching the island, she took on board all she could—147 persons. She had only half a dozen casks of water to supply such a large number of famished creatures; her provisions were almost as scanty. However, she did the best under the circumstances to save the greatest amount of life; but the melancholy fact is to be told that when the Victoria left, 390 of the emigrants were to be seen on the broadside of the hull of the wreck under a burning sun, without a particle of food or a drop of water to sustain life. On the authorities at Hong Kong being informed of the catastrophe, application was made to the agent of one of the large steam navigation companies for the despatching of a steamer to the island; but although several were in the harbour, none were forwarded. It is said that the moderate sum of £1,000 was demanded before a vessel would be allowed to leave. By the last accounts, the poor creatures were still left on the wreck; but little had been done to save them, and it is feared that the next mail will bring tidings of their having been starved to death.

The second melancholy loss is supposed to be that of the British ship Lady Nugent, Captain Banerman, chartered by the Governor of Madras, for the conveyance of the staff and head-quarters of the 25th Regiment of Madras Native Infantry for Rangoon. The ship sailed from Madras on the 10th of May, having on board the following officers and men:—Lieutenant-Colonel Johnson, Lieutenant and Adjutant Daley, Lieutenant and Quartermaster King, Lieutenant Bumford, Assistant-Surgeon Simpson, one warrant-officer, six native commanding staff-officers, 247 rank and file, thirty-three public-officers, and fifty-six followers. The Brigadier-General Sir S. W. Steel, K.C.B., was to have accompanied the troops out, but he sailed in the Oriental steamer, and has since arrived at Rangoon. The Lady Nugent has been overdue for a considerable time, and it is known that she must have encountered a terrific monsoon three weeks after her departure. Other ships which have since sailed from Madras with troops for Rangoon have reached that port, and it is feared that the Lady Nugent has foundered with all on board. Later dates from Rangoon mention that the Government authorities had despatched steamers from that port, as also from Calcutta, in quest of the missing ship, but nothing had been seen or heard of her.

VARNA.—All the women are to be sent down by the first ship coming to Malta. Ladies are also to leave the camp.

The Countess of Westmoreland has returned to Vienna, from London.

Mr. and Mrs. Disraeli are entertaining a few select friends at Hughendon Manor, Bucks.

DEATH OF EDWARD TRUMAN GUY, ESQ., OF JAMAICA.—We have to record the death of the above named gentleman, who died at his residence (in Spanish Town), on the evening of the 12th inst., after a lingering illness.

METROPOLIS.

CITY COMMISSIONERS OF SEWERS.—On Tuesday the Commissioners assembled in the Guildhall for the first time since the holidays. Deputy Peacock in the chair. Mr. Daw, the chief clerk, stated that he had obtained the consent of the New River Company to supply water for purposes of cleansing courts and alleys, on demand of the inspector of nuisances. That consent had proved extremely advantageous, and had been acted upon vigorously, especially in the poor and crowded districts. It was stated that the slaughter-houses had been carefully examined, and Mr. B. Stubbing, of Leadenhall-market, and Mr. Sawtell, of Newgate-market, had been summoned before the magistrates for non-compliance with the rules of the commissioners, and severally fined in penalties and costs. The medical officer of health reported the cases of cholera, sixty-one in number, which had occurred in the whole City during the four weeks ending Monday, the 28th August, and stated the gratifying fact that, in consequence of the vast exertions of the commission, the dreadful disease had not appeared in a severe form in any of the districts of the City where, on former occasions, it had assumed the very worst features. The medical officer also stated that he had felt it to be his duty to adopt measures by which, in cases where owners of property in the City had not conformed to the orders of the court to amend their houses, and put them in proper condition, the neglect might undergo investigation before an inquest jury in case of a death from cholera on any such premises, and the responsibility be fixed upon the party answerable for such preventable evils. The commissioners most warmly expressed their admiration of the vigorous and skilful zeal of the medical officer of health. Several parties, whose premises had been neglected by themselves, and repaired by the commission, were ordered to be sued for costs.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH. (From the Registrar-General's Return.)

—In the week that ended Saturday the 26th, the number of deaths arising from all causes was 2,039. In the ten corresponding weeks of the years 1844—53, the average number was 1,114, which, if raised in proportion to increase of population, becomes 1,225. The prevailing epidemic has produced an excess, amounting to 814, above the corrected average. From cholera and deaths in last week were 847 while those from diarrhoea were 214. In the corresponding week of 1849, cholera carried off 1,272 persons. In the present summer its weekly progress is traced in the following numbers:—5, 26, 133, 390, 614, 729, and 817. In the first seven weeks of the epidemic of 1849 the deaths were 9, 22, 42, 49, 124, 152, 839. 2,763 persons have already died of cholera; and 1,706 of the number have fallen on the low grounds of London, out of 595,119 people whose dwellings are not ten feet above the Thames; 705 have died out of 648,619 on the higher ground, extending from ten to forty feet above the same level; and only 345 out of the 1,050,372 who live on the ground that has an elevation extending from 40 to 350 feet. The mortality from cholera to 100,000 living at the three elevations is 287 at the lowest, 109 at the middle, and 32 at the highest region. The knowledge of this fact must tend to a large increase of house-seekers on the higher ground, descending from Hampstead and Hornsey towards the squares abutting on the New-road.

EXTENSIVE ROBBERY AT MR. ALBERT SMITH'S.—On Monday the police received information of an extensive robbery committed at the house of Mr. Albert Smith (the popular author), No. 12, Great Percy-street, Tottenham-court-road. The property stolen comprised a quantity of silver plate, including spoons, forks, sugar-tongs, sauce-ladles, milk-ewer, teapots, &c.; also a brace of pistols, in a case lined with silver, a small clock three inches high, wearing apparel, &c. A reward has been offered for the apprehension of the thieves.

Our Opera-Glass.

HAYMARKET.—Senora Perea Nena, with her bright eyes and agile steps, is nightly adding to her own popularity, and, judging from the crowded houses, to the coffers of the merry manager of this theatre. A new ballet, entitled "The Gipsy Queen," has been brought out for Nena and her companions. The novelty is full of charming and picturesque grouping, achieved with a precision and faultless nicety which are the most remarkable characteristics of the Spanish dancers. The style of La Nena's dancing is entirely new to us; it is not the conventional Spanish dance of the stage that we see her execute, but one full of life, character, and originality. The animated dancing, bright costumes, and inspiring music, gained for the new ballet a most favourable reception, and its reputation has added to its success.

LYCEUM.—Mr. Henry Russell, the popular vocalist, commenced a campaign at this theatre on Monday evening. The entertainments consisted of an interesting discourse on emigration and slave life, plentifully interspersed with humorous anecdotes and songs. Mr. Russell, both as a singer and a composer, has contrived to gain a large share of the public favour, to which he is undoubtedly entitled. His compositions are apt and pleasing, and hence it is that we find every street-organ grinding out some one or more of his ditties, which are also great favourites with our al fresco vocalists. On the evening in question, the singer and lecturer was applauded to the echo by an audience who, quite regardless of the "melting moments," crowded the house in all parts. "Cheer, boys, cheer!" "The Maniac," "The Gambler's Wife," "I'm afloat," &c., were among the songs most especially in demand.

TURKISH EXHIBITION, ST. GEORGE'S GALLERY, HYDE-PARK-CORNER.—The numbers attending this very interesting Museum are still rapidly on the increase. Open daily from eleven till ten o'clock (Saturday excepted, when it closes at six), it dooms not to disappointment "our country cousins," who, when visiting the Pantheon or Polytechnic, complain so bitterly of these places closing at five for an hour or two, before the evening exhibition commences. But the Turkish exhibition rejoices in open doors all day, and is so easy of access by omnibus from all parts of the town, that already one continuing stream of sight-seers approaches its portals from "morn till dewy eve." The rooms in which the figures are to be seen are not wanting in space. Great care has, nevertheless, been taken by Messrs. Oscanyan and Aznavour to make the very most of it. Each "unbanned Turk" is liberally flanked by a crowd of compatriots, so that we may almost fancy ourselves perambulating the streets of sunny Stamboul. But while out-of-door life is here before us, a walk to the end of the room brings us to two odas of the harem, that forbidden ground, in which the several female figures cannot but rivet the attention of all visitors. The "dear little baby in swaddling clothes" is already a great pet with our English mammas and their unveiled daughters, while with the male portion, the stern janissaries and the dignified courtiers of Sultan Mahmoud carry off the palm. We presume, now that Omar Pasha is somewhat at leisure in Bucharest (Tchik Yusha), his "presentment" will be photographed, and his uniform, and favourite orders noted down for the benefit of the talented modellers of this Turkish Exhibition. We should much like to see Omar added to the groups already collected in St. George's Gallery. By-and-by, it is to be presumed, when the patronage of the public has partially reimbursed the enterprising proprietors, a few of the "trades" of Constantinople may find a niche in the exhibition. A pipe-shop would be attractive (and real cheriety-sticks might be sold there, by a veritable Stamboul, with great advantage), and all trades where Muslims use their toes as well as fingers might be added, as novelties to most of us Franks; and, Inshallah, some of these fine mornings we may moreover be gratified, in the refreshment-room, with the unrivalled yahat-tokoun, &c., &c., instead of merely English cakes and biscuits. Ladies look for these oriental rarities, and Messrs. Oscanyan and Aznavour are just the men to arrange for their not being disappointed. Bonâ fide sherbet would have a great "call," for, in the present weather, visitors are as thirsty as a Turkish tiler in Ramazan. But without Omar Pasha, or cherry-sticks, or sherbets, the Turkish Museum deserves immediate support; and if any of our readers have not yet visited it, we strongly urge them to do so at once. They will thank us for the recommendation.

THE PANOPTICON, LEICESTER-SQUARE.—The fountain "at high pressure" is still all attractive at this elegant establishment; and while the great organ and Diatin's flugel-horns delight adults, "young England" seems to prefer the diver, whose writhing under water is daily a subject of astonishment. Among the shops in the galleries, Farley's (filled with models of yachts) seems a favourite resort. The sewing-machine, and other scientific arts and mysteries, claim careful attention; and the lecture-rooms are already popular.

BRITISH MUSEUM.—This museum has been closed for the autumn vacation. It will be re-opened to the public on Friday, the 8th of September. The hours of admission, during the months of September and October, will be from ten till five, and for the remainder of the year from ten till four.

FESTIVAL OF THE THREE CHOIRS.—The forthcoming meeting of the three choirs of Worcester, Hereford, and Gloucester, at Worcester, opens on the 5th of September. The festival is held once in three years at each of the cathedral cities named above, in aid of a society for the relief of widows and orphans of clergy of the three dioceses, who may be left unprovided for. The festival will occupy four days, viz., the 5th, 6th, 7th, and 8th of September, and will consist, as heretofore, of performances of sacred music each morning at the cathedral, and of secular music each evening, except Friday, at the college-hall—a noble concert-room attached to the cathedral, formerly the quæsten-hall of the monks, but now the place of education for the boys of the college school. The nave of the cathedral is being fitted up with seats and an orchestra, facing which will be a spacious gallery reaching to the west window. The college-hall is also being fitted up as a concert-room. A grand ball is announced for Friday night, and this will wind up the festival week. The festival will be opened with full cathedral service and a sermon on the Tuesday morning, with a concert in the evening. On Wednesday morning Mendelssohn's oratorio of "Pilgrimage" will be given; on Thursday morning the oratorio of the "Creation" and the "Last Judgment;" and on Friday morning the "Messiah." Concerts will also be given on Wednesday and Thursday evenings.

SOUTHAMPTON THEATRE.—We have much pleasure in announcing that the season will commence on Monday, Sept. 4. Mr. Holmes, who has so ably and successfully conducted it for the last two years, again assumes the reins of management, and we feel that his exertions will be crowned with that success he so richly deserves. His company, we understand, is unusually strong, both numerically and in talent, and the lovers of the drama may anticipate a series of treats of very high order. We are glad to learn that Mr. G. J. Hall will again preside in the orchestra, which will be full and efficient. A limited number of season tickets will be issued by Mr. Collings at the box office.

GRISI AND MARIO.—On Sunday a large company of musical gentlemen are to sail to the Hook, with a view of meeting these distinguished artists, and welcoming them with a serenade. A steamboat has been chartered for the occasion. A sea serenade, with a chorus of boisterous waves, will be a grand affair.—The Spirit of the Times, Aug. 19.

LIVERPOOL.—At the solicitation of a number of the lovers of the Shakespearian Drama at Liverpool, Mr. Vandenhoff, the distinguished tragedian has, for a time, abandoned his intention of retiring from the stage.

WINCHESTER.—A large company of equestrians made a public entry into Winchester on Monday, and in the evening they gave a performance in a field near the Lawn, which was attended by nearly 2,000 persons. The proprietors were the celebrated American rider Hernandez, Eaton Stone, and Newsome.

CHARD.—COOKE'S CIRCUS.—Mr. Cooke paid us a visit on Saturday last, and much gratified us by his magnificent allegorical procession. He gave two performances, admitting the poor school-children gratuitously to the morning entertainments. In the evening the spacious hippodrome was nearly filled, and the spectators departed highly pleased with the performances of men, women, children, horses, and monkeys.

ITALIAN OPERA, TORONTO, CANADA, Aug. 10.—The opera is entirely successful; Madame Rosa Devries was received with enthusiastic applause, and Signors Vietti and Taffanelli were also loudly applauded. The opera announced for Friday next, is Donizetti's tragic opera of "Lucia di Lammermoor," which contains some of the most exquisite operatic music that was ever composed.—Colonist.

SAN ACCIDENT.—We learn from our contemporaries that on Monday evening, while a party of actors from New York were bathing in the surf at Coney Island, one of them, Mr. Joseph Brelsford, attempted to dive from the shoulder of one of his companions, and struck his head on the bottom with such force as to break his neck. Mr. B. had but lately arrived in New York, to await the opening of the new theatre on Broadway, of which company he was to have been the leading man. He was well known in the South and West. He leaves a wife to mourn her sad bereavement.

His remains were escorted by a large number of his brother actors from the Coney Island boat yesterday, to the Camden and Amboy Depot, to be taken to Philadelphia for interment.—New York Spirit of the Times.

MADRID, August 22.—The bull-fight for the benefit of the wounded, widows, and orphans of the late revolutions, took place yesterday. The thermometer was at 32 deg. Reaumur, the bull-ring crammed with spectators, and heat indescribable. When quite full, the receipts of the Madrid Plaza de Toros are said to be about £1,000. All the best bullfighters in Spain were yesterday in attendance. The monias (knots of ribands that are stuck on the back of the bull) were contributed by the Countess of Lucena and other ladies of rank, and were remarkably beautiful. The toreros, and everybody concerned in the business, gave their services gratis. The bulls were all presents. The Queen did not go to the fight, but sent a handsome contribution to the fund.

PROVINCIAL.

BRISTOL.—A day or two since Messrs. Evans and Arrow-smith, of Bristol, received at their establishment a sheet of paper weighing three cwt., and measuring 2,784 feet in length, or more than half a mile.

LIVERPOOL.—The committee of the Liverpool Exchange News-room, acting upon a memorial of the shareholders, had given notice that on and after the 2nd inst. the Exchange News-room will be closed at five p.m. on Saturday, the newspapers being removed at four p.m., except on the occasion of a foreign arrival, when the room will be kept open until eight p.m.

MELBOURNE ATHENEUM.—In consequence of the races at Derby, and other circumstances, the committee have decided upon postponing the opening festivities.

SCOTLAND.

FRIGATE IN LEITH-ROADS.—The frigate Indefatigable, of fifty guns, Captain Hope, arrived and anchored in Leith-roads on Thursday forenoon. This is the largest man-of-war, says the Edinburgh Courier, that has anchored in Leith-roads since the Benbow.

THE SCOTTISH RIGHTS MOVEMENT.—We learn that the Earl of Eglinton has accepted an invitation, presented to him on Monday last by a deputation from the Council of the Association for the Vindication of Scottish Rights, to dine with the members; and the banquet is expected to come off in the City-hall, Glasgow, on the 4th of October.—Glasgow Constitutional.

DOGS.—Orders have been received, says the Glasgow Herald, from the Board of Inland Revenue, to enforce most rigidly the levying and recovery of the duty on dogs. Those parties keeping dogs, if they fail to pay the duty, and have no effects from the sale of which the duty can be recovered, will have personal warrants for their apprehension taken out against them. Any parties having dogs, and failing to return them for assessment, will have all the penalties strictly enforced against them.

THE ROYAL NORTHERN YACHT CLUB REGATTA.—INTERRUPTION OF THE SPORTS BY STORM.—LARGES, Thursday, August 24.—To-day this beautiful village and district were all expectancy; but the morning broke sullenly, and it blew quite a gale from the west, driving in a very angry swell upon the beach, rising sometimes seven feet in height, and lashing in wild fury over the quay. The scene at the quay-head assumed a faint resemblance to a fair, for there were some dozen or more of the tribes of the wandering foot who perambulate fairs with gingerbread, and nut-stands, and shooting-galleries. The fine band of the Queen's Own, from Glasgow, appeared in regiments. The villagers and summer sojourners turned out to a man, woman, and child. The Earl of Eglinton, who is commodore of the Royal Northern Yacht Club, was duly forward at his post to discharge the duties of his office; but all could not control the elements, which forbade the club's proceedings set down in the programme. Such of the yachts as were hovering in the offing betook them to a safe anchorage elsewhere; and throughout the day the club-yacht Orion was the only craft left riding at anchor in the bay, and that in a very troubled sea, one-half of her keel being occasionally seen out of the surge. In this state of the weather few arrived seaward in expectation of witnessing the races, for the result must have been anticipated at a distance. Those who did come were not only disappointed, but experienced anything but a pleasant sail, as the steamers pitched and tossed about in a very unruly way, and, indeed, had some difficulty in touching at the quay at all. Happily the high wind was accompanied with but little rain; and the scene looked bright and bracing, with a total absence of vessels, except when a ship was seen now and then sending up the firm under close-reefed topsails. The principal prize, value £70, is an elegant fun simile of the Warwick Vase, in silver. In the afternoon a large party dined in the Bri-bane Arms, where the chair was occupied by the Earl of Eglinton.—North British Mail.

IRELAND.

CAPTAIN ELLIS, R.N., Emigration Officer at Limerick received by last mail an official letter from Mr. Buchanan superintending the emigration department at Quebec, stating that he never knew such a busy year as this, having applications from every section of the Canadian provinces, complaining of the impossibility of getting sufficient labour women to gather in the hay crop, and the wages offered so high as 6s. to 7s. per day for harvest labourers. The number of emigrants landed to the 1st of August inst. was 12,000 over the number to the same period of last year, and yet there is not a working man or woman unemployed. Many families at both sides of the Atlantic having lost money to a large amount by the risk of transmission in letter-orders from Canada upon parties in Ireland, the agent general for emigration at Quebec has, with the sanction of his Excellency the Governor-general, Lord Elgin, guaranteed henceforward the proper disposal of all sums deposited at the government emigration office, Quebec, for bringing out to America the friends or relatives of the party making the deposit. "The plan is that this department should receive in deposit any sum of money parties in this country (Canada) sending for their friends may be disposed to remit, for which they would receive a certificate, which would entitle the holder to the amount, on arrival at Quebec, of the parties in whose favour it was granted. The parties named in the certificate will have their choice of port of departure, as also selection of ship, and can arrange for their rate of passage."

MARLBOROUGH-STREET.

Lord Frankfort has been repeatedly at this court and at the police-station to complain of certain grievances which he believes are inflicted upon him by a general conspiracy of everybody to poison his food and to insult him wherever he goes. On Tuesday his lordship had an interview with Mr. Hardwick, and left some printed papers, one headed "Certificates," the other "To the Right Hon. the Lords Spiritual and Temporal of the United Kingdom in Parliament assembled." The certificates were signed "William Rutter," and they stated that Lord Frankfort laboured under indisposition, in consequence of somebody having introduced deleterious sedatives into his food. The memorial to Parliament set forth that he, the Right Hon. Lord Raymond, Viscount Frankfort de Maphinorend, had to complain of a long series of continued and most aggravated grievances and injuries, which had fatally destroyed his domestic arrangements, made considerable inroads into his property, and endangered his health. All these things were effected through the medium of corrupted domestics, and by all the means which active, vindictive, powerful, and opulent persons could bring into operation; and, as he had not been able to obtain either attention or redress from the proper authorities, he prayed their lordships to allow him to prove his charges before a committee of the whole House, as no other way was left of putting a stop to these outrages daily perpetrated against the peace and honour of his relatives, not excepting females, by persons destitute of moral and humane feelings, who were running riot in the success of a disgraceful career, which had hitherto evaded the law, bid defiance to justice, and was sheltered under the cloak of influence. Lord Frankfort declared to the magistrate that he could not walk the streets or ride in an omnibus without being insulted and spit at by the public at large.—Mr. Hardwick suggested a temporary residence on the continent.—Lord Frankfort asserted that the continental people were even more bitter enemies than the people of England.—His lordship having retired, Mr. Hardwick gave the papers to Inspector Lester, who said he was no stranger to his lordship's troublesome delusions.

MARYLEBONE.

MURDER.—An unusual degree of excitement prevailed in the immediate neighbourhood of this court, in consequence of its having become generally known that a woman was in custody for the murder of an infant intrusted to her care.—Julia Barnes said: I am a married woman, and reside at 10, Fleet-street, Paddington. The prisoner, Sophia Knight, lives in the same house, and occupies the back kitchen. Last night, at a quarter to eleven, I was in the yard and heard the prisoner make use of abusive and shameful language, but I knew not then towards whom it was directed. I looked through the window and saw her ill-using the baby.—Mr. Long: You mean the baby whom she is charged with having killed?—Witness: Yes, Sir; it is a nurse child.—Mr. Long: Now state particularly all that you know about this shocking affair.—Witness: In the first instance I heard the prisoner knocking something about, but I did not hear any cries. When I looked through the window, as I have stated, the prisoner was sitting up in bed with the baby in her arms. She was knocking it about with her hands very hard upon the head and face. I called another person living in the house, and she witnessed the cruel treatment. Shortly afterwards the prisoner's own daughter, eleven years old, came out of the room and got a basin of water. I asked her what her mother had been doing to the baby, and she made no reply. I went into the kitchen and saw the prisoner sitting up in bed holding the baby. Its face was hidden by the sheet; and I heard a rattling noise in the throat, which satisfied me that it was dying. I told the prisoner what I had seen, and that I should give evidence against her.—Mr. Long: What did she say to that?—Witness: She said she had not struck the child. I told her I had been in the yard and saw her do it, upon which she said, after some hesitation, "The child dirtied itself and made me angry, and I then struck it. I'll get up directly and put it into a warm bath." I sent down immediately to the landlady, and in a few minutes the prisoner came out of her room with the child in her arms, and she took it to the hospital, and I followed her to the door. She came out shortly without the child, and, upon my asking her about it, she told me it was dead. I saw the nurse at the hospital, and she said the prisoner had told her that the baby had had a fall.—Mr. Long: Did the prisoner hear what the nurse had said to you?—Witness: She did, Sir.—Mr. Long: Did she make any observation at the time?—Witness: She did not. She seemed much the worse for drink.—Mr. Long: Do you know anything more?—Witness: The prisoner stated her willingness to be given into custody, and she was given in charge by a man named Matthews, another lodger in the house.—Prisoner: Have you ever heard me say an unkind word to the baby?—Witness: Yes, very often.—Mary Anne Cook, 1 Lodge at No. 10, Fleet-street. Mrs. Barnes came to me, and I went with her to the back window looking into the kitchen. I saw the prisoner strike the baby twice very hard indeed.—Prisoner: Can you swear that you ever knew me to be unkind to the baby?—Witness: I have heard you use bad language towards it, and you have many times said that you wished it was dead.—Mr. Long asked if any one from the hospital was present?—Mr. Lawrence Omerod here stood forward, and was sworn.—Mr. Long: What are you, Sir?—Witness: I am house-surgeon at the St. Mary's-hospital, Paddington. The child was brought into the hospital last night by the prisoner, who told me that it had fallen out of bed while she was absent from her room.—Mr. Long: Did you examine it?—Witness: I did, Sir.—Mr. Long: Describe what you saw.—Witness: I found that the child was bleeding from the mouth and nose. It was in a miserably emaciated state. It had a bruise on the left side of the mouth. It was dead when I saw it. The prisoner asked me what she was to do with the child, and I told her she must leave it where it was.—Mr. Long: Did the prisoner then say anything?—Witness: She did not, Sir, but she cried very much. She went away, and was afterwards brought back to the hospital by persons who lodged at the same house as the prisoner. She (the prisoner) was then conveyed to the station-house in the custody of a policeman. I subsequently examined the deceased infant, and the conclusion I come to is, that from the neglect and consequent weak condition of the child, the blows, as sworn to by the first two witnesses, had caused its death. I observed a great many old bruises on the child's head.—Inspector Jackson, D. in reply to a question from the magistrate, said, that he was not as yet prepared with witnesses to state what was the name of the child, or who were its parents.—Mr. Long told the prisoner, who had nothing to say, that she would be committed for the murder of the child; but, as another witness was necessary, and as a coroner's inquest would be held, and a post mortem examination of the body made, she would be sent to the House of Detention and brought up again on Tuesday next.

BOW-STREET.

Mr. Benjamin Sloman, carpenter and machinist, of the Theatre Royal Drury-lane, appeared before Mr. Henry to answer a charge of wilful perjury, preferred against him by Madame Caradori, the prima donna of the opera company lately performing at that theatre.—Mr. Lewis, solicitor, of Ely-place, conducted the prosecution, and Mr. Lewis, of Golden-square, attended for the defendant.—From the opening statement of the case, it appeared that Madame Caradori and Signor Pavesi had engaged to sing at Drury-lane on the re-opening of the theatre "under new management," and they were announced to appear on Monday evening, the 21st of August, in "Lucresia Borgia." On the previous Saturday, however, the defendant made an affidavit at Judge's Chambers, in which he asserted that Madame Caradori had informed him of her intention to discontinue singing at Drury-lane, and to return forthwith to Germany, the Monday following being specified as the day in which she had resolved to leave England. Upon this alleged avowal the deponent founded his claim to have Madame Caradori and Signor Pavesi held to bail, in respect of certain debts said to have been incurred by them, and which, it was represented, they were designing to avoid by quitting the country. The sum of £12. 16s. 6d. was claimed by deponent for services performed, and, in consequence of the statements deposited to in the affidavit, Baron Martin granted an order for the immediate apprehension of the complainants. The execution of the order was deferred until half-past eleven o'clock on Saturday night, at which time Madame Caradori was arrested on leaving the residence of Mr. Jarrett, the managing director of the company, in Alfred-place. She was taken direct to a sponging-house, and, it being too late to get assistance, was detained in custody the whole of the following Sunday (the 20th), having only obtained her liberation at a late hour on that day by paying the amount of the alleged debt and costs, not a farthing of which was due from her.—Mr. Henry said that neither in his experience when in practice, nor as a magistrate, had he ever heard of the sudden apprehension of a person for a debt without previous notice of the claim; and he could not conceive any set of circumstances that would make such a course justifiable. However, it was obvious that the witnesses could not all be examined that day, and the case must therefore stand over to another day. In the meantime he strongly advised the defendant to endeavour to effect a settlement.—The inquiry was accordingly adjourned.

HAMMERSMITH.

THE AGENT TO THE SPANISH DANCERS AND THE CABREY.—Mr. Thomas Henry, a tall, military-looking man, between thirty and forty years of age, with black mustache, who was described as the London agent to the Spanish dancers now performing at the Haymarket Theatre, was brought before Mr. Paynter, on a warrant, charged with having refused to pay a cab fare.—The defendant, who resided at No. 2, Claremont-cottages, Port-street, Kensington, had been summoned by two cabs for their fares for the hire of their vehicles, and, in consequence of his not appearing to answer them, the worthy magistrate granted a warrant for his apprehension.—Barley, the summoning officer, now informed his worship that the cabman who was mentioned in the warrant was not present, as he was out with his cab; but the second man, whose case was not gone into, but who was told to appear on the day the defendant was brought up, was in attendance, and ready to go on with this case.—Mr. Paynter then directed the defendant to stand in the defendant's place, and not in the dock, to answer the summons of Samuel Tapel, under No. 8, 137, who claimed 20s. for the hire of his cab on the 8th ult.—The defendant said he supposed the sum was due, but wished to state that the cabman had never applied to him for the money. The fact was that he had brought the Spanish dancers over to this country, and he had not been able to get any money; and, therefore, he required a little time to pay the cabman.—The complainant said he had applied several times for his money, but he had never been able to see the defendant. He was hired on Friday week last, and took the defendant to a great number of places. He was afterwards told to charge by the hour, and he took the defendant home about two o'clock the next morning. He was with him ten hours, for which he had charged 20s. The defendant told him to call at an hotel for the money on the next day; but it was not left for him, and he had not been able to get it.—Mr. Paynter told the defendant that he should not hire cabs unless he was able to pay for them. He ordered him to pay the 20s., and 9d. costs, or twenty-one days' imprisonment.—The defendant asked to be allowed time to pay the money, as he had been brought away from his home unprepared with the amount.—Mr. Paynter could not give him any time, and said if the fare and costs were not then paid he would be sent to prison. The worthy magistrate also informed the defendant that when he came out of prison the warrant for the other cabman's claim would have to be heard.—The defendant was then locked up in default, and was afterwards removed to prison in the police-van.

FRANCE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, Thursday, Aug. 31.

The Emperor—Dulness of Paris—The epidemic in France—Versailles anti-choleraic—Gaming-house seizure—Grand Opera—M. Perin's resignation—Reported death of the Czar.

THE Emperor arrived on Monday evening from Biarritz, and though everything like a formal or public reception was discontinued, he was received with genuine marks of respect, though none of that hoisterous popularity which prevails on such occasions in England. It is understood that his Majesty will return to Biarritz immediately after the reviews at St. Omer, which commence on the 5th of September, and at which it is hoped and expected his Royal Highness Prince Albert will be a visitor, with his uncle the King of the Belgians, and the Portuguese Prince. The Emperor remains in the South, in excellent health; and will probably not return to Paris until the cholera, of which her Majesty is said to entertain an almost superstitious horror, has entirely subsided.

Here we are beyond expression dull in the way of news. The Debats boldly fills up three or four columns with an essay on our old friend "The Vicar of Wakefield," and an examination into the genius of Goldsmith; while the Constitutionnel, bolder still, actually has continued for many days a "History of the Art of Printing." When these things are, it is in vain to look for news of much interest from Paris, which usually gay city, somehow or other, is not just now like itself. In the first place, it has not been so void of visitors within memory. Whether it be the war, the prevailing epidemic, or, as some say, the Exhibition next year, or whatever other cause, our hotel-keepers have not witnessed so few arrivals within their portals, at this season, for years—an absence howlled by this disinterested class with a sincerity which there is not the least reason to doubt.

The cholera has had some increase of victims in Paris since the late fête—a fact not to be wondered at, seeing the manner in which crowds of workmen and their families surrounded the many stands of melons and plums: the first not ripe, and the latter disgustingly rotten—as, indeed, is nearly all the fruit of the present season. These they either voraciously devoured upon the spot, or carried to the nearest wine-shops, and there eat them with the accompaniment of wretchedly sour wines. From that date the cholera returns, which had greatly diminished since the end of July, have been again on the increase, particularly in the hospitals, where the deaths have more than doubled. The pestilence still rages violently in many of the country parts of France; and several towns which, by some singular eventuality, had hitherto escaped its ravages, have now unfortunately lost their enviable immunity, and suffered severely. Strange to say, the exception still continues in favour of Versailles, which, though contiguous to the capital, has been so fortunate as hitherto to escape the malady throughout all its several visitations; even in that of 1832, when the deaths in Paris rose to 2,000 a day, not a single death from the disease having been registered in that town, although its near neighbour, St. Cloud, suffered dreadfully, both then and subsequently.

In the remote parts of the country, the dread of this disease has led to some strange delusions among the populace, which show that, if the schoolmaster "in England" be "abroad," he has certainly not visited those districts of France. Several quiet lovers of the picturesque, travelling with their portfolios and sketch-books, have been seized by the ignorant peasantry, and carried before the magistrates, in some cases severely ill-used by the mob. Being unknown in many parts of France, a prima facie proof of guilt with the rabble, and was recently strongly illustrated. This besotted ignorance prevails also in places where something more civilized might be looked for. For example, we find the following in accounts from St. Didier, a town in the vicinity of Lyons:—A tax-collector, being on his rounds in a neighbouring village, came to a pond where some women were washing. He stopped for a moment, doubtless gazing at some of the fuir laurandières, when the "nymphs of the tub," fancying his object was "to poison the water," and thus spread the cholera in the locality, surrounded him, and, like so many Mémoires, dragged him before the mayor, who immediately ordered him to be lodged in gaol, whence he was only released some two hours after, when a gendarme succeeded in convincing this French edition of Justice Shallow of his mistake.

The battue against gamblers and private gaming-tables still continues. A club, called Le Cercle des Etrangers, held in the Rue de Rivoli, which was considered as of too high a class to be subject to the visitation of the police, was entered a few nights ago, and after some pour parler the door was broken upon; all within was found dark and silent. The birds had flown—but not far. Some had sought to elude observation by stepping out on the balcony, while others, who had mounted the roof of the mansion, led the officers a grand chase "a la Grimalkin," over tiles and chimney-pots, in the hope of finding the means of escape. But in vain; all were captured, and compelled to give their names and addresses. The furniture was seized, and the owner of the house, a dame de haute volée in this way, will be prosecuted. A few Englishmen were among the parties discovered on this occasion.

The Grand Opera re-opened last night, after a two months' recess, with Donizetti's "Favorita," the rites performed by doubles, with the exception of the heroine, in which Mme. Stoltz made her first appearance, after an absence of four or five years, during which Time has not been standing still with her. Her energy, and even her voice—spoiled as it is by training a magnificent contralto into a soi-disant soprano—are still wonderfully effective. She was well received. The part taken by the real public in the welcome accorded her is not, however, easily determined. It being the first night of the new operatic management, the "Knights of the Lustre," cul-de-lampe Zu Claque, put forth all their tact and experience, and certainly acquitted themselves in a manner that must have been highly satisfactory to their noble and ministerial directors, for everything went off with apparent enthusiasm; though, with the exception of Mme. Stoltz, a super performance of the opera has never been heard in Paris.

On Sunday the Hippodrome, now the Barrière de l'Etoile, was opened for the first time with pantomimic performances, after the manner of Old Astley. The vast extent of the area devoted to horse-riding being joined to the stage, enables them to introduce large bodies of troops, and the Siege de Silistrie—a second edition of the piece brought out in the Champ de Mars at the late fête—went off much better than on that occasion. But still it is not quite the thing. The fact is, the world now requires something new in this style of performance, which has been standing still while everything else has been advancing.

M. Perin lately received the privilege of the Théâtre Lyrique, in conjunction with that of the Opera Comique, but has been obliged to resign it, in consequence of opposition from the Dramatic Authors' Society to the arrangement.

A few days ago some sensation was created on the Boulevard des Italiens by a swarm of itinerant orators offering for sale, unquos clamor: "La mort de l'Empereur de Russie, avec le détail de ses crimes envers son peuple et son armée; ça ne coûte qu'un sou." The news was so extraordinary that crowds surrounded them instantly, and their wares were rapidly disposed of. Judge, however, of the surprise and indignation of the purchasers on discovering themselves to have been "dune brown," the "Empereur de Russie" in question being "Paul I." and not Nicholas, a clever news-monger having cleverly availed himself of the present Russophobia to cheat the public of their superfluous coppers.

THE BOMARSUND PRISONERS.

The Moniteur contains the following imperial decree, promulgating the convention between France and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, for regulating the disposal of the prisoners of war:—

"Napoleon, by the grace of God and the national will, Emperor of the French. To all present and to come, greeting:—

"On the report of our Minister Secretary of State for the Department of Foreign Affairs, we have decreed and do decree as follows:—

"Art. 1. A convention having been concluded on the 10th of May, of the present year, between France and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland for the regulation of the disposal of the prisoners who might be captured during the course of the war, and the acts of ratification having been exchanged on the 20th of the same month, the said convention, of the following tenor, will receive full and entire execution:—

"CONVENTION.

"His Majesty the Emperor of the French, and her Majesty the Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, being desirous to regulate the disposal of prisoners who may be captured during the course of the war in which their Majesties are engaged in common, have named as their Plenipotentiaries for this object, that is to say:—

"His Majesty the Emperor of the French, M. Alexandre Colonna, Count Walewski, Grand Officer of the Imperial Order of the Legion of Honour, Grand Cross of the Order of St. Xavier of the Two Sicilies, Grand Cross of the Order of Danebrog of Denmark, Grand Cross of the Order of Merit of St. Joseph of Tuscany, &c., his Ambassador at the Court of Her Britannic Majesty.

"And her Majesty the Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, the Right Hon. George William Frederick Earl of Clarendon, Baron Hyde of Hinton, Peer of the United Kingdom, Knight of the Most Noble Order of the Garter, Knight Grand Cross of the Most Hon. Order of the Bath, Principal Secretary of State of her Britannic Majesty for Foreign Affairs.

"The above having exchanged their full powers, found in due form, have agreed upon the following arrangement:—

"Art. 1. The prisoners who may be captured in the course of the present war shall be, as far as possible, divided between the two countries in the following manner:—

"In case one of the two countries should have had to maintain a greater number of prisoners, we shall have had a certain number during a longer time under its charge, there shall be drawn up, every three months, an account of the excess of expense resulting from such charge, and the repayment of the half of such excess shall be made by the Government of the other country.

"Art. 2. Instructions shall be subsequently arranged between the two Governments, in order to make known to the military and naval officers the places or ports to which the prisoners are to be sent.

"Art. 3. If a place of dépôt for prisoners should be fixed upon out of the possessions of one of the two countries, the expense of it shall be supported by the two Governments; but the advance shall be made by the Government which may have appointed its officers to the care of the establishment.

"Art. 4. Whenever the two Governments shall agree with the enemy to make an exchange of prisoners, no distinction shall be made between the respective subjects who have fallen into the power of the enemy; but their liberation shall be stipulated for according to the priority of their capture, except under special circumstances, of which the two Governments reserve to themselves the natural right to judge.

"Art. 5. The present convention shall be ratified, and the ratifications shall be exchanged at London within ten days, or sooner if possible.

"In faith of which the respective Plenipotentiaries have signed the present convention and affixed their seals to it.

"Done at London, the 10th day of the month of May, in the year of our Lord 1854.

THE EMPEROR ARRIVED IN PARIS at half-past six o'clock on Monday evening, without escort. The Empress stays at Biarritz until the middle of September. General Baraguay d'Hilliers is raised to the dignity of a Marshal of France, "in consideration of the eminent services which he has rendered in the various circumstances of his military life."

THE TURKISH ARMY OF EUROPE still advances. The following telegraphic despatches have been received:—"Bucharest, August 23: Omar Pasha entered Bucharest yesterday, at the head of 25,000 men, with thirty pieces of cannon. He was received by Cantakuzino and the Grand Boyards. The thronging was tremendous. The young Prince Stourdza, who is in the Turkish service, rode behind him. The troops, in blue coats, white pantaloons, and red fez, made an imposing appearance. Omar Pasha allowed the troops, among which is a small division of French, to defile past him, and then went to the Dabrutscha summer residence, his quarters. The army of Asia has lost Bayazid, but at Kars both sides claim the victory in the recent battle. One English regiment could turn the scale."

COLONIAL.

OCEAN POSTAGE.—From a return just issued to an address of the House of Commons it appears that the uniform sixpenny rate of postage has already been carried into effect as regards the correspondence between the United Kingdom and the following colonies:—The whole of the British West Indies (the Turks Islands excepted), Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, Newfoundland, Bermuda, Malta, Gibraltar, Ceylon, St. Helena, and the Gold Coast. Arrangements have been made for extending the measure, on the 1st of October next, to New South Wales, Victoria, and South Australia.

LETTERS FOR THE COLONIES.—The sixpenny colonial rate has been, from the 1st of September, extended to letters to and from this country, and the Danish West India Islands of St. Thomas, St. Croix, and St. John. This will be a great boon, as St. Thomas is the rendezvous of all the Royal Mail Company's steamers in the West Indies. The following notice was issued by the Postmaster-General:—"General Post-office, August, 1854: On and from the 1st of September, the packet rate of postage on letters addressed to St. Thomas, or any other Danish colony in the West Indies, will be reduced to:—When not exceeding half an ounce in weight, 6d.; when exceeding half an ounce, and not exceeding one ounce, 1s.; when exceeding one ounce and not exceeding two ounces, 2s.; and so on, according to the scale for charging inland letters. The postage of these letters may be paid in advance, or they may be forwarded unpaid, at the option of the senders."

GOLD FIELDS.

The Nouveau Monde Gold Mining Company have received advice from Mr. J. Arthur Phillips, their inspector in California, dated Mount Ophir, July 6, in which he states:—"The No. 3 cross-cut at Josephine has at the present time been driven about twenty feet into a large irregular vein, consisting of mixed quartz and greenstone. A sample fairly taken from the quartz obtained from this lead was carefully assayed; but although slight indications of gold were in every instance observed, the quantity found was too small for weighing, and it consequently follows that the amount of metal present is below one dwt. per ton. Samples taken from the ores spalled at the Spring Mine vein, yielded barely 1/2 dwt. of fine gold per ton."

"These results sufficiently prove that the quartz from these localities is for every commercial purpose entirely valueless; but since in many of the veins in this country the gold is far from equally diffused through the mass, it has been thought best to continue the Josephine cross-cut a few feet, in order, if possible, to cut through the lode; should it however present the appearance of a large eruptive mass, as in the case of the quartz in the pine tree cross-cut, the end will be abandoned after driving some few feet further."

Medical.

CURE FOR DIARRHŒA.—Two drachms of powder of chalk, two drachms of powder of kino, two drachms of gum arabic, two drachms of cinnamon, six grains of opium powder. Mix these together, and throw a teaspoonful of the mixture into half a tumbler of cold water. Of this take a tablespoonful every half hour, till cured.

One Letter-Bag.

DEATH OF MR. COLLIER.

Sir,—I am sorry to inform you of the death of Mr. Collier, of Bow-hage, one of the best otter-hunters in England. He succeeded to the pack of Mr. Aysford, and few men could handle a spear or hunt an otter better than Mr. Collier. It is said that he was struck by lightning, and lived only a few hours after. His bounds were excellent in their work; they hunted the Axe, the Tone, the Culm, Exe, Teign, and other rivers in Devon and Somerset. Few such men were to be met with, and it will be some time before we see his like again.—Yours truly,

RANGER.

RAILWAY ACCIDENTS.

Sir,—Having just returned from the continent, I hear, for the first time, of the truly lamentable accident on the South-eastern railway, on Monday week. How is it, that with a perfectly practicable apparatus for stopping a train within fifty yards, known and "rewarded by a jury at the Exhibition of 1851," the jealousy of "the profession" should be allowed to prevent its use? "Lee's Patent Brake" is the invention of a man who is not an engineer, and, though it was most severely tried, it never failed. Surely there ought to be, somewhere, power to enforce its application.

I have, on a former occasion of the same melancholy kind, written to the Railway Department of the Board of Trade, I regret to add, without any good result. Perhaps the powerful voice of the press might have some effect, if it took the matter up.—I am, Sir, your very obedient servant,

JOHN COLES FOURDRISIER, Solicitor.
2, Bush-lane, 29th August, 1854.

NEEDLE RIFLES.

Sir,—I cannot agree with "Caledonia" that the danger of shooting bullets "is equally applicable to all fire-arms." Certainly, shot is not so dangerous as a bullet, for ordinary sporting shots would be comparatively harmless at seventy or eighty yards, whereas the bullets, so small even as 100 to the pound, which killed Captain Lacy's rabbits at eighty-three yards, would have injured a man or cattle at 200 yards. With deference to Captain Lacy's authority, I think that even the report of a third of a lady's thimbleful of powder would be sufficiently loud, particularly across a ravine, to disturb at eighty-three yards the rest of the rabbits, so as to give ample time to load a single-barrelled rifle, and thereby to do away with the utility of a revolver; and, as I said before, and repeat, revolvers are not safe even when well made, and absolutely dangerous when got up cheaply; nor can any complicated fire-arms be safe. I agree with Captain Lacy that no shot-gun, however large, would have done such execution at eighty-three yards as to kill six rabbits out of seven, to say nothing of the waste of ammunition and the noise of the explosion; and, therefore, "Caledonia" seems to have established the superiority of these small bullets in a pea-rifle to any shot that could be used for a sitting shot, except in regard to the danger—a point I cannot yield. But as an impudent prisoner said the other day to one of the London police magistrates, "I'll let the witness testify to one he didn't see me," so I say to "Caledonia" and to Captain Lacy, that I will bet either of them twenty to one that he does not kill six sitting shots at rabbits out of seven with a pea-rifle at eighty-three yards, with bullets 100 to the pound, with a lady's thimbleful of powder divided into "several" charges. If he can kill and stop three rabbits out of seven, close to cover, he will do as much as a strong single gun will do with No. 3 shot at fifty yards, and with less ammunition and less noise; therefore I am inclined, on his own dictum, to yield the captain the palm in favour of his pea-rifle; but being practical, I am rather inclined to be sceptical, and to think that there is a good deal of truth in the adage that, in all sporting matters, "seeing is believing."—Yours, truly,

UMARA.

Mr. Sydenham Greenfinch in London. G. ROUTLEDGE & Co. A very amusing shilling volume, descriptive of the diverting, pathetic, and humorous adventures of Mr. Sydenham Greenfinch, and his friends in London, very cleverly and profusely illustrated by McConnell, many of whose drawings combine the freedom of Leech with the fine humour and character of Doyle.

The Half-Sisters. By GERALDINE ENDOR JEWELL. Chapman and Hall.

This is a tale of passion. The heroine, by birth an Italian, is an actress, who begins her professional career in the circus, from want, and leaves the stage, its prima donna, to marry a nobleman. The story of her privations and temptations is well written and painfully true. The interest of the tale never flags, and the various characters introduced bear the stamp of originality without exaggeration.

Sybil Leonard. By Mrs. GREY. Thomas Hodson. This is not a novel: it is a sermon, and such a sermon as all should read; but, more particularly is it addressed to those who, pure in heart and life, are the more ready to be deceived by the tempter. Mrs. Grey deserves the thanks of all right-thinking persons for this charming book. We speak more of her purpose than her talent; the latter is too well known, too widely acknowledged, to require praise from us. Sybil, brought up in luxury, carefully guarded from the gaieties and immorality of life, marries the being she most loves—a man in every respect calculated to make her happy. The evil genius of the story is a man, plain almost to repulsiveness, but of great talent and attainments. We must not give the story of Sybil's fall; for that we must refer our readers to the book itself, and it is with regret that, from want of space, we are compelled to refrain from giving extracts to show how, step by step, sin enters the soul of a pure happy wife, and leaves her degraded and wretched.

Sunny Memories of Foreign Lands. By Mrs. BEECHER STOWE. Sampson Low, Son, and Co.

Of all the charming books of travels we have read, this is one of the most charming. It is a book which adds greatly to the literary fame of its talented authoress. The keen perception of character, shown in her personal sketches of most of the political and literary celebrities of our time, is something marvellous. Her criticisms on the arts make us almost regret she was not a painter, so true and powerful are they—so full of all the feelings and inspiration necessary to make an artist. The visits to Abbotsford, Stratford, Warwick, Melrose, and all the other spots, here or on the continent—made doubly interesting and dear to us by the memories of those whose fame made those spots historical—are full of poetry and love of nature. We have not space for long extracts, but not a page can be opened without discovering beauties. A quotation from the visit to Stratford will serve to illustrate her charming style:—

We had little time to look about us to see Stratford in the sunshine, so we went over to a place on the banks of the Avon, where, it was said, we could gain a very perfect view of the church. The remembrance of this spot is to me like a very pleasant dream. The day was bright, the air was soft and still, as we walked up and down the alleys of a beautiful garden that extended quite to the church; the rooks were dreamily cawing, and wheeling in dark, airy circles, round the old buttresses and spire. A funeral train had come into the graveyard, and the passing-bell was tolling. A thousand undefined emotions struggled in my mind.

That loving heart, that active fancy, that subtle, elastic power of appreciating and expressing all phases, all passions of humanity, are they breathed out on the wind? are they spent like the lightning? are they exhaled like the breath of flowers? or are they still living, still active? and, if so, where and how? Is it reserved for us, in that "undiscovered country" which he spoke of, ever to meet the great souls whose breath has kindled our souls?

The Russian Empire: its History, and Present Condition of its People. By JAMES HAIN FRISWELL. London: John Cassell.

A concise and well-written history, in which no important fact is omitted, and which proves the author to be well read, and indefatigable in his research. The pages of the work are unmarked by no partiality, but the history of the empire is set forth in a "round, unvarnished" manner; by which means the reader will be enabled to form his own judgment upon Russia and her rulers. In his preface the author candidly admits that he had to read a great many books ere he produced his own volume; and he also states that he has chosen the best authorities, whose statements he has sought to verify by the reports of living travellers. The book is well got up, and a perusal of its pages will make the reader quite au fait with the history of a country which now holds no small place in the world's attention.

Tom Thornton; or, Lust Resources. Three vols. James Blackwood, Paternoster row.

The adventures and misfortunes of Tom Thornton, a proud, but not altogether a bad sort of fellow, are detailed in these volumes very cleverly. Although based upon the principles of the three volume school, it is neither tedious nor twaddling; but has a sufficient amount of well-described incidents in its pages to keep alive the attention and interest of the reader throughout. A very well wrought description of a French debtors' prison and its inmates, is one of the salient points in the work, and shows the author to have a good capacity for observation and expression. The publishers have presented the volumes to the public in capital style, the getting-up of the books being irreproachable.

Hits and Spurs.

A SPANISH INSURGENT PROVIDED FOR.—Pucheta, the torero whose name has been so often mentioned of late, and who was the leader of a large body of the armed civilians of the Lrvapias and Toledo quarter, has been appointed to a high post in the police. It is his duty now to look after evildoers, and to keep order among the armed populace, and he is found very efficient. He has been the means of getting a great many fire-arms out of the hands of men unfit to be trusted with them. Although somewhat of a ruffian, as befits his original profession, he has a sort of code of honour of his own, and his word, it is stated, may be relied upon when once pledged.

OLD BACHELORS IN AMERICA.—At the ladies' celebration at Raritan, about 900 females were present. One of the dear creatures let off the following toast—"Old bachelors, may they lie on a bed of nettles, sit alone on a wooden stool, eat alone off a wooden trencher, and be their own kitchenmaid!"

WHEELBARROWS.—An American paper reports the invention of a new wheelbarrow of which the wheel is under the centre, so that none of the weight of the load rests upon the bands.

THE NIGER-CHADDA EXPEDITION.—This expedition appears to be unfortunate. By a former arrival the death of its experienced leader, Capt. Becraft, was announced; and we are now informed that the young Prussian ethnologist, Dr. Bleek, who, through the influence of the Chevalier Bunsen, was sent out to join the Pleind, has been invalided home in the same vessel in which he started from Plymouth a few months ago. Dr. Baikie, R.N., is now the leader, and Commander Miller, of her Majesty's ship Crane, has kindly permitted his second master, Mr. May, to assist in the navigation up the river.

HALF DROWNED.—A man has been resuscitated at Hull by treatment much at variance with the directions of the Royal Humane Society. Mr. Popplewell, a wool-merchant of the town, was bathing and got out of his depth. On the body being rescued, apparently dead, it was laid down on the beach, and perseveringly rubbed all over with sand, and slapped on the back by two of the bystanders. Many reunions were made by the rest, but after a quarter of an hour the two had the satisfaction of seeing the drowned man revive, and he recovered entirely the next day.

THE AMERICAN BABY MARKET.—The Stark county (Ohio) Agricultural Society is offering premiums for the finest specimen of young Americans. Here is the list:—For prettiest baby, $5 and diploma to mother; for second prettiest baby, $3 and diploma to mother; for third, $2 and diploma to mother; for largest and heaviest child under twelve months old, age to be considered, $5 and diploma to mother; for second largest and heaviest child under twelve months old, $3 and diploma to mother; for third, $2 and diploma to mother. The above is not a fair list. All the rewards go to the mother; no encouragement to fathers!—American Paper.

ANTIMONY SHOT.—Messrs. Smith and Co., of the Antimony Works, Lambeth, request us to state, in reference to the paragraph in the Times of Monday, that they claim both the idea and the mode of making antimony shot, either hard and brittle or tough. They also assert that they introduced the shot to the board of Ordnance. Messrs. Smith add, that although no decision has been given by the select committee, the experiments made with antimony shot go to prove that the article is exactly the same in character as the shot which they introduced.

A NONLE BOY.—A touching incident occurred recently at a steamboat sinking in the Missouri river, near St. Louis. Among the persons who were swept overboard were a woman and a boy about twelve years of age. A man on the steamboat seeing the boy buffeting the waves just beyond the boat, threw him a rope, and called to him to take hold of it. The little fellow replied, "Never mind me—I can swim; save mamma!" They were both saved.—American Courier.

STEWARDS.

Viscount ELMLEY and P. W. KNIGHT, Esq., M.P.'s for West Worcestershire. Captain RUSSELL and J. H. FOLEY, Esq., M.P.'s for East Worcestershire. OSMAN RICARDO, Esq., and WILLIAM LASLEY, Esq., M.P.'s for the City of Worcester.

Colonel CLOWES, Proxmee Hall,

MESSRS. HOWARD AND CLINTON have most earnestly to impress upon the attention of that part of the sporting public who have not yet taken advantage of their information, that they have obtained such extraordinary information respecting the Leamington Stakes, the Great St. Leger, the Cesarewitch, and the Cumberland Stakes, that they do not believe so favourable an opportunity as the present will again occur for ensuring an enormous gain.

They mentioned in their recent advertisements that they had doubled their staff of Agents, in order to lose no possible opportunity of securing the winners of the Great Events at the Autumnal Meetings. The first meeting on which this extra staff was employed was at York, and Messrs. H. and C. appeal, for the satisfaction of the Public, the list of their

YORK WINNERS.

Grand Inquisitor only, for Elbow Handicap.
Jack Sheppard France of Wales Stakes.
Rifeman Convivial Handicap.
Vindex Burgundy Stakes.
Virago Yorkshire Oaks.
Pamiestone Ebor St. Leger.
Acrobat Great Yorkshire Stakes.
Bolardo Knavesmire.

Messrs. H. and C. deem it only justice to themselves to draw attention to the direct and unimpeachable manner in which they advised Grand Inquisitor for the Ebor. It was exactly as follows:—In their printed circular for the York Meeting, they told their subscribers to "Back Grand Inquisitor immediately." That was sufficiently definite, but in case any lingering doubts might prevent their subscribers from taking full advantage of the advice, they addressed them by advertisement on Tuesday in these terms:—"The Ebor is a certainty for our horse No. 21 (Grand Inquisitor), back him for all the money you can get on." And to make assurance doubly sure, they repeated the assertion in their advertisement of Wednesday, "Our horse No. 21 is sure to win." And in their advertisement on the morning of the race they assured their subscribers there was "no change" in their opinion, information, or confidence. This was no "half-and-half" advice—no spilling of victory between two, three, or four probable winners, but a clear and decided "hit" at the winner with one horse only.

And now for the future. Messrs. H. and C. are not in the habit of boasting without a cause, but they do emphatically say that they have obtained the absolute

WINNER OF THE LEAMINGTON STAKES.

They give but one horse, and that horse is at long odds, will very soon be at a short price, and is certain to win.

THE ST. LEGER AND GREAT YORKSHIRE HANDICAP.

Messrs. H. and C. feel equally sanguine on these events. They look upon the St. Leger as already over. They have now before them their Agents' reports from every stable as to work, condition, prospects, &c., and they are quite certain there is nothing in the race which can beat their selection.

CESAREWITCH AND CAMBRIDGESHIRE.

Messrs. H. and C. have been devoting all their energies to these events, and have some most startling information, which should be acted on without delay. The opportunity of getting the very longest price may pass away perhaps within a few days.

TERMS.—To St. Leger, 10s. 6d.; to end of season 1s. 1s.

DR. DE JONGH'S

LIGHT BROWN COD LIVER OIL.

PREPARED FOR MEDICINAL USE IN THE LOFFODEN ISLES, NORWAY, AND PUT TO THE TEST OF CHEMICAL ANALYSIS.

The most Effectual Remedy for Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, Gout, Chronic Rheumatism, AND ALL SCROFULOUS DISEASES.

Approved of and recommended by Berzelius, Liebig, Wochler, Jonathan Pereira, Fouquier, and numerous other distinguished scientific Chemists in Europe.

Prescribed by the most eminent Physicians, and supplied to the leading Hospitals of Europe. Specially rewarded by Medals by the Government of Belgium and the Netherlands.

Has almost entirely superseded all other kinds on the Continent, in consequence of its proved superior power and efficacy—effecting a cure much more rapidly.

Contains iodine, phosphate of chalk, volatile acid, and the elements of the bile—in short, all its most active and essential principles—in larger quantities than the pale oils manufactured in England and Newfoundland, deprived mainly of these by their modes of preparation.

EXTRACTS FROM OPINIONS OF THE MEDICAL JOURNALS.

"THE LANCET," July 29, 1854.

"In the preference of the Light Brown over the Pale Oil, we fully concur. We have carefully tested a specimen of the Light Brown Cod Liver Oil, prepared for medicinal use under the direction of Dr. de Jongh, and obtained from the wholesale Agents, Messrs. Ansar, Harford, and Co., 77, Strand. We find it to be genuine, and rich in iodine and the elements of bile."

"THE MEDICAL CIRCULAR," May 10, 1854.

"The utmost reliance may be placed upon the experimental researches of Dr. de Jongh, who is one of the most eminent of European chemists; the oil prepared by him enjoys also the additional sanction of the opinion of Baron Liebig and the late Dr. Pereira, in favour of its genuineness and efficacy. Our own experience practically confirms their judgment, and we unhesitatingly recommend the Light Brown Oil as the best for medicinal purposes, and well deserving the confidence of the profession."

"THE MEDICAL TIMES," August 5, 1854.

"We believe that the profession is much indebted to Dr. de Jongh for his laborious researches into the composition and properties of this oil; and we have the high authority of Baron Liebig and the late Dr. Pereira in testimony of the value of those labours."

Sold wholesale and retail, in bottles, labelled with Dr. de Jongh's Stamp and Signature, by ANSAR, HARFORD, and Co., 77, Strand, London, Sole Consignees and Agents for the United Kingdom and the British Possessions, at the following prices:—

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.—An extraordinary and rapid Cure of Erysipelas in the Leg, after medical aid had failed. Copy of a Letter from Mrs. Elizabeth Yeates, of the Post-office, Aldwick-road, near Bognor, Sussex, dated January 12th, 1853.

TO PROFESSOR HOLLOWAY.

Sir,—I suffered for a considerable period from a severe attack of erysipelas, which at length settled in my leg, and resisted all medical treatment. My sufferings were very great, and I quite despaired of any permanent amendment, when I was advised to have recourse to your Ointment and Pills. I did so without delay, and am happy to say the result was eminently successful, for they effected a radical cure of my leg, and restored me to the enjoyment of health. I shall ever speak with the utmost confidence of your medicines, and have recommended them to others in this neighbourhood similarly afflicted, who derived equal benefit.

I am, Sir, your obliged and faithful servant,

"The above engraving represents accurately a section of a leaden pipe, which was employed for a short time in conveying water from a well on the grounds of Mr. Dick, of Bonchurch, Isle of Wight. The original section of pipe is 8 1/2 in. long, 2 1/2 in. diameter, and 5-16 in. thick. A great part of the internal surface is corroded by the action of the water, but, as shown in the drawing, four deep excavations have been made, and another is shaded off of view by the manner in which the section of the pipe has been cut. The water has cut these deep pits almost through the pipe, and not only upon the portion which we have illustrated, but have formed similar chasms throughout the entire length."—Expositor.

THE FIELD OF WAR.

OUR WOODEN WALLS.

THE WHITE SEA.

Off Cross Island, July, 1854.

We arrived off the bar of the Archangel or Dwina River with the three ships on the 26th of June, having boarded an immense quantity of vessels, principally Dutch, on our way down the White Sea. Within thirty-six hours of our anchoring it came on to blow very heavily from the N.W., which is a fair wind for vessels bound in. They come in in shoals—not less than from 300 to 350 vessels, of which the majority were Dutch, having passed us between the 26th June and 3rd July, when the wind changed. During this period it blew so hard a gale that our boats were occasionally prevented from boarding, and, as it was, they were knocked to pieces almost, and all to no purpose; for the vessels were all, with the exception of one Yankee, in ballast; and as we have orders not to blockade, we could not interfere with them. In anticipation of a blockade, many of them had obtained numerous freights, and the astonishment of the Yankee was great when he was told that he was at perfect liberty to proceed. All these craft are now at Archangel, and the first rush has evidently subsided, though whenever we can see (which is not very often the case), others are seen running down. Without a blockade of Archangel our presence in this sea is next to useless. The quantity of grain, meal, flour, &c., which will be exported thence this year will be positively enormous, and a stoppage of it would be felt in the heart of the empire. You can have no idea of the extent of this traffic. No one can who has not witnessed its effects. From far and near, within a circuit of 400 miles of Archangel, the produce of the country is sent in; and as the craft which embark it bring remittances, either in bills or specie, to pay for it, just fancy what a blow would be struck at Russian commerce by a strict blockade, and what a quantity of money would be removed from circulation. We have taken one schooner and about half a dozen luggers since our arrival, and another schooner (empty) parted from her anchors, and drove over the bar in the height of the gale after we had put a couple of 32-pound shot through her; and got a boat's crew on board, who luckily escaped to a neutral vessel just as she went adrift. Perhaps you are not aware of another arrangement which has been entered into between the Swedish and our governments. It is that the Russian luggers trading between Archangel and the coast of Norwegian Finmark are not to be molested, because upon them the inhabitants of that desolate region depend entirely for supplies of food. Now, this is humane, and would be proper were it not so liable to abuse. We fell in with a fleet of three the other day, one and all consigned to our consul at Hammerfest, who, with the consular agents at Vardo, Huns, and Vatosse, seem to have the whole of that trade in their hands; and the schooner of 120 tons which we took was provided with sort of pass from the Norwegian consul at Archangel. You may depend upon it that the only effect of the war in this quarter has been prejudicial to ourselves, by placing the entire trade in the hands of the Danes, Dutch, and Hanoverians; and I fervently hope that, should the war last over the year, as seems most likely, Parliament will force our government to adopt a different line of conduct. For this year the mischief is done. The very moment that the gale broke, which was on the 3rd July, we went to work to try and get the steamers over the bar of the Dwina, inside which lay a 16-gun Russian brig, two steamers, two schooners, and nineteen gun-boats, each mounting two long 36 pounders, and pulling forty sweeps. We sounded the only two channels which we now used, but found only from fourteen to fourteen feet and a half in the deepest. This occupied us all the 4th and 5th of July, and then as the Miranda, the vessel of the lightest draught among us, was drawing fourteen feet eleven inches, we found that for the present the job was impracticable. On the night of the 6th the Brisk took the Eurydice and the prize schooner in tow, and brought them up here to an anchorage about seventy miles from the Dwina, admirably situated for blockading, as all vessels bound to Archangel make Cross Island to ascertain their position. We anchored here on the 7th, and next morning Eurydice sent two of her boats ashore, on the main land to water. That afternoon it came on to blow again from the northward; the boats tried to get off. One of them just pitched sufficiently close to the stern of the Brisk for her to veer a small gig with a line to her, by which she hauled her up; but God knows what has become of the other. The last seen of her was the next morning, at four a.m., when she was trying to beat up along shore. The schooner and one of the boats were sent to her assistance, but one of those cursed fog came on, and since Sunday, the 9th, we have only had half an hour during which one could see the ship's length, and during which the schooner and boat came in, having been twenty miles to leeward without seeing anything of the missing pinnace. They had two days' provisions with them—but after that!—

If it were not for this most unhappy affair, things would be going pretty straight with us, for we have picked up a collier which was sent to us from England, and are consequently reassured about not getting out of coals. * * * At a place called Linslie, half way to Archangel, stands the strong fort of Narjorin, mounting eighty guns of heavy metal, and only one vessel could approach at a time; beyond that at Solombol, where the dockyard is, they have thrown up strong batteries, and again at Archangel itself. The garrison consists of 6,000 men, and they have the means of turning out as many gun-boats as they please. As far as we can learn, there is no vessel of any size on the stocks at present, and no vessels of war have left the river this year. We had a little firing on the 4th July, the enemy having brought some horse-artillery guns to bear on our boats, which were sounding. No damage was done by them, although their practice was good, and firing remarkably quick. They have a telegraph on the lighthouse abreast our anchorage, off the bar, and would persist in working it on the day we tried to get in, until the Miranda, which was closest in, put a 32-pound shot through the first floor, at a distance of 2,700 yards. Our men are pretty healthy, although they have been entirely on salt meat since leaving the Downs. The weather is terribly against us; what with gales of wind, thick fogs, and strong currents, we have enough to do to take care of ourselves.

THE BALTIC FLEET.

DUNDEE.—PLEASURE TRIP TO THE BALTIC.—On Wednesday a beautifully moulded and excellently fitted-up iron steam-vessel, named the Aquila, belonging to the North of Europe Steam Navigation Company, and built on the Clyde, entered our roadstead, and obtained a supply of coal. She is on a pleasure trip to the Baltic, and has a few passengers. Had the trip taken place earlier in the season, and been better advertised, we doubt not that a much larger number of persons would have availed themselves of seeing the fleet, Copenhagen, and other places of interest.—Dundee Advertiser.

STOCKHOLM.—One of the various steamers that left Stockholm on the 19th for a pleasure trip to Bomarsund, the Svithiod, was chartered for the purpose by 100 members of the Exchange there, and took out as a present to the troops about 1,000 bottles of champagne, with a variety of comestibles not usually to be found in a camp on a distant expedition.

NYBORG, Monday.—Commodore Grey, with the Hannibal and Royal William, two screw steamships, and one paddle-wheel vessel, all laden with Russian prisoners, passed through the Belt to-day.

DESPATCHES FROM BOMARSUND.

Sir:— * * * 5. I have the honour of enclosing lists of the whole British force landed, and of casualties, together with a list of prisoners and guns captured, being no less than 112 mounted, three mortars, seven field pieces, and seventy-nine not mounted. * * *

OUR FRENCH ALLIES.

STOCKHOLM.—The order of peasants, in the Swedish Diet, have addressed a petition to the King, praying him to co-operate in preventing the Islands of Aland from returning under the Russian yoke. Vessels belonging to those islands now navigate under French colours.

COPENHAGEN, August 23.—A French transport, the Courier de Marseille, with provisions for the Aland division, has stranded on the southern shore of Refshorn, on the coast of West Jutland. The crew (eight hands) were saved by eleven men jumping into the life-boat, and dashing out to the brig, after an attempt to send a rocket-line had failed, the distance from the shore being too great. As yet she has sprung no leak.

MALTA, August 22.—The following troop and store-ships have touched at this island for water: "On the 11th the French steam-frigate Ajaccio, from Toulon, with eleven sailors for the fleet. On the 17th, Oronoque frigate, from Toulon, with 129 troops and 145 sailors. On the 18th, the Caffarelli frigate, from Toulon, with 100 sailors, one officer, and two artillerymen."

MALTA, Aug. 22.—On the 13th there arrived and proceeded five French transports, laying on board in all 111 horses and eighty-nine soldiers for Varna. The next day a French transport, laden with provisions for the troops at Varna, and the Sea Nymph, English transport, with provisions, arrived. On the 19th the Medway came in with the Horse Artillery and sledge train on board. The cholera had broken out, and eight deaths and twenty-two cases had occurred on board. The Medway sailed on the 20th. She has left all behind except one officer and about thirty men. Up to the 22nd, the deaths by cholera of the passengers by the Medway is twenty-three, but ten fresh cases have broken out to-day. Sir W. Reib, accompanied by Captain Graves, went to inspect them this morning. He found them all excessively terrified. Captain Graves suggested amusements, and he himself came into the city, purchased a quantity of fishing-tackle and newspapers, which he sent as a present to the men; after which the Governor and Captain Graves visited the sick in hospital and suburbs.

The 68th regiment has gone to Varna. A shark has made its appearance in the harbour here for several days past.

SAILING OF TROOPS.—The Hougomont, belonging to Dunbar and Co., has been taken up for the conveyance of troops to the Baltic. In compliment to France who has been re-named the Baraguy D'Hilliers. By letters of the 15th of August, from her Majesty's ship Himalaya, we learn that the Scots Greys had been disembarked on the 16th Aug. in perfect order at Kouklia (Bosphorus). Lieutenant-Colonel (Griffiths), and the officers of the regiment, had presented separate testimonials and letters of thanks to Captain Kellock, the commander, and to Mr. E. Lane, the purser of the ship, expressive of their thanks for the attention they received, and of the excellence of the arrangements on board. All transports at Varna, 400 in number, were said to be provisioned for six weeks.

THE TURKS AND RUSSIANS.

THE GREAT FIRE AT VARNA.—Russian agents set this town on fire on the 10th of August. Attention was first engaged by a long streak of black smoke making its slow way lazily from the part of the harbour next to the town, and spreading over the water at some distance from the shore, forming a sort of dusky cloud, which intercepted the view, and blotted the fairer part of the landscape, when the harvest moon, flashing upwards like a sheet of burnished silver, rose from the Black Sea. The alarm was spread within a few minutes. Turkish cries ran through the streets howling their fire cries "Yaghin Var!" wild screams of fear, agony, or despair ran through the thin partitions of the walls and the narrow streets; then the deep muffled sounds of the French drums burst from the barracks, and from the camps outside the town came the shrill bugle-calls. From the water the boatwain's pipe rang through the calm air, and boats full of sailors almost flew over the water to the shore. Still the black smoke rose up, denser and denser still, until here and there at short intervals it became tinged with deep purple, and when the sun had set, and the moon, pale and silvery, had risen about house-high over the calm sea, the black smoke lessened, and a fiery column of deep lurid red and yellow streaked rose over the walls and roofs of the devoted town. Just at present the town of Varna is a dépôt for two large armies—enormous quantities of military stores were so late as August 9 heaped up within its walls. There were magazines of wood, of coal, of barley and straw, of pitch and tar, and of spirituous liquors. Besides, the main lanes and the shops in the bazars were in the hands of canteen men from Slauboul and Galata, who dealt in brandy and rum, in bacon, butter, oil, cotton, and other things, useful and inflammable. These public and private stores were so many pièces de résistance for the fire, which clung to them and gloated over them. It is said that the Turks arrested three Greeks at the outbreak of the fire and gave them over to the French, and that the Zouaves burnt a Greek whom they suspected of having caused the conflagration. They bound him and flung him into the fire. Such was the common talk of Varna. The fire, if laid, was certainly ably laid; for two hours the town was in the most awful danger. Fortunately, the powder magazines escaped. Last winter, when Captain W. examined the stores, he found 12,000 cwt. Say that one-half of it had been used, and its fresh additions made to the stock, still there would not be less than 6,000 cwt. of powder in the Turkish magazine. There were 40,000 cwt. in the batteries and mines. The French magazine, with rather a large store of 3,600 cwt. was close by; and close by, too, was the English magazine, both of them got up in a hurry, and without those elaborate precautions which the destructive character of the material demands. The Turks had tanks filled with water before the doors of their magazine. Their tower is of enormous strength, and bomb-proof; so that if the Turks kept quiet, there was not much danger in that quarter. The English and French magazines, being badly protected, were, of course, in imminent danger; and if they went, according to the law of explosions, the Turkish magazine must go too. The explosion of 50,000 or 60,000 cwt. of powder (taking the lowest possible estimate) would be enough to blow all Varna "into this week next year," and utterly destroy all the shipping in the harbour. The loss of their ships and stores, and perhaps of 10,000 or 15,000 men in and near the town, would have crippled the allied armies; and there is no saying what would have been the influence of such a catastrophe on the chances of the war and the fate of Europe.

The most strenuous endeavours were made to save the powder magazine, and, thank God, crowned with success. The commander-in-chief was on a visit to the fleet, and even now it is not yet known who commanded in Varna while the fire was raging. But it is believed that the command was usurped by General Fielden of the Engineers, who, though broken with age and ill in health, was present at the fire from first to last; and who, when the danger was greatest, was continually seen moving about in the post of danger, close to the walls of the French magazine. So close were the flames to this dangerous spot that the walls of the magazine became hot. You could hardly touch them with your hand. But I am informed the gallant veteran stuck to these hot walls, and that when he retired his hair was singed, and his eyes inflamed with the heat. Corporal Greig is also highly spoken of, as a man who, by his activity, coolness, and intrepidity, lent material assistance to his chief. The safety of the town is, in a great measure, owing to the exertions of General Fielden, and of the engineers that worked under his orders; for, if the French magazine had gone, the two other magazines also would have burst. The principal mosque was burned down almost entirely. Many of the Mussulman population, confining in the sanctity of the place, had in haste brought their most valuable articles and gave them in charge to four priests who belonged to the building. When, after some time, the soldiers penetrated into the building, they found two of these Mussulmans lying dead near the heap of wealth, suffocated by the smoke, and the other two seated close by nearly insensible, but still unwilling to abandon their charge. The soldiers were obliged to use force to snatch them from certain death.

THE WAR IN EUROPE.

BUCHAREST, Aug. 19. The Turks are advancing daily: large bodies of infantry have already arrived, and are encamped in the neighbourhood. Two regiments of cavalry and two guns, under the command of Colonel Symmons and Sir Stephen Lukeman—who, as you know, is inspector-general of cavalry, and has a regiment under his immediate orders—started, three days ago, for the purpose of making a reconnaissance in the rear of the Russians, as far as their strength would allow them. They came up with the rear-guard, the day before yesterday, at Buzeo, and a skirmish ensued in which three Russians were killed and a captain taken prisoner. An important incident occurred here. A Wallachian regiment quartered in the village took part with the Turks, and exchanged shots with the Cossacks. Nothing can exceed the animosity of the Wallach soldiery against the Russians. The Russians are in force in and around Pokshani.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 15.—A small party of Bashibazouks, under the command of M. Dupreuil, behaved bravely in a late encounter with the Cossacks in the neighbourhood of Kustengé. M. Dupreuil, after having shot one of the Cossacks, was overpowered by several, and received some lance wounds, from the effects of which he is now recovering rapidly at Varna. His own party came quickly to the rescue, and behaved most gallantly; even two fell dead near M. Dupreuil in the encounter with the Cossacks, who at last, after a vain resistance and some loss, took to their heels.

THE WAR IN ASIA.

CAPTURE OF BAYAZID BY THE MUSCOVITES.—The Invalide Russe of the 18th August publishes further particulars respecting the occupation of Bayazid. "A further copy of a report, addressed by General Wrangel to Prince Bebutoff," says the Invalide, "has this day been received, announcing the capture of Bayazid. General Reed (commander-in-chief of the Caucasus) has sent to his Majesty the keys of the two castles of Bayazid, and a flag left behind by the Turks." The following is a copy of the report of the commander of the Eriwan division of the active army on the Turkish Caucasian frontier, dated Aug. 1:—"I have the honour to report to your excellency that early on the 31st July, the town of Bayazid, and both castles, were taken by the troops under my orders, and that the whole Sandjak of Bayazid, on the Diadin side, is in our hands. We found in Bayazid three cannon, one colour, large stores of powder and artillery munitions, more than two and a half million cartridges, 1,800 stand of arms, sabres, ten large ammunition-waggons filled, medical stores from English and French depôts, 1,000 ciphers of wheat, 150 of flour, 800 of rice, 1,000 of groats, 160 of barley, 300 pounds of butter, 400 of salt, ox hides, and divers articles of clothing for body and feet. Besides this, quantities of barley and wheat were taken in the camps near Arsab and Musun. In so far as I can collect from documents that have fallen into my hand at Bayazid, from the declaration of the inhabitants, and other reports, it is evident the Turkish corps had been augmented to 15,000 men, and that 13,000 of these took part in the battle on the heights of Tschengli. Of these only 2,000 escaped, and fled in complete confusion towards Van. Three thousand fell in the field of battle, and the remainder dispersed. All the roads in the Sandjak of Bayazid are strewn with dead, wounded, arms and ammunition thrown away, broken-down carts, and waggons laden with carriages and munitions. In Bayazid we found 300, and in Arsab about 120 wounded, who contrived to escape from the field of battle, but could drag themselves no further. The route of the Turks is complete; the Bayazid corps no longer exists. Besides the capture of seven field-pieces and twenty colours, prisoners, stores, and the town of Bayazid, the result of the battle has been the submission of the whole Sandjak government. The neighbouring Kurds have evinced their respect for us, and have promised sheep for feeding our troops. According to reports, Selim Pacha, who commanded and fled, was plundered on the road to Van by his own people. The troops under my command are superabundantly provided for from the stores captured from the Turks, and the ammunition expended in the battle replenished by the same means."

NAVAL OPERATIONS IN THE BLACK SEA.

THE CRIMEA.—The Press, under date Constantinople, August 17, states that the last vessels destined to form part of the expedition were sent to Varna on the 15th. They had 12,000 Turks and 2,000 French troops on board, as also horses, guns, ammunition, supplies, and a great many flat boats. The Pomone, Lavoisier, Euménide, Coligny, Monette, Ulloa, Megere, steam men-of-war, had sailed for Varna, laden with Turkish soldiers, and the Mogador had followed them.

Nearly all these ships towed two or three pontoons or troop-boats, and some must have found a bad passage to Varna as the wind was blowing freshly right in their teeth. The Charlemagne took up 1,000 Turks from the barracks near Tophané. At the office of Admiral Boxer at Constantinople, the programme of operations for a large fleet of transports has been drawn up. They are divided into ships for the Light Division, division No. 1; for the 1st Division, division No. 2; for the 2nd Division, division No. 3; and for the 3rd Division, division No. 4—each with its distinctive flag, so as to prevent confusion, and each under the command of a naval officer. Thus each division of the army will have a division of transports for its special service and carriage, and each division of transports will be conveyed by a squadron of ships of war. This grand fleet consists of steamers of a magnitude, burden, and speed hitherto unknown in any operation of war—of such vessels as the Himalaya, the Sinla, the Emen, the Hydaspes, the Melbourne, the Victoria, the Orinoco, the Avon, the City of London, the Emperor, the Colombo, the Tonning—and of sailing vessels which would constitute a formidable navy of themselves alone. Our men-of-war steamers could probably land 20,000 men in their boats in two hours! The artillery which we have at present, under General Cator, consists of the siege train (thirty guns out), commanded by Captain Gambier (vice Flude, gone home sick); the Royal Horse Artillery, Colonel Strangways; the Artillery of the Light Division, Colonel Dacres; of the 1st Division, Colonel Lake; of the 2nd Division, Colonel Dupuis; and of the 3rd Division, Colonel Fitzmayer. Each division has twelve field-guns attached to it, so that there are forty-eight field-guns in all. There are, besides, twelve guns of the Royal Horse Artillery—the latter are six and nine-pounder guns. It is calculated that the boats will suffice to land these fifty-six guns at one trip; but the facilities for landing the heavy siege-guns are not so evident. The French siege train has not all arrived at Constantinople.

A "Gemin" for landing has been made out of two of the large Turkish boats of the Bosphorus, which are about fifty feet long and about eight feet broad, fastened together and planked over the top, so that there is a light kind of raft formed, not drawing more than a foot of water, and capable of landing two heavy guns and their men, or of carrying 150 or 200 men with the greatest ease. Very many of these Geminis are with the fleet.

It is stated in the Journal Français of Frankfort, that an immense number of snuff-boxes, warranted to be made of the English man-of-war Tiger, taken by the Russians, are exposed for sale in the shops at Odessa.

Naval.

From China we have dates to the 6th of July. Nothing had been heard of the Russian fleet, which was supposed to have gone as far north as possible.

The Boscawen, 72, Captain Glauville, sailed from Plymouth Sound on Sunday morning for the West Indies.

The Sardinian Government has resolved to send four of its war ships to look after the pirates in the Greek Archipelago, in order that French and English ships may not be withheld from their peculiar business in the Black Sea.

BLOCKADE OF THE WHITE SEA.—ARCHANGEL, August 16.—Sir,—I have now to advise you that the ports of the White Sea have been declared in a state of blockade from the 13th inst., and that fifteen days are allowed for ships leaving the said ports. Signed by the agent to Lloyd's.—To Captain G. N. Halsted, R.N., Secretary, Lloyd's.

SINGAPORE, July 13.—The Weraff, which arrived here on the 10th, from Sarawak, reports that a schooner, bound from Singapore for Labuan, had been cut off by the Balinese pirates, off Tanjong Serik.

FRENCH NAVY AND MERCHANT SERVICE.—CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 11.—The most painful news, which is but too true, is that the cholera has broken out in the fleets here and at Baladeliik. It has visited some of the French ships with extraordinary virulence. The Friedland and Montebello have suffered in particular; in the latter upwards of 100 died in twenty-four hours. The only thing to do, if the malady continues, is to put to sea.

Letters from Toulon of the 23rd ult. state that the arsenals of the interior continued to forward to Toulon considerable material of artillery, which is immediately embarked on board the commercial vessels freighted by the Government. The army in the East must now be provided with an immense artillery, which is daily increased by fresh arrivals. The personnel of a battery, composed of 130 men, embarked on the 23rd in the Chandernagore transport; and the steam corvette Vélocé, which is to take her in tow, conveys to the East ten horses and several detachments of soldiers, on their way to join their respective corps. The regiment of marine artillery has just organized a company, commanded by a captain, which is to embark in the Vautour, for the working of the mortars of that vessel, which has been armed as a bomb-ketch.

STEAMERS.

LOSS OF THE STEAMER MINERVA IN THE CHANNEL.—LIVERPOOL, Wednesday.—We regret to announce the loss of the fine steamer Minerva, trading between this port and Cork, last night, off the Skerries. From all the particulars we can gather, it appears that the Minerva, Captain Rochfort, started yesterday afternoon, at half-past one, for Cork, and at a quarter-past six o'clock, when off the Skerries, the wind was blowing a smart breeze, and thick weather was coming on. The captain then observed that the steamer was a little too near the Skerries Buoy, and altered her course, and in ten minutes afterwards she struck, bow on, on the Victoria Rock, near the Skerries, and went over on her side. She shortly afterwards recovered, but the water began to run into her hold, extinguishing the fires, and she began to fill rapidly. The boats were immediately lowered, and the captain and cabin passengers got into one which immediately put off, and was seen no more. She carried blue lights, but the remaining boats had only the binnacle lamp in one of them. When they left the ship she was still afloat, and could be seen by them, until three of the boats were taken up by the screw-steamer Mail, Captain Cooper, which happened to pass at the time; and the attention of the captain, who was on the look out, being attracted by the shouts in one of the boats, reversed his engines, and took all he could find on board. The boats were separated in the darkness, notwithstanding that Captain Cooper remained in the vicinity for two hours. One of the last four boats, as well as that in which the captain was, could not be discovered, but hopes are entertained that both boats may safely reach the Welsh coast. She had upwards of 100 persons, between passengers and crew, when she sailed, of which about seventy were saved. It is thought that the number of passengers in the captain's boat, many of whom were ladies, would be from twenty-five to thirty.—Later Particulars: Messrs. Pickford, of Liverpool, have received a telegraphic message from one of their travellers who was on board the Minerva, stating that the passengers and crew in the two missing boats landed at Holyhead in safety. The wreck was, therefore, unattended by any loss of life. The Minerva, which was built by Messrs. Vernon and Son, of Liverpool, was one of the fastest and best boats on the station.

A NEW DESCRIPTION OF STEAMER FOR THE CLYDE.—A new description of steamer has just been invented and patented by Mr. George Mills, which, according to the Glasgow Herald, seems likely to introduce a new era in the annals of river steam-boat navigation. The vessel is so constructed as to be moved at pleasure in a forward, backward, or lateral direction. The paddle-wheel by which she is propelled is placed in the centre of the boat.

PRISONERS IN RUSSIA.—Sir,—A letter dated Odessa, the 11th August, from the gunner of the late ship Tiger, states that the Emperor had liberated the remainder of the men; but on that day the six officers we left on the 10th of July, after the exchange—viz., Messrs. Edington, Lawless, Wilkinson, Seudamore, Quin, and Delaney—were to start on a journey to Kazan, probably occupying a period of six weeks, and to be performed in the country carts. There will be left then, of the Tiger's people in Russia, twelve officers and three servants, and probably a Turkish pilot, Sulciman.—ONE OF THE EXCHANGED.

THE BLACK SEA.—The Vladimir had her captain killed, as well as sixteen men, in the recent brush off Sebastopol. This vessel is English-built and fitted, and is probably the best vessel of her class which Russia possesses. She is stated to have called at Odessa about the 24th ult., stayed there only a few minutes, and then departed for Nikolai (on the Bug), to which place she was understood to have gone for repairs, having suffered considerably. This intelligence having become known in our fleet, some of our cruisers were despatched to intercept her on her return, but she has not yet been seen. She carries eight guns, and possesses engines of 400 horsepower. When English steamers have by any chance appeared off the coast of Odessa, all the ladies have tripped out on the Boulevards, in their brightest parasols and bonnets, to see, and some to sketch, the English ships. There is considerable discontent in the place, and many merchants are leaving.

CA LAIS.—The Reine Hortense, Imperial yacht, has arrived here with despatches from Bomarsund. She met with very rough weather after her departure from Elnesora.

CAPTURES FROM THE RUSSIANS.

On Monday the High Marshal of the Court of Admiralty gave notice on the Royal Exchange that within twenty days the Russian vessel Concordia, prize to her Majesty's ship Conflict, as also two sloops, names unknown, likewise prizes to the Conflict, would, together with the Russian ship Christine, seized in the port of Liverpool as a Crown droid, be declared lawful captures.

The cargo of the Russian ship Carolina, Louis Ehlers late master, taken by her Majesty's ship Amphion, comprising 350 tons of salt, was sold on Monday at Yarmouth, and realised good prices.

ELISNORE, 23rd August.—The Reinhard Bolwin (Hanovkuff) with a prize crew on board, from the English fleet, arrived here yesterday.

The Court of Admiralty has reserved its judgment with respect to the Union, of Flensburg, prize to her Majesty's ship Cruiser, for violating the blockade of Riga, for proof that the blockade was in force, and that its existence had been made known. With respect to the Norwegian vessel Norren, prize to the Archer, for breaking the blockade of Riga, the Court of Admiralty has reserved its judgment. In the case of the Ostzeck, a Mecklenburgh vessel, taken by her Majesty's ship Alban, for breaking the blockade of Cronstadt, the Court of Admiralty has pronounced against the seizure, but has refused costs and damages against the Alban for the unlawful detention.

The Devoushire, receiving ship for Russian prisoners of war, at Sheerness, has had the collier Hercules, and the water-tank vessel alongside to complete her store of fuel and water, preparatory to the draught of Russian prisoners of war (500) being transferred to her, now on their passage.

Military.

FRANCE.—M. Horace Vernet, who was up with General Canrobert's division in the Dobrukscha, draws a picture of the dreadful sufferings of the men there, which would exceed the greatest efforts of his pencil to realise. On his authority it would appear that their losses were far greater than the French at Varna stated them to be. He declares that out of 1,200 Zouaves who started for Kostendjé only 480 returned, and that out of 10,000 troops of the line 4,000 were left in the marshes of this death swamp. On such good authority one must rest with painful certainty.

ENGLAND.—The War-office has just made nine sergeant-majors, five sergeants, three quartermaster-sergeants, four colour, and one company-sergeant, ensigns without purchase.

THE FOURTH DRAGOONS IN TURKEY.—"Our food is middling: we have a pint of porter and a drachm of rum per day; this is a valuable thing, for though it is small, we are thankful for it. The greatest difficulty we have is to procure postage-stamps, as, if we put three on a letter, it goes by the overland mail, so that it reaches England in eight or nine days; while, if only one is put on, it might not reach its destination in a month or six weeks. As for pay, we have received only 2s. since the 18th of last month."

Yeomanry and Militia.

THE QUEEN'S OWN WORCESTERSHIRE YEOMANRY CAVALRY.—Colonel Lord Ward, muster at Worcester on Thursday for seven days' training, meeting on the Pitchcroft at two o'clock precisely.

THE DURHAM MILITIA ARTILLERY, Commander Major Stobart, is ordered to double its present strength. Major Stobart, it is reported, will be raised to the rank of lieutenant-colonel.

THE BEDFORD MILITIA, Colonel Gilpin, M.P., is now in garrison at Berwick-on-Tweed. The regiment is now nearly 600 strong.

LIVERPOOL YACHT CLUB REGATTA.

THURSDAY, Aug. 24.

Owing to the unsettled state of the weather this morning, and the heavy fall of rain yesterday, the attendance at Birkenhead, and on board the Vestal steamer, which was kindly lent by Mr. Baines to the committee and their friends, to accompany the sailing yachts and rowing boats during the races, was by no means numerous, the party on board the steamer numbering about sixty. The afternoon turned out fine, and there being an excellent band of music on board, furnished by Mr. Baines, the ladies and gentlemen, owing to the courtesy of Mr. Crooke, who took a pleasure in making others happy, joined in a waltz and quadrille party, and spent a pleasant hour. Mr. Walker, of the Old Mansion-house Hotel, provided an excellent déjeuner. On account of the strong breeze, which was blowing from the W.N.W., the committee very judiciously altered the course, the sailing yachts starting from the commodore's flag-ship, which was moored off Birkenhead, and rounding No. 1 floating powder-magazine, moored off Eastham, running the course three times, and finishing the race at the flag-ship. Shortly after the races the members of the Liverpool Yacht Club and their friends dined together at Mr. Jones's, Royal Birkenhead Hotel; immediately after which, the various prizes were presented to the successful competitors. Several excellent speeches were delivered, and a pleasant evening was spent. The amusements terminated with a grand display of fireworks. The following is a return:—

A Cup, value £30, for all fixed-keel yachts of the Liverpool Yacht Club.
Time race, three-quarters of a minute from three to eight tons, and half minute from eight to fifteen tons.
Priestess, 11 tons, A. Dunn 1
Electric, 8 tons, T. Wilkinson 0
Spirit, 4 tons, T. Wilkinson 0

Priestess took the lead, Electric second, and Spirit third. Priestess kept well out in the river, and caught both wind and tide, whilst Electric and Spirit ran close in shore for a considerable distance. Spirit shortly after hauled down her flag and gave up the contest. When off Brombro, Electric shook out a reef, and increased a little upon her opponent, but owing to the stiffness of the breeze was unable to maintain her position in the race, and in running the course second time gave up the contest, leaving Priestess to run the course for the third time undisputed. The race commenced at 12h. 14m. 30s., and terminated at 3h. 19m. 24s.

A Cup, value £20, for centre-board yachts of all the clubs, from three to eight tons. Time race, three-quarters of a minute time allowed.
Did not come off, owing to the weather; but it is arranged to contest it at a future period.

Shrimpers' Boats, 12 sors.

Lightning	1
Independence	2
June	3
Truant	4
Turpin	5

This was the best race of the day. At the signal for starting all the boats got well off. Opposite Eastham-wood five out of the seven boats were close together, four out of the five leading boats rounding No. 1 floating magazine at the same time, the fifth close up. There was a good breeze up, and all the boats had a large spread of canvas, which gave them an excellent opportunity of testing their sailing capabilities. After a well-contested match, the Lightning won by a short distance.

For a Purse of £15, for four-oared in-riggers, to be pulled and steered by gentlemen amateurs.

Lady Constance, T. Gannin	1
Nabochish, J. Segar	2
Echo, F. Hux	3
Nautilus, W. Moss	4
Lady Constance took the lead, kept it, and won easily.

River Gigs, 3 sors.

Anna Maria	2
Perseverance took the lead, and kept it throughout.

Four-oared Gigs belonging to yachts in the river, £5.

ROYAL NORTHERN YACHT CLUB REGATTA.

LARGE, Saturday.—The races, which could not be proceeded with on Thursday, on account of the severity of the weather, commenced yesterday (Friday). The weather then had very much moderated; indeed, the day was remarkably fine, an excellent breeze continuing from the west. There was a very large attendance of yachts; but the number of spectators on shore was not so large as might have been anticipated. Lord Eglington acted as commodore, and George Middleton, Esq., as secretary. The yacht Orion had on board a large company of ladies and gentlemen, and the fine band of the Queen's Own, from Glasgow, discoursed appropriate music. Lord Montgomerie was on board the beautiful and successful yacht Cymba. The regatta began shortly after eleven o'clock, and the matches disposed of were those that were to have taken place on the previous day, leaving those set down in the programme for Friday to be resumed to-day (Saturday). The following is the result:—

THE DINNER.

The dinner came off at the Brisbane Arms, on Thursday night. Commodore the Earl of Eglington presided, supported by Mr. Douglas, of Dunlop, and Rear-Admiral Major Morris; and Vice-Commodore Smith, of Jorlunhill, was croupier, supported by Mr. Middleton, secretary, and Mr. Pye.

KINSALE HARBOUR REGATTA.

The regatta, which is annually held in the harbour of Kinsale, commenced Aug. 24. The weather was such as the most enthusiastic yachtsman could possibly desire, the wind blowing nearly half a gale, with a sea running that was well calculated to test the qualities of the best boats. The Prince Arthur left the quay shortly after nine o'clock, but owing to the violence of the wind, not more than twenty or thirty persons, of whom a very small proportion were ladies, were found sufficiently adventurous to run the risk of an unpleasant acquaintance with salt water, and the other disagreeable incidents that attend a marine excursion in unfavourable weather. About one o'clock the appearance of the pretty little harbour was particularly gay and animated. The Wizard gun-brig, with a number of flags flying, lay down towards the entrance of the harbour. H.M.S. Advice, bearing Admiral Carrol's flag, lay a little further out, whilst several handsome yachts of large tonnage, gaily dressed with flags, were moored in various parts of the harbour; and a large number of smaller dimensions, together with innumerable boats of every size and make, were sailing and rowing about the harbour.

The first race was for first-class hookers of 22 tons, and upwards, for which the prizes were for the first boat £7, and for the second £3. The course for this race was round the Sovereign Islands, and from thence to a flag just about two miles S.E. of the Old Head, from which they came back again round the islands and then into the Harbour, making a distance of twenty-five miles. The following boats were entered for this race, and started at eleven o'clock:—

Falcon	Smith	Jack.
Nancy Dawson	Dawson	Red.
Fanny	Cadogan	Blue Peter.
William	London	Pilot.

The boats got well under weigh; but, before they got out of the harbour, the Falcon carried away her bowsprit, and had to bear up. The others carried on without any accident, and the Nancy Dawson came into the winning point at twenty-five minutes past five; the others, to use a popular sporting phrase, being "nowhere."

The second race was for yachts exceeding 5 and not exceeding 13 tons (time race), half minute per ton. There were only two boats entered for this race.

Imp, 10	H. H. O'Brien, Queenstown.
Spray 14	Thomas Hayes, Cork.

Those pretty little boats started well together, and as long as they remained inside the harbour, a very interesting race ensued; but the Imp came in first at nearly six o'clock, the Spray not being heard of at the time. It subsequently appeared that the owner of the Spray made an objection to the race, which objection was entered by the secretary, and therefore the result remains to be settled by the committee.

The third race was for four-oared gigs, for which the prize was £3. There were five boats entered for this race, namely, Vision, Mr. Daint; Mary, Mr. Betson; Royal George, Mr. Williams; a boat belonging to Belgooly; and Polka, of Innoshannon. From the superior style and construction of the two last boats, they were objected to as unfit competitors with the former, and the race was accordingly confined to three boats. After a smart race, Mary came in the winner by a length ahead of Royal George.

The next race advertised was between four-oared yaws, but as no boats of that description were entered, a race was started between the Belgooly and Innoshannon boats, rowed by watermen. This was certainly the best and most interesting race of the day, and was terminated by the Belgooly boat coming to the winning-post a considerable distance in advance of its neighbour of Innoshannon; but, in consequence of having neglected to go round a post marked on the course, the second boat was declared the winner.

The next race was for small yachts under four tons, for which two boats started:—

War Hawk, 3 tons, Daltra.
Jenny Lind, 4 tons, Shaw.

After an excellent race the War Hawk was declared the winner.

The usual sports that generally wind-up a regatta then ensued, and afforded much amusement to all who witnessed them. A brilliant display of fireworks concluded the entertainment provided for the first day.

BALL AND SUPPER.

A subscription ball was given by the committee of the regatta in the Assembly-rooms, Kinsale. The ball-room was brilliantly lit, and the walls were hung round with the colours of many nations. The attendance was numerous and fashionable; and the refreshments were supplied by Mrs. Fitzgerald, of Cork, in a manner that gave the greatest satisfaction to all assembled.

SECOND DAY, Friday, Aug. 25.

FIRST RACE.—Corinthian Cup, value £20, open to all yachts of 15 tons and upwards (time race), half-minute per ton, up to 31 tons, and above that half-rate of Acker's scale. The following started:—

Antelope	W. Hall, R.C.Y.C.	17 tons.
Piercy	J. Wheeler, H.W.Y.C. (I.)
Enchantress	S. Hadder, R.C.Y.C.	48 tons.

This was a very pretty start, Antelope leading, Piercy and Enchantress close together. As the race advanced Piercy took the lead, and arrived at the winning-post soon after 5 p.m., thus carrying off the cup.

SECOND RACE.—Small Sailing Batts.—Prize, "A Smoking Cup." The following started:—[The name of Mr. Townsend's yacht has not reached us.—Ed.]

War Hawk	Edward Townsend, winner.
Jenny Lind	K. M. Shaw.

The remainder of the races were racing matches, among which that of the naval apprentices from H.M. brig Wizard attracted universal attention, the winner coming in only two or three lengths ahead of her rival.

The following yachts were in Kinsale Harbour during the regatta:—

Echo	Robert Heald, R.C.Y.C.
Waterhagtail	R. C. Bourne Fitzgerald, R.S.G.Y.C.
Louisa	Casper Fenmore, H.W.Y.C. (B.)
Vision	John G. Bunt, R.C.Y.C.
Cymba	Robert Lander, R.C.Y.C.
Albatross	Richard Perry
Mask	J. P. Alkby, R.C.Y.C.
Flask	R. E. Chatterton, R.C.Y.C.
Spray	— Hayes
Imp	H. H. O'Brien, R.C.Y.C.
Experiment	P. S. French, R.C.Y.C.
Piercy	J. Wheeler, R.W.Y.C.
Antelope	Wm. Hall, R.C.Y.C.
Enchantress	Samuel Hadder, R.C.Y.C.
Jenny Lind	E. M. Shaw, R.C.Y.C.

THE ROYAL PORTSMOUTH REGATTA.

We give below the result of the 25th day's sport. Both days were charmingly fine, with a gentle breeze sufficient to give life and animation to the thousand sail which danced upon the wave. The Queen and royal family, too, honoured it with their presence, and many were the hearty cheers which greeted them from the thousands of loyal subjects who lined the beach and esplanade. The regatta dinner was held on Monday evening, when a large number of gentlemen interested in these aquatic sports sat down to a sumptuous repast.

WOODBRIDGE REGATTA.

This regatta took place on Monday, and was attended by the elite of the neighbourhood. Eleven yachts started at the times appointed for the first and second matches. The wind was light, and the match of the 6-ton class was won by the Fairy by ten minutes, Helen second, and Blue-Eyed Maid nowhere; in fact, she was unable to get round the buoy, and gave up the match early. In the 12-ton class five yachts started. After drawing lots—the Albatross obtaining the first berth, Ottilia second, Ondine third, Iris fourth, and Little Mosquito fifth—they got away. Some being a considerable way up the river, the Ottilia got the start, and took the lead, closely followed by the others. Little Mosquito gradually drew ahead, and rounded the flag-boat down the river after a dead beat, five minutes ahead of Ottilia second, Ondine third, and Albatross fourth. Iris gave up the match early. This was a dead beat down, and on the run back the Little Mosquito came in a winner by seventeen seconds, with Ottilia second. The other boats were not timed. Numerous rowing matches took place, and the yachtsmen and gentry assembled at the Crown in the evening, when, after dinner, the prizes were distributed to the owners of the winning craft.

ANGLESEY YACHT CLUB.

A new club, says a correspondent, has been ushered into existence, bearing this name. For some time past there has been a great desire, on the part of many owners of yachts of small tonnage, viz., of about five tons, that a club should be established, for the purpose of once more bringing back above bridge some of the glories of yore, when the now far-famed Royal Thames Club first waved its burgee over mere tiny craft frequenting the shores of Chelsea and Putney. The two great metropolises having carried their match-courses so far below the smaller craft were somewhat thrown out of countenance, and the reaches above bridge affording a very desirable locality for nautical contention, it became a necessity to make a field for their exertions. Recently a club has been established, called the Ranelagh, but limited as to number, fifty being the maximum; and from this limitation the object above alluded to was thought not to be fully accomplished. Therefore, a meeting of other yachtsmen took place on Tuesday, at the Craven Hotel, when Mr. George Heywood Oliver was called to the chair. The objects of the meeting having been set forth by that gentleman, and several others having spoken to the purpose, the following gentlemen were elected officers:—

Charles J. Chubb, Esq.,	Commodore.
Robert Hewett, Esq.,	Vice-Commodore.
Albert J. Jackson, Esq.,	Treasurer.
George H. May, Esq.,	Honorary Secretary.
Frederic Turner, Esq.,	Honorary Secretary.
Edwin G. Knibb, Esq.,	Auditors.
T. Harrison, Esq.,	Auditors.
Neal Campbell, Esq.,	Harper.

In addition to the officers, the following were appointed the sailing committee:—

J. Berncastle, Esq.,	A. J. Jackson, Esq.,
J. G. Robinson, Esq.,	C. Greaves, Esq.,
W. Main, Esq.,	J. D. Chillingworth, Esq.,
J. P. Doorway, Esq.,	E. H. Oliver, Esq.,
S. Hewett, Esq.,	A. Westall, Esq.,
W. T. Sawyer, Esq.,

The Pier-hotel, Chelney-walk, was chosen for the club-house. The burgee selected is red, with the coronet of a marquis in the fly, and the red ensign, without device. The club was named "The Anglesey," in memory of that eminent yachtsman and lately deceased nobleman, so long Commodore of the Royal Welsh Squadron, and also out of compliment to the Commodore of the Royal Thames Yacht Club, his relative. The laws were read and passed. There are several fundamental or special rules, such as limiting the tonnage to five tons, having all matches above bridge, allowing unlimited canvas; yachts to start from their own anchors, to return all entrance-fees to yachts that sail over the course, and to compel every yacht to carry life-buoys. The subscription is 10s. 6d. amongst the original members. The following were elected honorary:—Commodores Berncastle, of the P.W.Y.C., Robinson, of the Medway, and Tomblinson, of the Ranelagh; Vice-Commodores Knibbs, of the P.W.Y.C., and Guest, of the Ranelagh; also, De Courcy O'Grady, Esq., of Bell's Life, Wm. Knight, Esq., of the Field, F. Ledger, Esq., of the Era, and R. Hunt, Esq., of the Yachting Magazine. Old Father Thames now again possesses two yacht clubs above bridge, viz., the Ranelagh and Anglesey. We remember a good half-dozen started some years back, but now defunct.

ROYAL WELSH YACHT CLUB REGATTA.

The annual regatta of this club took place at Carnarvon. Early in the morning the old town, especially that portion of it which fronts the Menai Straits, bore unmistakable signs of gaiety. The various towers and projections in the town walls, as well as the ancient fortress of Carnarvon Castle, displayed the Union Jack; and from Porth yr Aur (the destined club-house) the blue ensign, with the crown and plume in the fly, the distinctive flag of the Royal Welsh Yacht Club, floated triumphantly. We noticed the following amongst the craft moored off the quay:—Coralie, Nimrod, Ada, Siren, Queen Victoria, Wyvern, Louisa, and Nautilus (cutters); Hirnant (schooner). With regard to the latter, we may here observe that she has been built by Mr. Richardson, of Aberllynant (the owner), whose name is familiar to our readers as the inventor of the tubular life-boat. She is provided with a sliding keel.

The arrival of the commodore, T. Assheton Smith, Esq., in his beautiful steam yacht, the Sea Serpent, was announced by a commodore's salute of eleven guns from Porth yr Aur battery; and as she passed down the Straits, all the craft mentioned above dipped their colours to the commodore's pendant.

Fifteen prizes were to be contended for, viz., the Carnarvon cup—a beautiful silver tea-kettle, on stand, of the value of 45 guineas; the Prince of Wales cup—a very elegantly shaped claret jug, value 25 guineas; the Amateurs' Rowing cup—an elaborately embossed tankard, value £23; and the Royal Welsh Yacht Club cup—a silver cake-basket, value £20. All of them had the club arms, the Prince of Wales's plume with foul anchor, surrounded by the words "Royal Welsh Yacht Club," in a garter, together with the inscription, "Carnarvon Regatta, 1854."

The first match on the list was for the CARNARVON CUP.—A prize value 45 guineas, to be sailed for by yachts above thirty tons, old measurement, used for pleasure only. A time race. Three to start, or no race. Entrance, one guinea.

The rear-commodore, Lt. Turner, Esq., entered his barge, and proceeded to give the requisite directions.

Coralie, 35 tons, cutter, Greenock, Andw. E. Byrne, Esq., owner. Ada, 34 tons, cutter, Thos. C. Eyles, Esq., owner. Hirnant, 40 tons, schooner, Carnarvon, H. Richardson, Esq., owner.

The third signal, "to slip and away," was fired at 10.42m. 30s. The Ada got off first, but, unfortunately, there being scarcely a breath of air stirring, she was unable to stem the tide, and drifted to leeward as far as the Pile Pier, where she came to anchor. The Coralie was the second in order, and after her came the Hirnant. Both of these stood too far in on the starboard tack, and got aground, and they stuck for a quarter of an hour. At 11.12m. 30s. the Coralie managed to get off, followed in a few seconds by the Hirnant. At length the light zephyrs from the south, anxiously whistled for by all those whose experience had taught them the effect of that nautical invocation, freshened, and the effect was soon visible upon the Coralie; but from her great draft of water (eleven feet) she was unable to make such long tacks as the Hirnant, which, without her sliding keel, drew only five feet, and was thereby enabled to stand further in-shore; and thus the latter, whilst in the narrows, continued to hang close upon the heels of her competitor. On getting into more open water, the Coralie increased her lead considerably. The Ada being nowhere by this time, it was evident to all that unless a stiffer breeze should set in, the Hirnant had no chance.

The two were timed as follows at the close:—

	h.	m.	s.
Coralie	4	45	5
Hirnant	5	11	30

The Coralie was declared the winner; the fact being proclaimed by the town crier for the information of the public generally. The committee employed the same functionary to announce the respective matches immediately before the starting.

PRINCE OF WALES CUP.—Value 25 guineas, to be sailed for by yachts not exceeding 30 tons, old measurement, used for pleasure only. A time-race. Three to start, or no race. Entrance, 15s.

Three cutters entered for this match, as follows:—

Mirage, 18 tons, Liverpool, G. R. Woodward, Esq., owner.
Siren, 10 tons, Kingston, William Verrier, Esq., owner.
Louisa, 27 tons, Bangor, Hon. Col. E. G. H. Pennant, owner.

The first gun was fired at 2h. 4m., the second at 2h. 6m. 45s., and the third at 2h. 3m. 50s.

It being now high water, and the light air having strengthened, a fair start was effected. On their return they passed the flag-ship:—

	h.	m.	s.
Siren	4	51	30
Mirage	5	3	50
Louisa	5	4	40

In rounding the flag-ship opposite the town, they, for the first time, were seen by the spectators on shore to heel over to the breeze. They arrived:—

	h.	m.	s.
Siren	5	25	45
Mirage	5	35	45

At this moment an untoward accident happened to the Mirage. In standing in, she ran on the bank and stuck fast. The rear-commodore, accompanied by the Hon. Secretary (Mr. Kirkby), immediately pulled off to her assistance, and passed a line from her to the Flag-ship, in order to haul her off. Her owner, with a number of men, ran out to the end of the bowsprit, for the purpose of reducing her draft astern. The leverage thus produced was too great, causing the topmast to snap close above the cap, and come down with all its gear. The support of the topmast stay being thus taken away, the bowsprit broke, plunging some five or six men, including Mr. Woodward, into the water. Fortunately, beyond a ducking, they sustained no injury. They were speedily drawn into the boat. The Mirage, however, remained aground, and was not got off until the following day.

For the Royal Welsh Yacht Club Cup the entry was not filled up.

There was no competition for the Gentlemen's Sailing Boats Purse.

FIRST CLASS SAILING BOATS PURSE.—A first prize of four sovereigns, and a second prize of three sovereigns, to be sailed for by open boats belonging to watermen of any port in Carnarvonshire, and not exceeding twenty-five feet keel.

This was the next placed in order upon the programme. The entries were:—

Arrow, 20 feet keel, smack, Mr. Edwards owner.
Llewellyn, 21 feet 3 inches keel, three masts, Mr. R. Lewis owner.
Industrious, 21 feet keel, wherry, Mr. R. Roberts owner.

They had to sail twice round a flag-boat off Abermenai, and finish inside the Deadman off Porth yr Aur, leaving it on the starboard hand.

Having made their first circuit, they rounded near the Deadman as follows, each being timed at the same spot:—

	h.	m.	s.
Llewellyn	3	47	15
Industrious	3	47	35
Arrow	3	50	30

They came in to win as follows:—

	h.	m.	s.
Llewellyn	4	40	20
Industrious	4	48	5
Arrow	4	50	12

The next subject of competition was the SECOND CLASS SAILING BOATS PURSE.—A first prize of 3 sovs, and a second prize of 2 sovs, to be sailed for by open boats, not exceeding 17 feet keel.

The following started at 3h. 2m.:—

Menai, 17 feet keel, wherry, Mr. R. Williams owner.
Mary, 14 feet 3 inches keel, dandy, Mr. Glyne Williams owner.
Gazelle, 15 feet keel, —, Mr. William Griffith owner.

Eventually the Menai came in the winner at 5h. 12m. 20s., the positions being:—

Menai	1
Mary	2
Gazelle	3

THE SOUTHAMPTON REGATTA.

To the Editor of THE FIELD.

SIR,—I am sorry to trouble you so late in the day, but friends "far away" like to hear some accounts of their friends' doings at home, and both in your journal and Bell's Life the second day at Southampton was described as a "drifting-match." Now, on the contrary (with the exception of the Cowes regatta, on Saturday the 19th, and the one here to-day), it was the best race I have seen this season. The start certainly was a calm, but a light air sprang up, and off Calshot there was a nice breeze. Thought led, followed by Vesper, Elizabeth, Arrow, and Antagonist. It was not such a drifting-match but that little Vesper overhauled Thought (the great Arrow towering towards them), and as they passed Calshot there was only forty-five seconds between the three, Thought again taking the lead. They then again ran into a calm, the other two coming up, when the wind changed to about west, placing Vesper to windward of Arrow and Thought; and no one, I think, will deny that it was a pretty race between Arrow and little Vesper down to the flag-boat, being only five minutes difference between the two. Time by my watch, Arrow, 4.32; Vesper, 4.37; Thought, 4.50; Antagonist, 4.53 (as near as I could make out). Light air all the way to the "Warner." Thought having run Arrow and Vesper, former twelve and latter fourteen minutes. Arrow round the "Nab" about five minutes ahead. Thought and Vesper close together, thence they ran into darkness and light winds. As you reported, the cup was given to Vesper; the others, except Elizabeth, having given up. But surely this was not all of it a drifting match. And why send vessels, and one only fifteen tons (one of twelve tons entered, but did not start) such a distance on such a day? It has been a capital match here to-day between Vesper and Gem; only one minute's difference first round, and won by 4.30, as I timed it. I am afraid this is taking up too much of your space.

I remain, Sir, yours, &c.

Poole, August 29.

RACER.

RYDE REGATTA.—This era in the year of the watermen and inhabitants of Ryde, took place on the 1st of September. It consisted principally of sailing matches between the far-famed "Ryde wherries," and also rowing matches, and duck or pig-hunts, under the management of the directors of the Ryde Pier company.

SEA VIEW.—A regatta is about to be held at Sea View, we believe by wherries and fishing boats belonging to that pretty little watering place. Mr. George Hallett is authorised to collect subscriptions for the purpose.

WEST HARTLEPOOL.—Mr. R. H. Phillipson's much-admired little yacht, the Wave, carried away both the second prizes in the first race, at the West Hartlepool regatta, and the first prize in the second race. The two prizes amounted to £23, and Mr. Phillipson expressed a wish that the prizes should be given as a cup rather than in specie. Accordingly, a beautiful silver-gilt cup has been obtained, and has been exhibited in the window of Mr. Proctor, bookseller, West Hartlepool, during the last few days. The cup bears the inscription, "West Hartlepool Regatta, 1854."

THE ALARM VICTORIOUS AT COWES.—After passing the Nab, the several competitors for the R. Y. S. £100 cup, proceeded to Cowes. On the arrival of the Alarm off the Castle, the royal yacht Fairy, with the standard at the main, passed from the westward, and the crew of the Alarm cheered, as it was supposed, the royal yacht; but it has since come to our knowledge that the cheering resembled the "crowing" of the Chanticleer, and was everything but decorous, and must tend much to lessen the honour of victory. Moreover, after coming to anchor, the effigy of a game-cock was exhibited at the end of the jib-boom, plainly indicating the taste of the fore-castle—for it would be unreasonable to suppose, for one moment, that any other than the crew would countenance such proceedings:—

"In peace there's nothing so becomes a man

As modest stillness and humility."—A. Hen. F.

The discordant imitations of the morning bird showed the feeling which existed, and has been considered as insulting to the yachts of inferior tonnage which had that day contended honourably with the Leviathan; and we learn that on this ground alone they retired from taking part in the contest for the Queen's Cup on Monday, and not from being "alarmed at the prowess of their opponent," as has been stated by a morning contemporary.—Hampshire Telegraph.

HIS GRACE the Duke of Sutherland, after visiting Lochinver, Scourie, and Tongue, arrived at Dunrobin Castle, in Lord Stafford's yacht, on Friday week.

MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE.—A man, residing on Peartree-green, proceeded in a small boat from Ichen on Monday week, with the intention of going on board Mr. Goodridge's yacht. He was observed by Diaper, the ferryman, in the act of sculling the boat, and has not since been heard of. Next morning the boat was picked up, and found to contain only a single oar. The river has been dragged in the vicinity, but without success.

DEATH BY DROWNING.—The Cowes regatta reports mention the death by drowning of a yacht sailor on board the Osprey, off Yarmouth. His name was John Oades, and he resided at West Quay; he was a single man, aged twenty-eight, "the only son of his mother, and she was a widow." The poor fellow was engaged aloft, opening the gaff-top-sail, when he lost his footing and fell head foremost into the sea. He could not swim, and sank before the boats, which were immediately got out, could reach him. He had only been engaged for the regatta.

THE TORONTO SKIFF RACE came off on Saturday. At the word "Go," Mr. Tinning's boat, Her Majesty, shot ahead, but was soon caught up by Mr. Clark's Sultan, which maintained its place to the end, winning by nine or ten lengths. The race was well contested, and the boat built by Clindinning was declared by competent judges to be an excellent one. There was a good attendance, but the notice was too short.—Old Countryman.

BODILY SALTERTON.—On Tuesday the 22nd ult., Mr. Wm. Howard and Mr. O. Melhuish, both inhabitants of this place, left here in a small boat, for the purpose of attending Teignmouth regatta. They had not proceeded more than three-quarters of a mile, when a sudden puff of wind upset the boat, and both were precipitated into the water; Melhuish contrived to reach an oar, by which he kept himself afloat until picked up; but Howard was unhappily drowned. The deceased, who was well known and much respected here, has left a wife and four children (the eldest not eight years old) to lament his untimely fate. He was about thirty-five years of age.

THE TURKISH WAR.

VARNA, Aug. 24.

Thirty gunboats have arrived from Malta, August 24, and fifteen others are expected. Great excitement exists at Varna against the Greco-Slavonic agents of Russia.

Discontent is increasing in the French army at their long inactivity. The cholera is decreasing. Captain Smith, of the Simoom, is dead.

A kind of state of siege prevails. Five vessels, filled with troops, left on the 23rd, and six on the 24th.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 24.

The Duke of Cambridge arrived here on the 22nd, rather unwell.

Marshal St. Arnaud will hold a council of war at Varna, to decide upon the expediency of the great expedition, considering the state of the health of the troops.

THE BATTLE AT KOUROOK DERE.

SIX THOUSAND OF THE RUSSIANS KILLED AND TWO THOUSAND SIX HUNDRED WOUNDED. TURKISH LOSS, SIX THOUSAND.

TREBIZOND, Aug. 12.

Iskender Bey, a Hungarian in the Turkish service, who fought so nobly at Soubatan, arrived here this day at noon, from Kars in four days, bearer of intelligence of a bloody battle fought on Saturday, the 5th August, between Hadji Velikoi and Kourook Déré. The details, as given by Iskender Bey, are as follows:—

On the 4th of August, the Turkish force, with the exception of five battalions and twenty-four cannon, left at Kars, marched through Velikoi, and halted before the Russian outposts at Kourook Déré. The Turks, counting that evening 30,000 strong, divided into two divisions; the first commanded by Kerim Pacha, and the second by Vely Pacha, with General Guyon as chief of the staff, and Zarif Pacha as commander-in-chief and generalissimo.

Hassan Pacha, commander-in-chief of the Arabistani Irregulars, commanded the reserve division in the field, and Pacha the reserve division at Kars; General Knety commanding the advanced guard. During the night of the 4th the Russians advanced to the outposts, took up a position on the plain about 400 yards from the Turks, and exactly over the spot where their outposts stood the night before. They were commanded by General Prince Bebutoff and Prince Dolgorouky; Baranitsky, chief staff-officer.

At five a.m. on the 5th a general action commenced. At nine a.m. the left Russian wing commenced giving way, but being reinforced, soon recovered. At eleven, both sides got so close that they charged with fixed bayonets, and at twelve the action ceased by mutual consent. The Turks leaving 6,000 dead on the field, retreated in a very orderly manner, except a very small part of Kerim Pacha's division, which went rather hastily; the whole force got to Kars early in the afternoon, when the wounded were immediately despatched to Erzeroum. They amounted to about 3,000. The Russians left 6,000 dead on the field, and carried away about 2,600 wounded. One of their generals was killed, and a great many officers.

Among the Turks killed was Hassan Pacha, of the reserve division. Among the wounded, Mustapha Pacha. Cochimsinsky, a Hungarian Colonel, was wounded in the neck. Iskender Bey had a horse shot under him, and cut his forehead in the fall. All the European officers, from Gen. Guyon downwards behaved with great coolness, bravery, and activity. During the battle the Russians had six guns dismounted, and the Turks ten. The Russians on the afternoon of the 5th surrounded their guns with cavalry, and walked the whole sixteen guns off to Kourook Déré, after which they retired to their former camp, leaving a small force at one hour's distance, and exactly opposite Hadji Velikoi, where the Turks left two regiments of cavalry and some infantry, under the command of General Knety. The Bashibazouks behaved well, and only about 600 fled; five deserted to the enemy before the action commenced, and one after all was over. Several Russian deserters went over to the Turks both before and after the action. Both armies fought nobly and bravely; and although in strict military language the Turks may be said to have lost the battle, still the Russians suffered greatly, and every bit as much as the Turks. The day after the battle Iskender Bey went to General Bebutoff by order of the Mushir, and both sides agreed to allow each other to advance and bury their dead. The Turks and Cossacks consequently met alongside each other, and appeared quite friendly. Zarif Moustafa Pacha's courage and presence of mind did much in keeping the army from giving way. The old man was in the heat of the fire everywhere. It is much to be regretted that the Turkish cavalry, from want of proper training, could not assist in the field. It did little; and here the Russians had a great advantage, also, in the quickness and precision of their manoeuvres, in which the Turks could in no way compete with them. The following is perhaps not an inaccurate statement of the contending forces in action on the 5th Aug. :—

TURKS.—Twenty thousand infantry, four regiments of cavalry (of little use), four thousand five hundred irregular and (bad) horsemen, one thousand artillery, and fifty-two guns. In reserve at Kars—Five battalions of infantry, and twenty-four guns.

RUSSIANS.—Twenty-five battalions of infantry, two regiments of Don Cossacks, two Regiments of Cossacks, two regiments of dragoons, two regiments of irregulars, sixty field-pieces, and two thousand artillery.

On the 8th the Turkish army at Kars was ready to take the field again in an hour's notice, if necessary. They cry out for English officers.

Another account received by the mail from Trebizond, which reached Constantinople on the 19th, says the Turks had succeeded in defeating the right wing of the Russians, when the Russian General advanced his reserve and attacked the Turks with his entire cavalry. The Turkish cavalry being outnumbered gave way, and the infantry was compelled to retreat for a league. This movement was effected in good order, the Turks having with the bayonet successfully resisted all the attacks of the Russians. 4,500 men were killed on either side, and, as the Turkish artillery was admirably served, it is believed that the Russians suffered the most. One of their generals was killed and two wounded. The Russian dragoons captured 2,500 Turks. The Turkish army still remains in front of Kars. The advanced guard, composed of two regiments of infantry and two of cavalry, is at Hadji-veli-Koni, under the command of the Hungarian General Knety. The main body of the army is encamped between the advanced guard and Kars, and the rearguard is in Kars.

NEW DESTINATION OF ENGLISH TROOPS.

The Monitor (Paris) states, from Bucharest, that a division of the English army was expected at Obilesti, in Wallachia. Omar Pacha has required 93,000 rations of bread per diem to be delivered at Bucharest, Obilesti, and Urstzein respectively. A second bridge of boats is in course of construction from Turtukai to the opposite shore of the Danube.

LETTERS FOR THE ARMY IN THE EAST.—There will be a mail made up, on the 2nd inst., for the British army in Turkey and the fleet in the Black Sea, to be forwarded through France to Marseilles, and thence by French mail packet to Constantinople. Letters, whether to an officer, soldier, or seaman, will be charged 3d. under a quarter of an ounce, and so on; newspapers 2d. each. The postage must be paid in advance.

OPENING OF THE HARWICH RAILWAY.

(From the Morning Chronicle of August 31.)

The directors of the Eastern Counties Railway Company yesterday celebrated the opening of this important branch of their line by inviting about 3,000 of the shareholders and proprietors to a visit to the famous port which now forms one of the eastern termini of the East Anglian system. The length of railway yesterday opened to the public was rather over twelve miles, connecting Manningtree with Harwich—an extension which for a considerable period has been much required. The convenient position of the port of Harwich for continental traffic, and the reputation which it formerly possessed, in times when railways had not diverted its traffic to other more favoured ports, render it a matter of surprise that no direct railway communication with the metropolis has hitherto been established for the purpose of developing its trade, and promoting the shipping and mercantile interests of the town. Harwich has now at length secured its line of railway, and from its opening we trust may be dated a new career of enterprise and prosperity.

The visitors to Harwich were conveyed by four special trains, the first of which left the Bishopsgate station at 11.40, and arrived at Harwich a few minutes after two o'clock, thus completing the distance of seventy-two miles in about two and a half hours, including several stoppages at the intermediate stations. The remaining three monster trains left at intervals of ten minutes. On arriving at Harwich the visitors proceeded to the handsome and extensive pier recently erected, which, covered with an awning, and gaily decorated with flags and evergreens, served as a spacious refreshment room for nearly two thousand persons. After the collation had received that amount of attention from the appetites of the visitors which its merits so well deserved—for it was provided by Messrs. Bath and Breach, of the London Tavern—

Mr. Waddington, M.P., congratulated the shareholders on the opening of the line. He considered it as an event not merely of importance as affecting the interests of Harwich, but as bearing upon important national interests. In former times a very large trade was carried on between Harwich and Germany, Holland, and Denmark, and many of the most momentous and exciting of the events connected with the early history of the country had their scene and origin at the port of Harwich. He was firmly convinced that the trade of the town would be largely increased by its being brought into such close connection with the metropolis; and while in this respect the new railway would confer benefits upon trade and commerce, it would not be less valuable as an important and profitable feeder to the Eastern Counties Railway system.

The "Health of the Mayor and the Corporation of Harwich," was proposed by Mr. Bagshawe, M.P., and replied to by Mr. J. Patrick, the mayor of the town. Several other toasts were disposed of, and the company proceeded to occupy themselves in promenading about the town or sailing in the port, until the hour specified for the return. For the accommodation of those who preferred a trip on the water, several large steamers were provided, which conveyed the visitors as far as Landguard Fort, and some distance along the channel, affording an opportunity of witnessing the very beautiful scenery on the shores. On land, the Royal Naval Yard, the yacht club rooms and baths, the spacious esplanade, the lighthouse, the new breakwater, the ornamental slopes, and the charming grounds and garden of Cliff House were visited, and every facility afforded for inspecting the chief attractions of the town. The return trains commenced running shortly after six o'clock, and the whole of the proprietors were safely deposited—without accident or casualty—at their respective stations before ten o'clock. Everything connected with the arrangements for the excursion evinced the greatest care and attention, and in their results were highly satisfactory to all parties concerned.

The favourite, who had been in close pursuit, then challenged him, and, with Arthur Wellesley well up in his wake, an interesting race ensued. YARMOUTH RACES.

The races this week were quite equal to former years, and attracted as large a concourse of people as on any former occasion. J. Cherry, Esq., Mayor, B. B. Cabell, Esq., M.P., J. Hain, Esq., and Captain Douglas Lane, were the stewards. The committee raised a good subscription, about £150, and therefore had an opportunity of adding somewhat to the stakes. The entries were tolerably well filled, with one exception; and the programme for each day promised plenty of sport. After the arrival of the different trains mingled masses of human beings marched along the quay to the scene of amusement to witness the sports of the day.

A Handicap Plate of 50 sows. For 3-yr-olds and upwards. One mile and a quarter.

Mr. J. Le Cras's h b Apostate, 3 yrs, 7st 3lb, ... 1
Mr. Armstrong's colt by Red Deer, out of Miss Hampton, 3 yrs, 6st 2lb, ... 2
Mr. B. Land's Bourdeaux, aged, 8st 2lb, ... 4
Lord W. Pountney's h g Nicholas, 3 yrs, 6st 6lb, ... 4

They went off nearly together, Apostate taking a slight lead round to the monument. Then Bourdeaux went in front to the last turn at the south end of the course. The straight running was contested by Apostate and Red Deer, and a neck and neck race ensued between those two. Apostate won by only half a neck.

The Great Yarmouth Nursery Handicap of 10 sows each, h fl, with 50 added. For 2-yr-olds. T.Y.C.

Lord W. Pountney's Freckle, 5st 12lb, ... 1

Mr. S. M. Darford, 7st 6lb, ... 3
Mr. Holland's Easy, by Coningsby, 6st 7lb, ... 4
They went off in line along the straight part of the course, three-quarters of a mile. From the distance there was a capital race between Freckle and Matilda, the former winning by a length.

The Borough Members' Plate of 50 sors, added to a Sweepstakes of 5 sors each. One mile and a quarter.

Mr. Barnes's f by John's Gault, out of Blanche, 3 yrs, £50, bolted.
On starting John's Gault very quickly bolted with his rider. Apostate had the lead as far as the monument, but soon after Chorus passed him, all three being close together to the last turn, when a hard race ensued between Apostate and Chorus, the former winning by a couple of lengths. Ocus a bad third.

The Theatre Stakes of 3 sors each, with 30 added. T.Y.C. Heats.
Mr. B. Land's ch g Ocus, 3 yrs, £50 2 1
Mr. R. Gooch na Vixen, 3 yrs, £10 1 2
Mr. Holmes's Basquine, 3 yrs, £10 3

Vixen went off with the lead, and was never headed, winning by three lengths. Basquine was withdrawn in the second heat. The other two started on the wrong side of the post, and Vixen came in first. Ocus went back and started right, but Vixen did not. In consequence, Vixen was considered distanced and could not go again. Ocus therefore walked over for the third heat. The winning horse was put up at £80; no one advanced on that price, and he was not sold.

The Norfolk and Suffolk Handicap of 10 sors each, 1 ft, with 50 added. One mile and a half.

Mr. Turner's b f Hylda, 4 yrs, 84 7lb 1
Capt. Lane's Teller, 3 yrs, 74 10lb 2
Mr. Rogers's m Miss Bolton, 3 yrs, 74 2lb 3

There being only three entries, the stake money was not added; and the owners of the three mutually agreed not to start for their own money. Thus the sports of the day finished without the principal race.

Mr. B. Land's ch e Dartford, 2 yrs, 64 7lb 4 3

The contest was entirely between John Hughes and Adeline, and, after a very quick run, the former won by a length. In the second heat Basquine was withdrawn. Adeline had the lead at starting, and kept it to the ropes, when a neck and neck race ensued between her and John Hughes, who again won by a neck. Dartford was well up.

The Vixen's Plate of 5 sors each, with 30 added. T.Y.C.

Sir E. Gooch na Vixen, 3 yrs, £30 1
Mr. Rogers's b f Freckle, 2 yrs, £20 2

First heat: won by a neck. Second heat: won by two lengths. Third heat: Critterion passed the post first by two lengths. The owner of Cestria objected to Critterion receiving the stakes, on the ground that the horse had won 100 sors, and ought to have carried 7lb penalty instead of 5lb. This being proved, the stewards disqualified him (Critterion), and awarded the race to Cestria, who was afterwards sold for 40 sors.

BIBURY AND STOCKBRIDGE. It is in contemplation to increase these meetings to three days, commencing on Tuesday, the club races to take place on Wednesday. The "Stockbridge Derby," and other new engagements, will enable the stewards to carry out this arrangement without difficulty.

Winchester Races will come off on Friday, as usual.

The following yearlings, purchased at York during the week, have gone into William Day's stables at Woodcates:—Fao Faw Fum, Astrologus, Bravery, Who Are You, colt by The Flying Dutchman out of Walfrun, colt by Chanticleer out of Sunflower, colt by Poynton out of Ellen, filly by Pyrrhus the First out of Wollsmid, and a filly by Chanticleer; two grey two year old colts by Chanticleer accompanied them.

A filly by The Flying Dutchman out of Lannay, and a filly by Van Tromp out of Golcombe (both yearlings) arrived at Spigot Lodge, Middleham, on the 15th inst., to be trained for their engagements.

The whole of Mr. Meiklam's stud, advertised in our last, was put up for sale at York, on Friday, by Messrs. Tattersall, but none of the lots were disposed of.

Mr. Knowles's broad mares and foals will be brought to the hammer in October next.

Mr. Howarth's colt by Surplice out of Ferina has received the name of St. Hubert.

Lord Londesborough has sold Don John to go to America.

Mr. John Scott's 2-yr-old colt by St. Lawrence out of Azimmb, engaged in the Seventh Triennial, at Newmarket, and St. Leger, 1855, broke its leg a few days ago and had to be destroyed.

CHANGE OF QUARTERS.—Scythian, Apollonius, and Prince Arthur have left John Scott's for J. B. Day's stables at Findon.

Several horses left the Littleton stables three or four days ago, and Mr. W. Dilly being about to retire, the establishment will be broken up. The horses are all gone into Dockery's stables at Mickleham.

RETIREMENT OF MR. MEIKLAM.—This gentleman, one of the oldest and largest masters of Mr. Thomas Dawson, after a long and successful career on the turf, has declined racing, from the state of his health, which has for some time been in a most precarious condition, and the whole of his stud is to be brought to the hammer at York this day (Friday), by Messrs. Tattersall. Although Mr. Meiklam cannot boast of having carried off the Derby, St. Leger, or Oaks, yet in the great handicaps he has been particularly successful, having won the Metropolitan with Stilton, with whom he ran second also for the Chester Cup, the Cambridgeshire with Raby, the Liverpool Cup with Lightning and Inheritance, the Great Yorkshire Handicap with Snowstorm, the Northumberland Plate with Inheritance and Stilton, the Great Yorkshire Stakes with Poynton, and the Champagne Stakes at Doncaster, with the Italian.

RETIREMENT OF MR. GREVILLE.—This gentleman, who for the last quarter of a century has been one of the chief supporters of the turf, and was associated as the confederate of Mr. Payne, gives up his racing stud in a short time, and will confine his attention to breeding, having a magnificent stud of horses and mares at Hampton Court, including the stallions Alarm and Orlando, and the brood mares Industry, Jamaica, Duvernay, Barcelona, Little Finch, &c. During his career on the turf, Mr. Greville won the St. Leger with Mango, and in all probability would have carried off the Derby with Alarm, but for an accident at starting. He also won the Cambridgeshire, and Emperor's Vase at Ascot, with Alarm; the Ebor Handicap and the Goodwood Stakes, with Adme; the Suffolk Stakes, with Mummillo; and numberless other races which we have not time to enumerate. In his early years, Mr. Greville had the management of the late Duke of York's stud, which, under his direction, was remarkably successful on the turf.

THE EAST.

A band of Caucasian mountaineers, commanded by a son of Schumyl, have made a razzia into the province of Tiflis. They have sacked several places, put some people to death, and carried off a general's wife and a Princess Orbelian, her sister. The news caused a panic at Tiflis.

Two Lancer regiments have been sent by forced marches from Odessa to the West.

According to Austrian advices, requiring confirmation, 45,000 men, allies, had been embarked at Varna up to the 13th.

Some further strong reinforcements will be immediately made to the army in Turkey in the shape of the 14th regiment, from Malta, and strong drafts from the depot companies of the 30th, 33rd, 41st, 47th, 49th, and 50th regiments.

A TURKISH VESSEL IN SHIELDS HARBOUR.—A Turkish and a Greek vessel are in Shields harbour at the present time, and the picturesque dresses of the crews have attracted a good deal of attention. On Tuesday, the master of the former vessel, a noble and dignified looking Turk, applied to the North Shields magistrates for advice. He could speak excellent Italian, and addressed the magistrates through an interpreter located in Shields. It appears one of the crew had bolted, and how he will make his way through the country and out of it is a question; but he had not only run off with himself, but the master's gold watch; and a rascally-looking Greek, with a true piratical contour of face, was in the custody of the police as a party concerned. The Greek had been seen going between his own vessel and the Turkish vessel, and holding conversations with the deserter. He had also been observed setting him off from the railway station. As a copy of the Koran could not be procured upon which to swear the captain, the Greek was remanded in custody for three days.

A firm at Ostend has just bought at public auction in London one of the Russian prizes recently condemned by the English Admiralty. The Belgian Minister of Foreign Affairs, has, however, refused to allow the vessel to be nationalised, on the ground that such a measure would be a violation of neutrality. "International law," he says, "does not permit neutral states to admit into their ports enemies and their prizes. In their recent declarations on neutrality, the Swedish and Danish Governments have announced the resolution of preventing the entrance, condemnation, and sale of any prize, cases of distress excepted. If the sale in a neutral state be interdicted, purchase is also interdicted to the neutral subject. Now, the neutral subject cannot purchase elsewhere what he cannot purchase in his own state. The purchase of prizes would be a real participation in the profits of the war—that is to say, a sort of derogation from neutrality."

MEDICAL.

NEW TREATMENT OF CHOLERA.—The method of treating cholera patients described in an extract from this week's Lancet has been adopted in King's College Hospital with great success. Thirteen cases in all have been admitted into that institution; out of these the first six, which were treated on the old method of attempting to check or stop the diarrhoea, proved fatal. The remaining seven, treated on the system described below, have recovered.—"On the 15th of August there were five cases under treatment, the patients lying in wards especially set aside for them. They were all in a satisfactory state, and likely to do well under a plan of treatment which will startle some of our readers. Dr. George Johnson, who has the charge of the cholera wards, considers that the purging in cholera is mainly an effort of the organism to throw off the virulent principle which is at the root of the disease; he therefore in his treatment does his best to aid this eliminating process by gentle means, and gives half-ounce doses of castor oil every half hour. Some of the patients thus treated were admitted either with severe purging and vomiting, or in the cold and blue stage. A mustard poultice was usually placed on the pit of the stomach, and the castor oil given every half hour until the action of the bowels was well established. Ammonia was tried with the oil, but it increased the sickness, which symptom was more effectually allayed by the oil alone. In every case considerable relief was obtained upon the bowels being freely moved, and the congestive fever, which sometimes carries off patients who have struggled through the original choleraic attack, was noticed in Dr. Johnson's patients to be very slight. External heat, by means of warm bottles, frictions, &c., was also used, but we did not perceive that either brandy or opium were employed.

THE ACCIDENT ON THE BRIGHTON RAILWAY.

ADJOURNED INVESTIGATION BY THE MAGISTRATES.

CROYDON, Friday.—This morning at eleven o'clock the magistrates assembled at the Town Hall, Croydon, for the purpose of continuing the investigation they commenced on Tuesday. Mr. E. R. Addams was the chairman of the Bench, and the other magistrates present were Captain Kemmiss, Mr. Byron, and Mr. Sutherland. The four prisoners sat in the middle of the court, there being no apprehension on the part of the authorities that they would attempt to effect an escape. A slight change in the legal arrangements was made to-day. Mr. Burgon appeared for Simpson, the driver, instead of Mr. C. J. Rawlings, and Mr. Rawlings acted for Sladden, the stoker of the excursion train. Mr. Clarkson, the harrister, appeared on behalf of the South Eastern Company. Mr. Everest asked that the evidence which had already been taken should be read. This was agreed to, and the evidence was gone through. Mr. Burgon requested that the prisoners might be proceeded against separately, as there was no concert between them. If the magistrates did not think fit to adopt that course, perhaps they would allow the case of the two South Eastern men to be severed from that of the two Brighton men. Mr. Rawlings made an application that the witnesses should not remain in court, as it was evident that the two companies were bringing up witnesses the one against the other. The Chairman said that, as this was an inquiry, and not a trial, he could not accede to the request made by Mr. Burgon. The suggestion made by Mr. Rawlings was, he thought, a very proper one. Mr. Everest opposed the application of Mr. Rawlings, and, after a long discussion, the Chairman said the Bench would be glad if the witnesses would retire, but had no power to order them to do so. Mr. Superintendent Hind wished to ask Mr. Brown, the Superintendent of the Bricklayers' Arms Station, who was recalled, whether the train was divided at Ashford, and if so, for what purpose, and by whose authority. —Mr. Brown: It was divided because the train was too heavy, and by his direction he had instructions to do so if necessary. —Mr. Everest asked Mr. Brown whether he had charge of the excursion train.—Witness: Not exactly. He was with it.—Examined by Mr. Rawlings: He certainly had the direction of the working of the train. He was not on the engine with the driver and stoker, but was in the break-van, next to the engine. He kept a good look-out all the way. It was at all times necessary to pay particular attention to the Addiscombe-road signal, and as the excursion train of Monday passed it was all right. Witness gave evidence in reference to the signals similar in character to that given before the coroner yesterday. He added that the ordinary speed of an excursion train was about thirty-five miles an hour, but he did not know of any regulation as to the rate at which the train should pass a station. The driver slackened the speed of the train as he approached the station. The train was forty-five minutes behind its time when it left Ashford. The last half of the excursion train, with twenty-four carriages, left Ashford at 10.30. Directly the driver saw the signalman at the station hold up his hands, which is a signal of danger, he at once reduced his speed and the breaks were put on as hard as they could. He distinctly saw Sladden put on the break, and do all he could to stop the train. The engine was reversed immediately. The line was on a descent towards Croydon. Witness proceeded to describe the practice of placing a red board on the back of a train when a special train was to approach, and was examined at great length on other points, which are already before the public. Mr. Wm. Parker, the London and Brighton Company's station master at East Croydon, described the signals along the line. A driver was not allowed to pass a signal under any circumstances. Witness was at dinner when the accident happened, and he did not know whether or not the signal was up; he believed that a message came from Stot's Nest to Croydon, announcing that the excursion train was approaching; but the telegraph clerk did not communicate the fact to him, as he had no instructions to do so. By the Chairman: There was a board on the first part of the excursion train, indicating that there was another train coming, but he did not make any inquiry about it. He thought four trains passed between the first and second parts of the excursion train. There was no board on either of those four indicating that anything else was to follow. The first half of the train passed about eight minutes past twelve. No notice had been given to him of the time it would pass, but he was looking out for it. He did not know at what time the accident occurred, because he was not on the station. He left the station at eight or ten minutes before one, his dinner hour being immediately after he had done with the Dover up-trains.—Inspector Lund wished to ask Mr. Parker whether, immediately after the accident, he went to one of the prisoners and made any remark. If so, what was it, and what was the reply.—Witness said he went to Simpson, the South-eastern driver, and asked him how he came to run by the signals. He said he must tell the truth between God and man—that he had run by two of them. He expressly used the word signals. Immediately afterwards witness's attention was directed to a clergyman who had been injured, and he went away. A person named Smart was close by when the conversation between him and witness took place. He was sufficiently close to hear the conversation which passed. Other persons were near at the time, but he did not know their names. The Chairman considered that it was the station master's duty to wait for the extra train when he received notice that it was coming. He was informed that an extra or special train was coming up, and yet he did not take any notice of it. If he had attended to the notice the accident would not have happened. George Smart, an engine fitter in the company's service, deposed to the conversation spoken to by Mr. Parker. He added that he saw that the signals were right, and that the driver of the excursion train disregarded them. When the excursion train reached the station, it was going at twenty or thirty miles an hour. After a lengthened discussion, and the examination of several unimportant witnesses, the Chairman intimated that the court would not sit later than half past five, and at that time adjourned the investigation.

VERDICT OF MANSLAUGHTER.—Mr. Carter, coroner for East Surrey, has since closed the inquiry, at the Town Hall, Croydon, touching the circumstances which led to the death of John Gammon, who was killed by the collision which took place on the above line, on the 21st ult. Mr. Clarkson, the harrister, appeared for the South Eastern Railway Company; the Brighton Company was represented by Mr. Faithful; and Mr. Burgon appeared for Simpson, the driver of the excursion train. The evidence was necessarily a repetition of that which has been laid before the public during the last ten days. At its close the jury expressed a wish to inspect the line and see the signals. An engine and open carriage was accordingly provided for that purpose, and the jury proceeded down the line as far as Stot's Nest. On their return the Coroner proceeded to sum up the evidence, and the jury, after being absent about three quarters of an hour, returned a verdict of "Manslaughter against Robert Simpson, the driver." The usual formalities having been complied with, the investigation terminated after continuing nearly eleven hours.

SECRET OR CYPHER WRITING.

(From the Bristol Mirror.)

Sir,—Permit me, through your journal, to make known a system of secret (or cypher) writing (I have lately invented and patented the apparatus), and to enclose the apparatus devised for its practical application, which, I believe, will be found to answer all the purposes intended.

AGRICULTURE.

DEVIZES, August 29.—The wheat harvest, of which such good anticipations were expressed, has realised the most sanguine hopes. On the hills, the greater portion of this crop has been housed; and, with the present weather, the end of this week will enable most of our farmers in the vale to make great progress in the same way. Both as to quality and quantity the crop is excellent; some say surpassing every year since 1844, but all acknowledging that for some years past so good a berry has not been seen. A little patience is necessary on the cold soils, where in the spring the wheat was thin, as this has stowed out, and these stalks are some of them much behind the original stem, and have consequently slightly delayed reaping in some places. The barley, which was a very promising crop, has not improved in the way expected; there will, however, be an abundant crop, though the quantity here and there is not first rate. Potatoes, which may now be pronounced safe, are excellent in quality, and some kinds, particularly the foxyfolies, are the best crop that has been dug since the first appearance of the disease, some seven years since. The turnip crop would be all the better for rain; and this has been felt in the price given for every kind of sheep at the late Marlborough fair; but the stocks are not considered large, and a change of weather would, it is expected, keep the price to its present position, if it did not resume the figure of last year.

IMPORTANT TO FARMERS.—A question having arisen in several districts of South Wales, as to the liability of farmers to pay duty upon riding-horses, the commissioners, in order to save trouble and avoid appeals, directed the following queries to be put to the Board of Inland Revenue:—First, whether any farmer keeping several horses—say four, and consequently riding himself or family, one or more of such horses to fairs, markets, worship, &c. (such horses at other times being kept for farming purposes only), would be liable to any, and what duty? Secondly, whether such person keeping one horse only for his calling, and occasionally himself or family riding such horse, would be liable, and if so, to what duty? The answers returned by the board were, that only one horse is entitled to be kept for the purposes before mentioned, at the duty of 10s. 6d., and if other horses are ridden by the farmer or his family they are liable, according to height, to the duty of £1. 1s. or 10s. 6d. If one horse only be kept, then the duty of 10s. 6d. is payable.

THE MARKETS OF THE WEST.—The cheering anticipations of a bountiful harvest in the West of England—Devon, Somerset, Dorset, and Cornwall—have had a powerful influence on the various markets in the several counties. Wheat, a few weeks ago, was 10s. 6d. and 11s. per bushel, and the four-pound loaf was 9d., the dearth of which was, of course, very keenly felt by the working classes. Since then the price of corn, and consequently bread, has been considerably reduced. In some of the largest markets in Devonshire—in Tiverton, Totness, Barnstaple, Torrington, Newton Abbot, &c.—the price of wheat last week was down to 7s. 6d. and 8s. per bushel; and bread is now selling at 1½d. per four-pound loaf, and is likely to be further reduced. The price of animal food is not so high as it was, and, judging from the luxuriant appearance of the green crops, it is likely to be much cheaper. Prime beef has been selling in several markets at 10s. per score; and mutton is about 6d. per lb. In many instances farmers have held large stocks of wheat, in the expectation that the war with Russia would have rendered them to command higher prices; but in this they have been disappointed, and are still likely to be, for the prospects of the harvest are most gratifying. The weather has been delightful, and a very large quantity of wheat has been cut in Devonshire and the other counties. In the former county a considerable quantity has been saved in excellent condition, and, if the present fine weather continues for a short time longer, the wheat harvest will very soon be satisfactorily completed. New barley was sold in the Exeter market last Friday at 4s. to 4s. 6d. per bushel; and new oats at 3s. per bushel. Some samples of new wheat were also exhibited.

Markets.

MONEY MARKET.

MONDAY.—The English Funds opened with firmness at the advanced quotations of Saturday, and a fresh advance took place, which was sustained up to the termination of business. The first quotation of Consols for money was 94½ to 95, and they left off at 94½ to 95 for money, and 94½ to 95 for the account. Bank Stock closed at 208½ to 210; Reduced, 94½ to 95; Three-and-a-quarter per Cents, 95½ to 96; Long Annuities, 4½; India Stock, 22½ to 230; India Bonds, 2s. to 2s. 5s. premium; and Exchequer Bills, 1s. discount to 2s. premium.

TUESDAY.—Consols for money, which left off on Monday evening at 94½ to 95, opened at 94½ to 95, and steadily improved to 94½ to 95 for money, and 95 to 96 for the account, remaining without reaction up to the official termination of business. At a later hour the buoyant tendency was further manifested, and transactions took place for the account at 95½ to 96. This is nominally the highest price touched during the present year, although the point reached in June, when Consols were temporarily at 94½, was actually rather higher, making allowance for the circumstance of its being ex-dividend. Bank Stock closed at 208½ to 210; Reduced, 94½ to 95; Three-and-a-quarter per Cents, 95½ to 96; Long Annuities, 4½; India Bonds, 2s. to 2s. 5s. premium; Exchequer Bills, par to 2s. premium; and Exchequer Bonds, 98½ to 99.

WEDNESDAY.—Increased animation characterised the English Funds to-day, and they closed at a further advance of three-quarters per cent., making a total rise since Wednesday week of more than 2 per cent. Consols for money, which left off on Tuesday evening at 95, opened at 95 to 96, and steadily improved throughout the day, until, at the termination of business, the quotations were 95½ for money, and 95½ to 96 for the account, the market closing without any sign of reaction. Bank Stock left off at 209 to 211; Reduced, 95½ to 96; Three-and-a-quarter per Cents, 96½; Long Annuities, 4 11-16 to 4 11-16; India Stock, 22½ to 230; India Bonds, 2s. to 2s. 5s. premium; Exchequer Bills, par to 2s. premium; and Exchequer Bonds, 98½ to 99.

THURSDAY.—Consols for money were first quoted at 95½, whence they gradually receded to 95 to 96. For the account they opened at 95½ to 96, and left off at 95½ to 96. The arrangement of the foreign settlement took place this afternoon, and in the course of it a small failure was announced. Reduced left off at 95 to 96; Three-and-a-quarter per Cents, 95½ to 96; India Bonds, 2s. to 2s. 5s. premium; Exchequer Bills, 1s. to 3s. premium; and Exchequer Bonds, 98½ to 99.

FRIDAY, Twelve o'clock.—Consols 95½ to 96.

SMITHFIELD.

MONDAY, August 28.—We had a large supply of beasts, and a decreased demand, owing to the hot weather; consequently, on the average, prices were lower. The quality was by no means first-rate; choicest kinds, therefore, found purchasers, but several inferior re-mained unsold. There was a considerable increase in the number of sheep and lambs; prices were nearly the same as on Monday last, but a clearance could not be effected. Calves were lower. From Germany and Holland there were 2,127 beasts, 4,610 sheep, 261 calves, and 80 pigs; Spain, 510 beasts; Scotland, 20; and 2,600 from the northern and midland counties.

COUNTRY CATTLE.

DENBY, August 29.—The number of fat beasts was scarcely an average one, with a full attendance of buyers. The supply of sheep and lambs was large, but in little request, and several lots were driven away unsold. Fat calves were plentiful. The number of fat pigs about the same. Beef male 8d. to 6½d.; mutton, 6½d. to 7d.; lamb, 7d.; veal, 6½d. to 7d. per lb.; pigs, 3d. to 3s. 6d. per score; rough fat, 6s. 6d. per stone, commencing August 21; hides, young, 8s. and above, 3½d. per lb.; ditto, young, under 8s. 3½d.; old cows, all weights, 3d.; cut hides, 2½d.; calf skins, 10lb. and under, 4d.; above 10 and under 16; 4½d.; above 16, 3½d.; all cut calf skins, 2d. less.

MARK LANE.

MONDAY, August 28.—There was very little old English wheat at market this morning. The supply of new was liberal. Of foreign wheat and flour receipts have been moderate. New English declined 8s. per quarter upon the extreme rates of Monday last. Old English and foreign must be quoted 2s. to 3s. lower, with a slow sale. The top price of town-made flour was reduced to 55s. per sack. Barrel flour was 1s. to 2s. cheaper. Barley gave way in value 1s. per quarter. Archangel alone declined 6d. to 1s. per quarter; other sorts, being comparatively scarce, about maintained former prices. White bolling peas must be noted 3s. to 4s., and others 4s. cheaper. Beans without alteration.

COUNTRY GRAIN.

DARTFORD, August 26.—Wheat, white, old, 64s. to 74s.; ditto, red, 60s. to 70s.; white ditto, new, 64s. to 72s.; red ditto, 50s. to 58s.; harrow beans, 42s. to 46s.; mazzan ditto, 34s. to 38s.; maple peas, 36s. to 40s.; barley, grinding, 28s. to 32s.; oats, feed, 24s. to 30s.

LEWIS, August 29.—The weather for the past ten days has been of the most magnificent character, and harvest operations have thus been carried on with the greatest success, and with much vigour. We had not so large a supply of new grain at this day's market as was to have been expected, and the growers were most unwilling to submit to the "paule prices" reported from Mark Lane yesterday, nor could the millers buy at prices corresponding with this reported fall. The quality and condition of many of the samples are excellent. A few samples of barley offering, but the quality was very various, and the weather being so hot, could only be bought for grinding purposes. Wheat, 52s. to 58s.; new ditto, 48s. to 52s.; barley, 24s. to 28s.; beans, 12s. to 46s.; peas, 24s. to 32s. Averages for the week ending August 29, 1854: wheat, 434 quarters, at 62s. 11d.; barley, 17 quarters, at 30s.; peas, 11 quarters, at 40s. 7d.

SCNDELRAND, Aug. 16.—Harvest operations having commenced, the attendance at market was thin, and prices were kept up to what they were last week. The weather for the last week having been fine and hot, most of the farmers in this district have commenced shearing their grain.

WORCESTER, August 26.—Business by no means brisk, and wheat declined in value 1s. to 2s. per quarter. English, white, 8s. to 8s. 3d.; red, 1s. to 1s. 9d. per bushel; malting barley, 4s. 3d. to 5s.; grinding and distilling qualities, 4s. to 4s. 3d. per 49 lbs.; English beans, 6s. to 6s. 6d. per bushel; foreign, 6d. cheaper; English oats, 4s. 3d. to 4s. 6d. per 39 lbs.; winter vetches, 7s. to 8s. 6d. per bushel.

REGENT'S PARK, August 28.—Fine upland meadow and rye-grass hay, 92s. to 95s.; inferior, 80s. to 70s.; superior clover, 118s. to 115s.; inferior, 85s. to 95s.; straw, 34s. to 40s. per load.

HOPS.

BOROUGH, August 28.—The accounts received this morning from the plantations are still contradictory. Duty, £55,000. Market brisk, with prices improving.—Daily News.

FOREIGN.

BLACK SEA.—The loss of 330,000lb. of bread by the fire of Yarna is of some consequence to the British army. It amounts to a fortnight's consumption for the entire force. The navy has made up part of the loss by making over 100,000lb. for the use of the land forces.

MEDITERRANEAN.—A letter from Canie, dated August 12, states that coal had been discovered about nine miles from Retimo. The Governor-General had sent a specimen of it to Constantinople, and the steamers on the station had made a trial of it. The experiment is said to have been satisfactory.

TURF TALK.

"The chosen sport of a great and a free people."
OUR SAILOR KING.

According to precedent, the weights for the Cambridge-shire are usually cast higher than those for the Cesarewitch, due discretion being allowed to the handicapper in marking those horses that are presumed to shine over a longer or shorter space of ground. The general rule appears to have been observed with some of the leading animals, as we find Andover and Virago with an increase of 1lb, while King Tom, the Hermit, and the Reiver, are distinguished by 3lb. The Trapper is at the same impost for both races; but Little Harry and Adine are more favourably in for the Houghton Handicap than the Cesarewitch, the former at 7lbs, and the mare at 3lb. To follow all the discrepancies would be a work of labour, and tedious to the reader; but the sudden and rapid advance of The Early Bird to the short figure of 14 to 1 for the Cambridgeshire, in a list of 151 horses, and before the acceptances are declared, must draw attention to an incongruity that is rather startling. Early Bird was a good fourth for the Derby, and is here handicapped at 6st 8lb. Andover has, therefore, to concede to him 31lb, King Tom 31lb, and Hermit, who beat him by a head only, 20lb. So much for those who impeded the Bird's ambitious flight on Epsom Downs. Let us now see how they fare who had to follow him on that eventful day. Dervish was fifth for the Derby, New Warrior sixth, and Haspodar seventh. The benefit they reap by defeat is to be called upon to give their conqueror respectively 19lb, and 18lb. It may be argued that he has since been out and repeatedly beaten; but there are but few connected with the turf who did not feel assured that when Early Bird really plumed his wings for mischief, he would not be far off his prey. It cannot be denied that the two great Newmarket Handicaps, taken as a whole, have failed to give satisfaction; in many quarters, indeed, the strongest animadversion is expressed, and we fear that the acceptances will be much below what we had hoped to have

Warwick was very gay on Tuesday and Wednesday, and, as we predicted, has mulled no feather of its racing fame. The Queen's Guineas afforded a good contest between Kingston and Adina, the horse showing his superiority by a neck. Kingston must be one of the soundest horses in England, or he could never stand the wear and tear of so much work. The Vitellius colt, dam by Seroggin, well seconded by the Cripple, made an unexpected bit in the Short's Handicap, knocking over the favourites right and left, to the mutual joy of the fielders. The Leamington Stakes, out of an original entry of 100 horses, and with thirty-five acceptances, could only bring together the small field of nine to dispute the valuable prize. Pantomime came in first, but, on the complaint of the rider of Baalbec that he was swayed against and prevented from winning, the stewards decided that Pantomime was out of place this hot weather, and awarded the stakes to Baalbec. This was a small mortification and disappointment to the owner and backers of the former, but it will be seen that the law is imperative: "If one horse cross or jostle another, such horse (unless he is two clear lengths before the horse whose track he crosses), and every horse bringing in the same owner, or in which he may have a share, running in the same race, will be disqualified for winning, whether such jostle or cross was caused by accident or bad riding."

The Polydora colt justified the confidence of his friends who laid the odds on him, by making a clever win of the Castle Park Stakes. The Early Bird carried off the County Plate with such consummate ease, that from 40 to 1 he at once sprung to 15 to 1 for the Cambridgeshire, at which price eager takers were to be found. The Polestar amended her running at Derby last week, and won the Aym Stakes in good style; Joshua proving himself, in the same race, an unworthy descendant of the game Jericho. The Warwick Cup afforded Virago the opportunity of gallantly retrieving the laurels that were momentarily snatched from her at York. No half-mile spins for the daughter of Virginia, she requires a fair scope of ground whereon to exhibit her great speed and extraordinary power.

Doncaster displays its great attractions during the forthcoming week, and must, if the weather be propitious, ensure an immense gathering. With twenty-six races, besides a couple of matches, on the list, and the large sum of 1,600 guineas added to the already rich prizes, what lover of the turf can resist the temptation of a visit to this delightful spot? Surely, none within two hundred miles will lose the chance of taking part in such a carnival of sport. The solution of the great problem, the St. Leger, is at hand. In the absence of a horse of known superiority, the race, by many, is naturally concluded to be an open one. But we have, from the first, believed that the victory will be claimed by the Whitewall stable, and, unless The Trapper should prove himself something more than we have hitherto given him credit for, we are inclined to remain steadfast in our faith. Among the dark ones, we look in vain for a champion to sally forth who can have a chance of meeting our predilection. Calamus and Knight of St. George are both speedy horses, but the distance, we think, will be too far for them. Marsyas or Baalbec, Dr. O'Pede, Hannibal, and even Punch-box, may serve to swell the field, though with but little chance of earning distinction. We must repeat it, therefore, that we anticipate the honours of the day will fall on John Scott. Midsummer and Ivan are probably his most dangerous antagonists, though we shall not be surprised to see the White-well stable furnish both first and second. Lord Derby has not had such a prospect of enrolling his name among the owners of St. Leger victors since the time of his famous mare Canzon.

YORKSHIRE HUSSARS.—The regiment of Yorkshire Hussar Yeomanry will assemble at York, on Thursday, the 21st of September, and will be reviewed on the following Wednesday, the 27th.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 2.—In my next letter I hope to be able to give you much important and interesting intelligence; but before the storm there must be the lull, which will account for the present brief communication. To make it a little more palatable, I will conclude with an extract from a letter received yesterday from a friend in the Highland brigade:—"Here we are in a dusty, dirty place, far, far away from anything like the luxuries of life. Luckily the surrounding scenery is cheerful, or I know not what we should do, with the thermometer at ninety-six deg. in the shade, and time hastening on, but no fight. We have, it is true, a market-place established, to which the country people come in the morning with milk, eggs, geese, &c.—the geese, too, at 10s. each. All this sounds very well, but a little goose that has fed on air and water from the day of its birth, with an occasional suck at a pebble, is a poor dish for a sturdy Highlander, who has not yet forgotten the good fare of Old Scotland. I bought such a beautiful pouey for £4 at Varna. It is quite ridiculous how cheap horses are at Aladin—for £5 and £6 we get as fine creatures as we used to buy for £25 or £30 in the Standard Bazaar. No one but the experienced know the value of a good and quiet charger in a campaign. I thank you a thousand times over for the purchase you made me. I only wish you could have seen the proud fellow, as our adjutant rode him at the late review. He was the admiration of all who had the honour of seeing him. Nor must I forget the Ionian pack-saddle; £10 would not purchase it now. While others have their horses lashed galled, and their baggage falling hither and thither, I, thanks to you, am as right as a prince. There is nothing of more importance in campaigning than a good baggage arrangement. An army supplied with bad pack-saddles is in a serious dilemma, and I consider that the man who invents the best means of attaching to a horse the largest weight he can bear, renders a vast service to his country. My pack was repudiated as large and cumbersome, whereas it is light and convenient; it appears large, but that is small which is borne the easiest. But I must not be too full of rejoicing. I have had also some of the horrors of campaigning. This morning we had a most terrific rain, hail, and thunder storm, which lasted the whole of my tent was actually extinguished, and I was up to my ankles in mud and water. I need not tell you that I am most happy with my noble royal regiment, with its laconic discipline. We can't at all guess when we shall revisit Constantinople."

TATTERSALLS.—MONDAY.

Leamington Stakes.—The horses in most demand for this event were Baalbec, Pantomime, and Lurley; 4 to 1 was taken freely about the first, 10 and 8 to 1 were looked to some money about the second, and 12 and 10 to 1 taken to various sums about the third. Haro, who was in favour last week at 5 to 1, was now apparently friendless.

St. Leger.—Boardo was backed for about £500 at 2 to 1, but the outcry had not any improving effect on his position; the same odds were currently offered at the close; 200 to 50 was laid once, 5 to 1 was taken about the Trapper, with an avidity which quickly reduced the odds to 4 to 1; several commissions to back him at the higher quotation were consequently unexecuted. Acrobat continued in good force, and repeated inquiries were made after Midsummer—12 to 1 would have been taken about her. Some small investments at 20 to 1 gave Haro one more a place in the betting. 100 to 15 was taken about Hannibal. Scythian and Knight of St. George were merely talked about.

Coveseath Stakes.—D. O. was backed for most money, at prices varying from 50 to 40 to 1. The other transactions were on a limited scale.

The Derby.—St. Hubert (the Ferina colt) re-appeared at 30 to 1, taken at £100, and 1000 to 30 was taken about De Clare.

THURSDAY.

The Warwick accounts, and comparing bets on the St. Leger, chiefly occupied the attention of the few who assembled.

The betting is soon told. After 75 to 40 had been laid against Boardo, 70 to 40 was taken five or six times, and 100 to 60 once—7 to 4 was the true quotation at the close. 500 to 100, 125 to 25, and 100 to 20, twice, were taken about The Trapper; 200 to 25, twice, 160 to 20, and 80 to 10 about Acrobat; 10 and 12 to 1, to small sums about Autocrat; 35 to 25 and 35 to 25 about Midsummer; 1,250 to 50 and 500 to 20, twice, about Dervish. Ivan, Knight of St. George, and Scythian, were untouched.

For the Great Yorkshire Handicap, Rabgill advanced to 3 to 1, taken. The Derby—Cruiser was backed for £200 at 50 to 1, and St. Hubert for £300 at 30 to 1.

The case was immediately heard by the Stewards, who gave the following decision:—

"We are of opinion that Pantomime swayed against Baalbec, and thereby prevented his chance of winning; and, therefore, that Baalbec is entitled to the Stakes."

DONCASTER MEETING.—The amount of added money given at this meeting is upwards of 1,600 guineas.

Mr. ARNOLD'S HORSES.—Owing to Mr. Arnold's continued ill-health, all his horses will be sold at Tattersall's on the 16th of October, being the Monday next after the Newmarket Second October Meeting.

THE HON. ADMIRAL ROTHS has purchased of Lord Chesterfield a magnificent yearling colt, by Orlando, out of Boarding-school Miss, for the large sum of 1,200 guineas. The purchase, we understand, is for Mr. Mare, M.P., whose stud is under the management of the gallant admiral.

NANCY.—The well-known mare has left Ralph's stables, at Hinton, for John Osborne's, at Middleham, where she will be trained for the remainder of her engagements.

JACK FROST, the property of Mr. Drinkald, has met with an accident, which will incapacitate him from running in public again.

MERRY MONK was sold at York to Lord Strathmore, who has also purchased Mr. Knapton's yearling colt, The Flying Duke, by The Flying Dutelman, out of Sultana.

WARWICK RACES.—The meeting went off with great brilliancy, and reflects much credit on all concerned. The cards of Mr. W. Rose were faithfully accurate as to weights, colours, and riders; and he deserves the patronage he receives.

Lord J. Scott has named his 2 yrs old f by Cowl, out of Miami, Morgan La Faye.

YORK RACES.—Resolved,—That the winner of any selling stake or plate shall be sold by auction immediately after the race; any excess above the price named will be added to the race-fund, and all other horses entered will be liable to be claimed by the owner of any horse in the race for the price at which he is entered to be sold and the amount of the stake—the owner of the second horse to be first entitled to claim.

THE MARQUIS OF DROGHEDA'S STUD was sold in Dyer's on Saturday last, and brought the following prices:—Knowsley, gr g, 6 yrs, by Derby, dam by Barefoot, by Drone, up to 15st, a very promising steeple-chase horse (Captain Nugent), 215 guineas; York, b g, aged, by Viseout, out of a Wildfire Mare, up to 15st (Lord Clonmel), 52 guineas; Beware, ch g, 7 yrs, by Sportsman, up to 14st, winner of several steeple-chases (— Knight, Esq.), 185 guineas; Waverley, ch g, aged, up to 14st (— Allen, Esq.), 56 guineas; Westmeath, b g, aged, by Blackfoot, up to 15st, winner of seven steeple-chases (Gr. Moore, Esq.), 195 guineas; b g by Freney, 5 yrs, about 16½ hands high (Hugh O'Reilly, Esq.), 34 guineas; eh g, about 15 hands high, a good cover hack, (J. Malins, Esq.), 22 guineas; eh m, about 14 hands high, by Birdcatcher (— Syms, Esq.), 17 guineas; chesnut mare, ditto (Lord Clonmel), 24 guineas. The Hon. Samuel Crichton's stud was afterwards put up, and realised the subjoined prices: Rainbow, ch g, 6 yrs, by Barkstone, a good hunter, up to 14st (— Hunt, Esq.), 80 guineas; Freney, br g, 7 yrs, by Freney, a first-rate hunter, up to 14st (P. McEvoy, Esq.), 50 guineas; Prince, gr g, 6 yrs, by Monarch, a good hunter, up to 14st (R. D. Rea, Esq., of London), 110 guineas; Farmer, br g, 7 yrs, a good hunter (R. D. Rea, Esq., of London), 38 guineas; Ploughboy, b g, 7 yrs, a good hack (W. Haig, Esq.), 30 guineas; Flint, b g, 7 yrs, quiet to ride (R. D. Rea, Esq.), 30 guineas.

FAUGH-BALLAGH.—This famous race-horse, the pride and boast of Old Ireland, arrived in Dublin on Sunday, from Dean's-hill, Stafford, where he had been located for the last few years, and left immediately afterwards for Mr. Irwin's stables, at Rathbride-house, Kildare. We understand that, should a sufficient number of subscribers be obtained among Irish breeders, he will stand at the Curragh during the ensuing season, and thus fill up the vacuum occasioned by the absence of his own brother, the celebrated Irish Birdcatcher.

The steeple-chase horses Now-or-Never and Water-hen are advertised for sale in Belfast.

HOW TO KNOW THE AGE OF A HORSE.—The colt is born with twelve grinders. When four front teeth have made their appearance, the colt is twelve days old; and when the next four come forth, it is four weeks old. When the corner teeth appear the colt is eight months, and when the latter have attained to the height of the front teeth, it is one year old. The two-year-old colt has the kernel (the dark substance in the middle of the tooth's crown) ground out of all the front teeth. In the third year the middle front teeth are being shifted; and when three years old, these are substituted by the horse teeth. The next four teeth are shifted in the fourth year, and the corner teeth in the fifth. At six years the kernel is worn out of the lower middle front teeth, and the bridle teeth have now attained to their full growth. At seven years a hook has been formed on the corner teeth of the upper jaw; the kernel of the teeth next to the middle fronts is worn out, and the bridle teeth begin to wear off. At eight years of age the kernel is worn out of all the lower front teeth, and begins to decrease in the middle upper fronts. In the ninth year the kernel has wholly disappeared from the upper middle front teeth, the hook in the corner teeth has increased in size, and the bridle teeth lose their points. In the tenth year the kernel is worn out of the teeth next to the middle fronts of the upper jaw; and in the eleventh year the kernel has entirely vanished from the corner teeth of the same jaw. At twelve years the crown of all the front teeth in the lower jaw has become triangular, and the bridle teeth are much worn down. As the horse advances in age the gums shrink away from the teeth, which consequently receive a long, narrow appearance, and their kernels have become metamorphosed into a darkish point, grey hairs increase in the forehead, over the eyes, and the chin assumes the form of an angle.—Practical Farmer.

NORTH UNION COURSING CLUB.—The members of this club will meet at Antrim, on Wednesday, the 11th October next, when the vase and cup will be run for. The Puppy Stakes will also be run for on the occasion. The president is the Viscount Massereen and Ferrard, and the judge is Mr. Owen.

THE MOORS AND THE GROUSE.

What has been simply refreshing breezy weather here, has been boisterous and stormy on the long treeless moors dear to sportsmen. Fortunately, birds are numerous, and sportsmen are not unrewarded for the toils they encounter in pursuit of game. We have few notes of sport to give this week, but it will be seen that they all indicate abundance of birds, and from our correspondents we learn that the grouse are everywhere uncommonly strong and healthy.

Mr. Finnie and his party, at Glentworth, have shot 1,040 brace of grouse up to 26th August, being an average of 25 brace per bag every day. At Muirton, Mr. Gordon, of Nethermuir, and Mr. Burnett shot, on 22nd inst., 26 brace of grouse; and Mr. G. Gordon, on the same day, shot 21 brace of grouse and 5 brace of black game. On 23rd inst., Mr. George Gordon shot 19 brace of grouse. At Muirton, the weather having become better, the bags have increased. On the 26th, Mr. G. Gordon, on the hill of Caban, bagged 31 brace; on the 28th, with Mr. Burnett, he bagged 29½ brace; and on the 29th they bagged, on the same ground, 35 brace, besides hares, and stopped. The birds were very fine. On the 26th, Major Hirst and brother, Mr. F. Hotham Hirst, Tulloch Castle, bagged 24½ brace of grouse, 2½ brace of black game, 6 mountain hares, and 1 snipe, notwithstanding that the wind blew "great guns," and the birds were wild. Mr. Mackenzie, of Muirton, shot, at Seatwell, on 22nd instant, 3 brace of old blackcock and 1 woodcock, and afterwards had some capital angling in the river Conon. On the Carr-Bridge moors, Sir H. Wilnot, in four days' shooting, bagged 74½ brace grouse, and 5 brace black game. Mr. Bass, M.P., also in four days' shooting, had 91½ brace grouse, and 2½ brace black game. Mr. Hall, in four days, had 61½ brace grouse, and 4½ of black game. Mr. Hurrell, in two days, bagged 55½ brace grouse, and Mr. Philip, in the same time, had 45 brace grouse, 3 black game, and a roebuck. At Laggauld, the weather has interfered rather materially with the sport. On the 28th, Mr. Hall only was out, when he had 24 brace of grouse. On the 29th, the Rev. Mr. King had 36 brace, and Mr. Hall 30 brace; and on the 1st Mr. Hall had 26 brace, and Mr. King 36 brace. At the Blackwater shootings, General Sir E. Bowater had 4 brace, and 1 snipe. The Earl of March and Mr. A. Cox had 51 brace, and 2 hares. Lord Churchill, 17 brace. On the 30th the Earl of March and Mr. A. Cox had 40½ brace, and on the same day Lord Churchill and General Sir E. Bowater had 6½ brace. The Earl of March and Mr. A. Cox had 26½ brace. General Sir E. Bowater had 13 brace, 2 hares, and 1 blackcock, and Lord Churchill 5½ brace. Lord March and Mr. A. Cox had 21 brace, and 7 hares, and Lord Churchill 18½ brace. General Sir E. Bowater had 5½ brace. The same day the party went to Glenfield, where, with his grace the Duke of Richmond, they enjoyed some excellent sport at blackcock shooting.

THE FIRST OF SEPTEMBER.

The early reports heard around this city on Friday morning announced the arrival of the first of September. The birds, we believe, are much scarcer than was expected.—Hereford Times.

Partridge-shooting commenced on Friday under very auspicious circumstances—fine weather, a clear field, and no scarcity of game; and the reports of the pen that have reached us speak very satisfactorily of the success of those of the barrel. The gathering-in of the harvest at an earlier period than was at one time anticipated, had prevented the disagreeable process of postponing the sport; and from the favourable breeding season, and fine weather for the growth of the birds since, the coveys are found large and numerous, and there is every prospect of a good season's sport.—Essex Herald.

On Friday, the first day of partridge-shooting, the weather was as fine as the most enthusiastic sportsman could have wished; but in consequence of the small quantity of grain cut, the bags were not very large.—Preston Pilot.

Partridges are represented as tolerably plentiful and strong on the wing, which is doubtless owing to the very favourable hatching season.—Canterbury Journal.

In this county the birds are numerous and well grown, but it is understood that there will be but little sporting for two or three weeks on account of the harvest operations being in progress.—Newcastle Journal.

THE MOORS, &c.—Sir.—The moors have turned out better than was expected. There is disease among the grouse on some of the hills south of Dalwhinnie, between that place and Perth. The more northern moors are free of disease, and the birds plentiful and strong. Upon the whole, there are more grouse this year than last; a greater number have passed through the hands of the dealers, and a greater number of boxes have been sent through the coach-offices than last year, up to the present date. I send you an account of an extraordinary day's sport among the blue hares. On the 31st ult., six gentlemen killed on Stran's Dale Hills 1,516 head of game, of which 1,457 were blue hares (Lepus alpinus), the rest were made up of grouse, ptarmigan, plover, and snipe. The six gentlemen were—Sir R. Menzies, Bart.; John Grant, Esq., of Kilgraston; Captain Riddell; Captain Henry Drummond; Captain Wedderburn; and Hon. Colonel Lindsay.—C. F. R.

From the forests we hear of some good stalking. Sir Henry Meux has killed five stags at Dundreggan; Mr. Digby and friends, at Kinlochewe, brought down six; Sir H. Vane, two at Fort William. The Earl of Lichfield, at Strathconon, took down a splendid deer, with a royal head. Captain Baring killed one with ten points and a roebuck on the same day. Lord H. Bentinck, in the Avon Forest, brought down each day a fine stag.

During the past week, gentlemen in this quarter have had excellent sport. Mr. Haig and Mr. Thomson, on the Watten shooting, returned with good bags every day they were out. At Latheronwheel, Mr. Woolmer and party have been remarkably successful, the game being as numerous on these shootings, if not more so, this season, than for some years back. In the Thurso district accounts are equally good, and from the number of coveys of partridges started of late, some good sport is expected among those birds. In the forests, sportsmen are not doing much, and few deer or stags have been shot. On the 22nd ult., Mr. T. O. Horne shot a stag in the woods at Berriedale, and on the following day brought down another fine stag. Major Walker's party at Auchintoul, Helmsdale, have killed three deer, a stag, and a couple of hinds. Our correspondent in Lerwick, Zetland, writes:—"During the past week, notwithstanding the coarseness of the weather, a considerable number of snipe have been brought down by the guns of two young gentlemen well known in this quarter, above thirty brace being bagged besides hares. It is believed that if it were more generally known that the valleys of Zetland abound in snipe and other game, we would have sportsmen down in great numbers, as there is sufficient game to afford shooting for at least a dozen guns during the season."—John O'Groat Journal.

SIR EDWIN LANDSEER is at present visiting the Hon. Mrs. Mackenzie, of Seaforth, at Brahan Castle. On the 30th ult., along with several gentlemen, also at Brahan Castle, Sir Edwin enjoyed a day's sport among the favourite subjects of his pencil—the Highland red deer—when five fine specimens were brought to the ground.

A GOOD SHOT.—The Inverness Courier states that Mr. Monk, the son of the Lord Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol, while recently shooting on a moor which he has in Scotland, killed two deer with one shot.

THE FIRST OF SEPTEMBER.—Partridge-shooting, as usual, commenced on the first of September. We understand the birds are more numerous in this locality than has been known for many years.—Bucks Herald.

GAME generally is plentiful and strong in Oxfordshire. Foxes are also numerous, and there is every prospect of good sport for lovers of the chase and the trigger.

MR. DRAKE'S HUNT.—A MORNING at DENHAM.—On the 1st inst., commenced Mr. Drake's hounds cub-hunting season. A litter was turned up in Mr. Curtis's beans, and after an hours run, one was brought down by fifteen couple of young hounds that had not seen a fox before. The foxes are numerous in the district, and a successful season is looked for.

A PONY STUNG TO DEATH.—A very valuable pony, belonging to F. U. Pattison, Esq., of Coggeshall, was so severely stung by wasps that the poor creature died in consequence. The pony was grazing on a farm belonging to the above gentleman, and coming in contact with a wasp's nest, they fastened upon him, and the result was that he died in two days.

MARSHAM'S ELEVEN v. RUGBY CLUB.

This match came off at Rugby on Tuesday and Wednesday, August the 29th and 30th. The Rugby side was very weak, owing to several of their best players being unavoidably absent. Mr. Marsham's eleven being composed of many who rank high in the cricketing world, with Mr. Drake to boot, whose reputation as a bowler is of a first-rate character, put the Rugby side sadly off their metal, and surprised the faculties of many an old lover of the bat and ball, who one and all declared they never saw the like. Messrs. Fitzgerald and C. Fienness scored forty-nine and twenty-six; Mr. Nethercote gained twenty-one. The fielding of all Mr. Marsham's side was equal to their other play, and drew forth frequent well-deserved applause.

On the part of Rugby, the batting of C. Sawyer was splendid; but the bowling of Drake was too much for him, and, after scoring thirty-eight, he was stumped out. Smythies, after placing thirty-one and four opposite his name, was loudly applauded. C. Guppy made two splendid catches at short step. Mr. Sale scored ten and twelve, and his bowling, and that of Buchanan, told on the Rugby side. Each day was remarkably fine, and the ground was in first-rate condition. The following is the score:—

Afterwards a single wicket match was played between the three Messrs. Marshams and Mr. Fitzgerald, against T. Sale, E. Sawyer, C. Sawyer, and Mr. Jarvis. E. Sawyer run out, 3; T. M. Sale, not out, 29; useless, 5; no ball, 1. Total, 29. After two hours had elapsed, the Messrs. Marshams were obliged to go, owing to the trains, without doing the least injury to Mr. Sale's wickets, which the Rugby side evidently considered was a chalk to their club, after such a singular defeat.

LEEDS GRAMMAR SCHOOL v. THE YORK ST. PETER'S SCHOOL.

On Monday, the 28th ult., a match was played between the Leeds Grammar School and the York St. Peter's School, at York, in which, as will be seen by the score, the latter were victorious, with ten wickets to go down.

We regret to say that the fielding of the Leeds gentlemen was, with one or two exceptions, decidedly their weak point; and we would urge upon them the absolute necessity of improvement in this particular. To this, indeed, the loss of the game may be attributed; for most, if not all, the York men who made any stand were missed before they had been long at the wicket.

During the game the players sat down to an excellent dinner, provided by the kindness of the Rev. Mr. Harrison, one of the masters of the school.

It is but fair to add, that the Leeds eleven was weakened by the illness of their best player, and the absence of several others, who were unable to play.

KENSINGTON GRAMMAR SCHOOL v. OLD PROPRIETARY, BLACKHEATH.

OXFORD CITY CLUB v. UNITY CLUB.

A match of considerable interest was commenced on the Magdalen Ground, Cowley Marsh, on Tuesday, the 29th ult., between the members of the above clubs, which, at the conclusion of the day's play, resulted in a drawn game. Mr. Richard Hurst, whose long scores have been recorded in our columns during the early part of the season, exhibited some first-rate play, producing fifty-five in the first innings of the City, with the additional honour of carrying out his bat. FLY v. THETFORD.

This match was played at Thetford on Monday last, when, at the time appointed for drawing the stumps, the Fly gentlemen were declared the victors, heading their opponents 120, and one wicket to go down. Mr. Hogg, as usual, distinguished himself, and displayed some science, making fours and fives in his wonted easy style. Mr. Pigott puzzled the bowler exceedingly, himself and Mr. Hogg retaining the willow to the last, and making the ball fly in every direction. Mr. Bartlett headed the score on the Thetford side, with some good play. The following is the score:—

KIDDERMINSTER, JUNIOR, v. BROMSGROVE WORKS CLUB.

This match, played at Kidderminster, resulted in victory for the former by one innings and fourteen runs, owing to the bowling of Messrs. Kent, Wilkes, and Brewster. The Juniors had their very best team, and that of Bromsgrove was weak. They nevertheless played a most manly up-hill game in a manner which entitles them to the respect of their friendly opponents, and not one unpleasant word passed during the day. Their bowling was good, especially Mr. Hartles, and they also showed some determined fielding.

After the game, the players and friends adjourned to the Bell Inn, where dinner was partaken of, and the evening spent "right merrily."

HIGH ELMS v. SEVENOAKS VINE.

At the beautiful seat of Sir John Lubbock, the match between his eleven and the Vine Club, played annually with great success for several years past, took place a few days back, with its wonted elan. The travellers from Sevenoaks having won the toss, sent in Messrs. Larking and Northey, jnr., to the bowling of Messrs. F. Pott and F. Gosling, of that university so famous for the best cricketers, and so celebrated for good sport. The commencement promised too easy a victory to Sir John Lubbock's eleven, well chosen by his sons; but the Messrs. Aitken altered appearances, and cricket, as usual, exhibited its various phases, and the fortune of the day its accustomed changes, which mark the progress and create the interest of this truly British game, now that Scotland and the sister country invite the united to their separate capitals.

RICHMOND AMATEUR REGATTA.

This annual aquatic meeting took place on Tuesday, after an adjournment from the day originally fixed a fortnight ago.

Amateur Scullers' Race (Junior).

FIRST HEAT.

H. Bolton..... Light Blue 1
F. Stanley..... White 0

The latter was behind his time at the starting post, and the other went away without him, accompanied by the umpire. The distance was from Zion-house to Richmond-bridge.

SECOND HEAT.

J. Rackstro..... Red and White 1
F. Potter..... Green 0

The distance was the same as before, and the heat most gallantly contested. Both got away at a lively pace, and, after a few pulls, Rackstro took a slight lead, which, after a little time, he increased into a couple of lengths; then his opponent began to draw upon him, and a most desperate struggle ensued, by which, in all probability, Mr. Potter was deprived of victory. He had rowed with such effect that off the Cross he was level with his opponent, with strong symptoms of overhauling him, when, in the heat of the race, he rowed right into a barge, and was completely doubled up, fortunately sustaining no personal injury by the accident.

FINAL HEAT.

J. Rackstro..... 1
Bolton..... 2

This heat was rowed downwards from Crossdeep, Twickenham, to the railway bridge. After twenty strokes the men began to separate, and the winner ultimately won easily.

Senior Scullers' Race for a very handsome Silver Cup.

Stocken..... Red 1
Nottidge..... Blue 2

A good race for some distance; won by three lengths.

Tradesmen's Scullers' Race for a Silver Cup.

FIRST HEAT.

J. H. Clasper..... Green 1
Styles..... Red and White 0

The first-named of these is the son of the renowned Henry Clasper, of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and is engaged as a boat-builder at Salters'; the other is nephew of the proprietor of the Rose and Crown, at Putney, and cousin of the Styles whose pretensions have of late been much talked about. For very young men, which they both assuredly are, it would be difficult to imagine a better start or more plucky race. They were at work at the same moment, Styles with a slight lead, but the beautiful rowing of his opponent soon brought him scull and scull, and then into the first place. He ultimately won easily.

SECOND HEAT.

W. S. Sanderson..... Red 1
Wing..... Light Blue 0
A very hollow race all the way.

FINAL HEAT.

J. H. Clasper..... Green 1
W. S. Sanderson..... Red 0

They were only together for a few strokes, and then the winner went gradually away.

Tradesmen's Pair-oared Race for Tankards.

W. Howick and W. Thomas..... Light Blue 1
H. Lamb and J. Lamb..... Red 2

A very indifferent start was succeeded by a hollow race.

Pair-oared Gif Race for Tankards.

Nottidge and Casmajor..... Pink 1
H. P. Forster, rowswain..... Yellow 2

The winners, shortly after the start, took the lead, and kept it; but it was a very sharp and animated race right to the end.

Dingy Races for a Tankard.

FIRST HEAT.

Stocken..... Yellow 1
Nottidge..... Pink 0

Nottidge took the lead, and maintained it to the turn, where his opponent slipped in, and went in front.

SECOND HEAT.

Foster..... Pink 1
Tebdury..... Yellow 0

A smart race.

FINAL HEAT.

Stocken..... Yellow 1
Foster..... Pink 0

Won by two or three lengths.

EXETER ANNUAL REGATTA.

The regatta which came off on Wednesday week was the best in every respect which has been held for years past, not only in point of being and subscriptions, but in the general good order which prevailed on the occasion. The subscriptions came in liberally, and a handsome donation was given by the officers of the 15th Hussars towards the enhancement of the day's sports. A triumphal arch was erected in Coombe-street, and the other streets leading to the quay were gaily decorated with evergreens and flags bearing appropriate devices and mottoes. The quay itself presented an animated appearance. Booths were erected in different positions, and were well filled. Nut and cake-stands had their share of patronage, while the "marionettes" and "Punch and Judy" obtained the entire approbation of the juveniles. The vessels lying alongside were not without their occupants, who were charged the low sum of a penny for admission, as many as three hundred being at one time in a vessel of a moderate size, exclusive of a number who were in the rigging and on the yard-arms. Although Exeter cannot boast of a large expanse of water in which a sailing match might take place, still the Exonians do not think the less of their regatta because they are confined to rowing matches. This was borne out by the immense number who assembled on either side of the river—many thousands being present—who brought "plenty of grist to Mr. Edwards's mill," that gentleman being incessantly engaged the whole afternoon and evening with two large boats, conveying passengers across the ferry, the boats being crammed full, to the great discomfort of some of the weaker sex. However, all went off well without a single accident, as far as we can learn. The regatta commenced shortly after two o'clock, the preparatory and starting guns being fired from the committee boat, which was lying a few yards off the quay. The stewards were Capt. Mears, Mr. Potter, and Mr. Baker, to whom much commendation is due, as well as to the committee, for their judicious arrangements on the occasion. The mark boats were placed at Trew's Weir and a short distance above the Exe-bridge. The starting point was from opposite the committee boat, and the course was twice round the mark-boats.

The first prize was a Handsome Silver Embossed Cup, value five guineas, four four-oared gigs, not exceeding thirty-three feet in length. To be rowed by amateurs. Second boat two guineas. This was a heat race. Four boats were entered—

Fly, E. F. B. C. | Arrow, Western.
Amateur, E. A. B. C. | Maid of the Mill, Mitch. II.

The Amateur and the Arrow were the first boats to race, and the Amateur was the victor. The Fly then raced with the Maid of the Mill, and also came in first. The contest was therefore between the Fly and the Amateur. The Fly obtained the lead on starting, and maintained it throughout. The Amateur closely followed until within a short distance of the higher mark-boat, when finding no man in the boat, they at once turned and complained to the committee that they did not know which direction to take. The Fly however went round the boat and over the whole course, on completing which she was declared the winner; indeed the Amateur had before been round the mark-boat, and therefore must have known the course. The Amateur obtained the second prize.

The second race was for a prize of Three Guineas for Four-oared Ship's Boats. First boat, £1. 1s. 6d.; second boat £1. 1s.; third boat, 10s. 6d. For this race three started, and came in as below:—

Pet..... 1 | Mary..... 2 | Water Lily.... 3

The third prize was a Guinea for two-oared ship's boats, without a cockswain. First boat, 14s.; second boat, 7s. This prize was won by the Water Lily, beating the William and Sarah, and the Jane.

A fourth prize of Three Guineas, for two-oared ship's boats, was rowed for by women, dressed in white. Three boats were entered.

Charles | Charlotte | Henry

This race excited a good deal of interest. The women came from Starcross and Shaldon, and the first boat, Charles, was rowed in capital style by two old women, one of whom was above 70 years of age, named Poole, of Starcross. The Charlotte came in second, and the Henry last; they were rowed by younger and more inexperienced women than the Charles.

The fifth race was by two-oared skiffs, for a prize of One Guinea. First boat, 14s.; second, 7s. Three boats started for this prize. The following is the result:—

Water Lily.. 1 | Pride of the Port. 2 | Star..... 3

This was followed by a sculling match for a guinea. First boat, 14s.; second, 7s. This race was well contested by five boats, and was won by the Exe and the Fly. The other boats which raced were the Frigate, the Lion, and the Charlotte.

The next prize was 10s. 6d., for two punt-chases. They were both won by the Sea. The eighth was a tub-chase, which caused considerable amusement, the competitors each having had a good ducking before they could properly balance themselves. Walking a greasy bowsprit for a pig was the next performance, and was accomplished by a man named Adams. This terminated the amusements of the day. A brass band, engaged for the occasion, enlivened the afternoon with their harmonious strains.

ANGLING

PISCATORIAL PROLUSIONS.

By THE HONORABLE FLY-FISHER.

FISH-PRESERVING.

I have often thought whether or no the decrease of trout in many of our rivers may not in some measure be produced by the same cause which has been so often remarked in other branches of the animal creation, namely, the breeding in-and-in. I leave the question to be decided by more experienced physiologists than I can pretend to be. At all events, there will be little difficulty, with the aid of the appliances of modern science, in trying the experiment how far a cross with trout from different waters may not improve the quality of the fish as well as increase their numbers. In Hampshire, where the Test and Itchen run so close to each other, there would be little difficulty in transporting the full-grown fish. At all events, the young fry are now easily procurable. That there is a marked difference between the natives of the two rivers is evident to the most casual observer, and I confess it strikes me to be an experiment worth the trying. But to return to the natural causes for the decrease of fish. It would seem, indeed, if left to themselves, the propagation of the finny tribe would be so enormous as to defy any attempt to stop it, much less to exhaust the species. I conceive that I am very much within bounds when I state my belief that the roe of an ordinary trout will contain from 15,000 to 20,000 eggs. Nor is it an exaggeration to suppose that a mile of good water, such as the Itchen in many parts below Winchester affords, will contain 1,000 broods of fish. Now, suppose of these 2,000 fish one-half are spawners, and of those spawners one-fourth only breed, there would be a deposit every year of 5,000,000 eggs. Supposing, again, that of these 5,000,000 of eggs one-hundredth part alone come to maturity, there would still remain an annual increase of 50,000 young fry, and if only one in twenty-five arrived at maturity, there would still be a breed of 2,000. This, of itself, would seem sufficient to secure us against any diminution in the stock of our rivers. But when it is considered that, if this calculation be correct, there will be every year an increase in that stock in proportion to the increase of the breeders, it would seem to be hardly possible to calculate the extent to which it would have advanced in the course of ten years. But this would ensure an evil as great, if not greater, in its own way. The water, even if sufficient to contain so vast a multitude, would be utterly unable to furnish the necessary supplies for their food. The once magnificent monarchs of the stream would dwindle into mere pignoles, and at the same time would, in all probability, but not only stunted in their growth, but would even, to a great extent, lose their powers of propagation. And thus it is, that it is quite as possible to have water overstocked as understocked. I merely mention the above to give some rough idea of the fecundity of fish, before I consider the causes which have conspired to check it. The first enemy that the trout meets with after the spawn is deposited, is the rapacious appetite of other fish, especially the eel, the dace, the grayling, and, I have no doubt, crayfish. Dabchicks and moorhens, at all events the former, greedily devour the spawn; sudden floods may sweep it away; and, above all, the huge drag-nets which keepers are permitted to use, for the ostensible purpose of destroying the coarse fish (I shall say more hereafter of the use, or rather of the abuse, of these abominable engines of destruction), in places where they are sanctioned, do almost as much mischief as the combined operation of all the rest. The favourite time for this operation is in the fall of the year, just about the time that the trout are spawning; and although, no doubt, great quantities of dace and roach, where they abound, may thus be taken, yet the heavy loads at the bottom of the net, sweep over the shallows, destroy all the spawning beds, and with them the best hopes of the next year's stock. For my own part, I would suggest that if it is necessary to keep dace down, and no doubt it is desirable so to do (I know places, indeed, where they have almost exterminated the trout), and it is requisite to use the drag-net, that it should be done immediately after the weeds are cut, care being taken to throw back all the trout which might be captured at the same time; and even this should be only ventured on in the presence of some trustworthy persons, or else an indiscriminate slaughter would ensue, and the remedy be ten times worse than the disease. I could, like Hamlet's ghost, "such a tale unfold" of the wholesale destruction of fine fish, under the pretext of killing down jack and other coarse fish, as would bring tears into the eyes of a true fisherman. But, as I have said already, more of this anon. It is true, indeed, that if the spawning-places are disturbed in April or May in grayling rivers, the same mischief in the destruction of the ova will ensue as will happen to trout in October and November. But for my own part, were I the owner of a trout-stream into which grayling had been introduced, I should rather rejoice at this; the sooner the latter are exterminated, to my taste, the better. I know there are others who encourage grayling, as thereby ensuring a succession of fly-fishing all the year round. I question, however, whether this advantage is not more than counterbalanced by the injury done to the trout. The same observations will also apply to the pike. If nets are to be used at all for the destruction of these fresh-water sharks, it should be between November and March, when the fish, too, are best worth taking. Trimmers indeed may always be set in the deep still waters near beds of weeds, and such like places, with advantage, and without doing any damage.

P.S. I have pleasure in informing Mr. Adams, in answer to his letter in the last week's FIELD, that the county Roscommon, the adjoining county to Galway, has capital pike-fishing, both in Lough Ri, on the Slannon, and in the River Suck, and he will have no difficulty in getting leave to fish the latter. The former is open water.

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

RACING.

G. B.—Faugh-a-ballagh won the St. Leger and the Cesarewitch in 1854. The Baron followed the example in the succeeding year.
L. L.—Write again. We do not exactly understand your question.
Nemo.—Boiano is in neither of the handicaps.
T. A.—Pricerightler, in 1813.
Tyro.—Certainly, you have won the bet, and G. G. is bound to pay.
A. Nukeraba (Cannabornugh).—See Toby Popen's letter.
R. N.—You must search the Calendar.
T. F. D.—Apply to the publisher.
S. S. (Mammoth).—The bet is off; the horse was scratched at the time.
Edward.—You lose.
F. R. (Sheffield).—Most probably Sir Templeman.
A. A.—Doubtful.
Waterloo (Liverpool).—A first-rate chance.
Ombra.—The paragraph was copied from a contemporary. But you are quite right; Chiffney did ride Elsie in the Derby of 1814.

AQUATICS.

M. (Jersey).—The Royal Yacht Squadron (Covent) was founded in 1815.
H. (Essex).—Go to the Shoreditch Station; thence you can reach Harwich by rail, all the way. We recommend, as we did last week, "The Circus" Hotel. We have stayed there ourselves for months, and ever met with the greatest civility, combined with moderate charges.
Diogenes.—Pray read our yachting columns of last week. Your complaint is ridiculous.
G. P.—We don't know the name and address of the secretary or president of the Highgate Yacht Club. A letter, directed "The Highgate Model Yacht Club, Highgate," will be sure to reach the proper destination.

ANGLING.

K.—We shall, of course, be happy to forward any communication to the "Hampshire Fly-Fisher." If addressed to our care, at 405, Strand, Morning (Annonim).—Tuesday or Wednesday, at twelve, will suit us.
Querist.—We cannot point out any establishment where "stuffed specimens of all our river-fish" can be inspected. It would, certainly, answer the purpose to fit up a room or two for such an exhibition.

CRICKET.

G.—The Rules have been sent to you by post. On the other points, we should advise you to consult Mr. Denison, Amerton's Hotel, Fleet-street. Write to him at once.
Z.—It is quite true. Lillywhite is dead. Requiescat in pace.
S. T. S.—Either at Lord's or the Oval. Whichever you like.

POULTRY.

O.—So many letters reached us on the subject that we were compelled to answer by post. We cannot always afford space to print our replies.
D. N. (Essex).—Find the prize-list, &c., been forwarded; we should, with great pleasure, have put all in print. Surely, if publication through the columns of THE FIELD is desired, so "very advantageous," it would be no great trouble to furnish the matter. But perfectly understand this: you must give us real name and address, in confidence. "A clear stage and no favour," is our motto.

MISCELLANEOUS.

M. M.—Mr. Urquhart may be right or wrong. But THE FIELD eschews party politics; and we therefore decline to open the door to such communications as those you have enclosed to us for consideration. Apply to the editor of some daily paper. We would ourselves rather hunt a fox than a politician, though on many subjects we have personally no objection to an occasional "brush." But public duty supercedes private inclination. J. G.
L. L. D.—There are plenty of Freemasons among the Turks.
P. M. (Liverpool).—All the heads of departments on THE FIELD are "brothers." If you have not time to write original reports, cut out those in the local papers, correct what is erroneous, and, so corrected, we will most gratefully print them. We can always find in THE FIELD a niche for Freemasonry. Try us.

Invald (Peckham).—In our opinion, Hampstead, Highgate, or Camden Town, would suit you far better. Consult some West End surgeon. His opinion would be unbiased.

A Friend to THE FIELD.—Thanks for your communication. Oblige us further by asking your friend to peruse our list of agents on the last page of THE FIELD of to-day. He will there find that more than a hundred towns are regularly supplied with THE FIELD by agents alone. Why should it be "extraordinary" that a single town should buy fifty copies of "so young a paper?"

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1854.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

THE meeting of Royalties at Boulogne, this week, is the topic of immediate interest. The fetes, of which full details will be found in another portion of our journal, are by no means concluded while we write. The reception of Prince Albert by the Emperor was most cordial; and we presume that so agreeable a meeting promises, at no distant date, another, in which the duly sovereigns of England and France will take part. After the review, on Wednesday, all the French generals were presented to Prince Albert, who expressed his satisfaction at the appearance and discipline of the troops, and his hope for a continued entente cordiale between the countries. Without setting these graceful ceremonies at more than their value, it is pleasant to record such evidences that the rulers of the leading peoples of Europe see the advantage of striving to cultivate and develop the good understanding to which enlightenment points as the true wisdom of nations.

We await the decision of a council of war which has been called to consider whether, in the present state of the Anglo-French forces, the attack upon the Crimea can be attempted with hope of success. The news that the question had become one of doubt came upon the public with a disheartening effect, and was looked upon as a sad sequel to the boastful announcement, that on a certain day the expedition would have sailed. "Councils of war never fight," is an old adage, and most persons are disposed to believe that the year's campaign will close without the attack. But we learn, by telegraph from Vienna, that on the 25th of August Marshal St. Armand had issued an order of the day, acquainting the troops that the destination of the expedition was the Crimea, and that the duty of the allied forces would be to take Sebastopol as a pledge of peace. Whatever decision may be arrived at, we cannot but think that the conduct of our own Government, in suddenly publishing the announcement that the expedition was positively to sail, was unadvised. The setting forth should have been beyond all doubt before Europe was apprised of the meditated coup.

The defeat of the Turks in Asia has been, we regret to say, more decisive than was at first supposed. They have not only been utterly routed in two battles—namely, at Bayazid and Kurnkdere—but they have displayed a cowardice which was hardly to be expected. Neither army is stated to have shown "any military qualities," but the Russians were victorious; which, after all, is the most satisfactory military result. Great blame is thrown upon the English authorities for these disasters. Both in Constantinople and in London the demoralised condition of the Turkish forces was well known, and the presence of a few European troops and some capable officers would have reversed the history of the campaign. Three or four Englishmen, who were in the Turkish ranks, exerted themselves with a skill and gallantry which does them all honour, but there was no dealing with the disorganised masses; and, in a word, the vanities of St. Petersburg will, in these two instances, be justified. Owing to the advanced state of the season, the Russians, it is thought, will not follow up their Asian successes; but there is no other consideration which need stop them.

The Bomarsund prisoners have arrived, and an almost unnecessary lecture has been read by the ministerial organ on the necessity of treating them kindly. When are foreigners ever treated otherwise than kindly in England—except when Jew lawyers lock up opera-singers? We do not think that the Russian captives have much to fear, or that the remark of Mr. Lillywhite, founded on his hearing the French prisoners talk,—"French is a melancholy language,"—will be verified as regards the Russian tongue spoken here. Baraguay d'Hilliers, Napier, and the other commanders, have issued an address to the Aland Islanders, announcing that they must maintain order, and may trade with Sweden as heretofore, the blockade being raised, but that severe punishment will follow any intercourse with the enemy, or with Finland.

The Russians are under orders for the immediate evacuation of Moldavia; but, to the great indignation of the inhabitants, the Moldavian militia has been forcibly incorporated into the Russian army. The effect of the various arbitrary and tyrannical actions by which the year's occupation of the Principalities has been marked, will be favourable to Turkey, inasmuch as the conduct of the Russians has excited a fierce spirit of hatred among the outraged population.

The ravages of the epidemic with which we are now visited are very fearful, and are indisputably on the increase. The incessant labours of the medical men of London among the sick, actually prevent our having very accurate information as to the numbers who perish, for there is often no time allowed to make up the returns. But, with all the imperfect statistics which can be furnished, the startling fact is clearly established, that in last week the deaths in the metropolis were more than double what they ought to have been, according to the ordinary averages, and the excess is due to cholera. Those to whom we address ourselves are not likely to belong to the class whose dwellings and avocations increase their liability to the disorder; nor, we would hope, are they of the order of mind which suffers itself to be prostrated by foolish panic. Temperance, cleanliness, and good heart, we take to be the grand specifics against the disease, but should its premonitory symptoms appear, we advise an instant application for medical succour. As Shakspeare has it:—

Brutus is wise, and were he not in health
He would embrace the means to come by it.

The new Board of Health is doing its duty, and the mere presence of its officers in the afflicted districts is doing good in the way of encouraging and comforting the terrified population. Let a good word be said for the parish of St. Paneras, which sets an example of vigilance and energy. At the same time, it excites one's indignation to read that parochial authorities decline to interfere with sundry pestilential nuisances, because "legal difficulties" are in the way. Is it a time, when our fellow-citizens are dying like rotten sheep, to cringe before legal quibbles? If a putrescent mass cannot be removed legally, let it be removed illegally, and by the strong hand; and let the injured innocent—the miscreant who, for gain or for obstinacy, insists on poisoning his neighbours—be left to such redress as an English jury will give to such a man. There are times when the great Roman maxim, "the highest law is the safety of the public," should come into operation; and if this be not such a time, with 4,000 deaths a week in London, we know not when it can come.

The sentence of Lieutenant Perry has been promulgated. He is, virtually, dismissed the army, but is permitted to sell his commission. Lieutenant Greer is ordered to sell, and so, for the present, the matter ends. We have abstained, during the enquiry, from commenting upon the case, nor do we care now to say much upon it. The affair has given rise to a great deal of cant, much conventional morality has been talked, and much public-house indignation has been vented in illogical epistles to the journals. The case is simple. There was a great deal of bullying, horse-play, vice, and vulgarity among the 46th Bashi-bazouks, as there is in a great many other assemblies of young men, military and civil. If the system of annoyance practised upon Perry was put into play because he was of humble birth, and a poor man, whom it was, therefore, sought to expel from the regiment, no decorous words are strong enough to convey our contempt and disgust for the officers who took such a course. If, however, the assaults were merely part of the system which we know, and everybody knows, is common among young men of a certain class, when a new associate joins them, we simply think that the 46th are a parcel of vulgar fellows but that the blasting indignation which has been poured forth upon them, as if they were the inventors of harlots and horse-play, has scarcely been merited. Far more important is the question of courts-martial; and, inasmuch as the helpless and repeated blundering of the tribunals which have taken cognizance of the Perry case has given the coup de grace to the system, which must be dealt with by legislation in the very next session, great benefit to the army will ultimately be found at the bottom of Lieutenant Perry's too celebrated washing-tub.

THE ROYAL VISITORS AT BOULOGNE—AND CORPORAL SUTTON.

When, on Tuesday morning, the look-out man on the heights announced that the Victoria and Albert was in sight, the whole town turned out at once as if the rappel had sounded, and speedily every avenue that led towards the entrance of the harbour was crowded with men, women, and children, of high and low degree, on horse-back, in carriages, and on foot, all anxious to get the first look at the husband of the Queen of England. Telescopes were as numerous on the jetty as are bayonets at Honvaut, and itinerant astronomers offered peeps at the royal yacht at the modest charge of one franc a look. Street musicians twanged forth "God save the Queen" and "The Emperor's Hymn," and everything indicated the presence of some extraordinary cause of excitement. King Leopold, and his young nephew of Portugal, had brought out only the English visitors; but on this occasion the crowd was principally French, and the interest and curiosity exhibited by the spectators were quite amusing in their intensity. Everyone talked of "Prince Albert," and greedily bought up a brief biography offered at the small charge of one sous by a peripatetic book-seller, but which turned out, on examination, to contain the memoir of the Emperor of the French, and not of his illustrious visitor. Every window which at all commanded a view of the water was crowded with ladies clad in all the elegance of the French; there was of course every variety of colour present, and the brightness of the sun gave to the tints unwonted brilliancy. As the Imperial carriages came down, escorted by a squadron of the Cent Gardes, the eye positively ached while looking at the glistening cuirasses of these redboubled warriors, the gorgeous gold lace of the Guides, and the white facings of the Grenadiers. The Emperor drove down to the Quai, accompanied by the indispensable Colonel Fleury, and alighting from his carriage, awaited his royal visitor on foot. The yacht came slowly alongside, the band of the Guides struck up "God save the Queen," and the people gave a cheer which showed the rapid improvement a more intimate acquaintance with their English allies is effecting in their vocal demonstrations. Prince Albert stood on the deck in field-marshal's uniform, and surrounded by Lords Cowley and Hurdingle, the Duke of Newcastle, Colonel Phipps, and the remainder of his suite. Since the famous meeting on the "field of the cloth of gold," there has hardly been so interesting an interview between the representatives of the two mighty nations. A splendid "gangway," carpeted with scarlet cloth, and ornamented with velvet and gold, had been prepared, and as the sailors ran it into its place, the Prince followed one end and the Emperor the other, evidently with the intention of rushing up or down, as the case might be, the moment it was properly placed. The Prince, however, showed the greater activity, and running briskly down the plank, was received at the termination by the Emperor, who, with one hand on the rail, held out the other for a frank English shake hands, which was given on both sides with the greatest fervour and cordiality. At the carriage door the Prince gave way to the Emperor, but the latter was not to be outdone in politeness, and insisted on his visitor's entering first. The Prince then sat down on the left-hand side, but the Emperor again intimated that he should take the right, and all these little struggles of courtesy having been arranged, the party drove off.
